Mr. BLANCHARD. The Senator from Ohio and the Senator from Nebraska desire this claim, which has been before the Senate for the last hour and a half, to go over until to-morrow, and I ask that an order be made by the Senate that the further consideration of the bill be resumed immediately after the morning hour to-morrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BLACKBURN in the chair).

Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Louisiana? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

WASHINGTON AND GREAT FALLS ELECTRIC RAILWAY.

Mr. McMILLAN submitted the following report:

CHARLES J. FAULKNER,
Members of the Committee on the Senate.
JNO. T. BEARD,
JAMES D. RICHARDSON,
S. S. POST,
Members of the Committee on the House.

The report was concurred in.

Mr. BATE. I ask for the present consideration of the bill (S. 524) for the relief of A. W. Wills, administrator. There is no controversy about it, and its consideration will take but a moment.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to refer to the Court of Claims the claim of A. W. Wills, administrator of the late Alvan C. Gilman, who served as captain, assistant quartermaster United States Army, and brigadier-general of volunteers in the United States Army in the late war of the rebellion, for a balance of wages earned by him in the suppression of the rebellion, and during his entire time of service in the Army as a volunteer or regular, and not paid to him or to anyone for him.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LIGHTS ON FISHING VESSELS.

Mr. WHITE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House bill 7383. It is a bill relating to lights on fishing vessels, which was suggested by the Treasury Department, and has had the unanimous concurrence of the Committee on Commerce. All parties interested are desirous that it should pass. It is a general measure, and very short.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7383) relating to lights on fishing vessels.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PAYMENT OF ACCRUED PENSIONS.

Mr. PEPPER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1876) to provide for the payment of accrued pensions in certain cases.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the bill be read for information.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read for information, subject to objection.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That from and after the 28th day of September, 1892, the accrued pension to the date of the death of any pensioner, or of any person entitled to a pension having an application therefore pending, and whether a certificate therefor shall issue prior or subsequent to the death of such pensioner, shall, in the case of a person killed or dying prior to the death of such pensioner, in his disabilities or service, be paid, first, to his widow; second, if there is no widow, to his child or children under the age of 16 years at his death; third, in case of a widow, to her minor children under the age of 16 years at her death. Such accrued pension shall not be considered a part of the assets of the estate of such deceased person, nor be liable for the payment of the debts of said estate, in any case where the said pensioner or child or children and exclusive benefit of the widow or children. And if no widow or child survive such pensioner, and in the case of his last surviving child who was surviving him at his death, and in the case of dependent mother, father, or brother, no payment whatsoever of their accrued pension shall be made or allowed except so much as may be necessary to reimburse the person who bore the expense of their last sickness and burial, if they did not leave sufficient assets to meet such expense. And the mailing of a pension check, drawn by a pension agent in payment of a pension due, to the address of a pensioner, shall constitute payment in the event of the death of a pensioner subsequent to the execution of the voucher therefor. And all prior laws relating to the payment of accrued pension are hereby repealed.

Mr. COCKRELL. I reserve the right to object until I can hear some explanation of what changes the bill proposes to make in existing law.

Mr. PEPPER. I will state for the information of the Senator from Missouri and others that there has been some conflict of decisions in the Pension Office in cases of pensions which have accrued, but which the pensioner had not received at the time of his death as to how they ought to be disposed of. On account of these differences, the Pension Bureau have recommended the passage of this bill. I am informed that there are a number of cases now awaiting the action of Congress upon this bill, so that those cases may be determined in accordance with the provisions of the bill. The object of the bill is to settle ambiguities.

Mr. COCKRELL. Why is the date fixed "from and after the 28th of September, 1892," instead of the date of the passage of the act?

Mr. PEPPER. It is some time since I have examined the bill. I drew the report and copied one or two letters from the Commissioner of Pensions and also one from the Secretary of the Interior, I remember, respectively, in reference to the bill. The report shows that and I will say to the Senator all that I can state with much clearness now is that the Pension Bureau and the Interior Department both favor the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the report be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

The Secretary proceeded to read the report submitted by Mr. PEPPER from the Committee on Pensions, April 10, 1894.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask that merely the letter of the Secretary of the Interior be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.

Washington, March 29, 1894.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a draft of a bill which has been prepared as a substitute for the laws now in force disposing of accrued pensions, and to commend the same to the consideration of Congress for enactment into law.

The laws at present on the statute books relating to the disposition of unpaid pension that accrued prior to the death of a pensioner, or that might accrue upon the grant of a pension to a person who had a claim therefor pending in the Pension Office at the date of his death, are found in section 4718 Revised Statutes United States, the act of March 1, 1889, and the third and fourth provisions of the pension appropriation act of June 30, 1890.

The provisions of the laws referred to are more or less ambiguous and uncertain in terms, and admit of several constructions which have given rise to a contrary of decisions as to their meaning and application and to great difficulty and confusion in their execution, the practice of the Pension Office in the adjudication of such claims having been radically changed more than once.

In the draft of the bill herewith submitted I have endeavored to avoid the difficulties and incongruities which practical experience in their execution has shown to exist in the present laws on the subject of accrued pensions, and also to eliminate such provisions as have resulted in unnecessary hardship and injustice.

Very respectfully,

HOKE SMITH, Secretary.

Hon. JOHN M. PALMER,

Chairman Committee on Pensions, United States Senate.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HEIRS OF H. E. SIZER.

Mr. McLAURIN. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the resolution reported from the Committee on Claims in relation to the heirs of H. E. Sizer. It will call forth no discussion.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution reported from the Committee on Claims by Mr. McLAURIN on the 3d instant, which was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the claim of Eliza H. Geger and Mary Virginia Roulin, daughters and only heirs at law of H. E. Sizer, deceased, late of Jackson, State of Mississippi, represented by Senate bill No. 1406, with all the papers relating thereto, be, and the same are, referred to the Committee on Claims to find the facts, proceeding under existing laws, whether, barring all statutes of limitation, the said claim mentioned in the said Senate bill, or any part thereof, and if so, what part, is, under the laws of the United States a valid and subsisting claim against the United States.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to: and (at 2 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, August 8, 1894, at 12 o'clock m.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. PICKLER. Mr. Speaker, I desire also to enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which the yeas and nays were ordered on the question before the House at the adjournment last evening, and to have it remain pending until the Indian appropriation bill comes up to-day. I further desire to enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which the House, on the motion of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LYNCH], agreed to the conference report.

The SPEAKER. What is the number of the bill?

Mr. PICKLER. It is the Indian appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. The motion will be entered and regarded as pending when the bill is reached.

Mr. MADDOX. Mr. Speaker, I did not hear what the gentleman from South Dakota said.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Dakota entered a motion to reconsider the vote ordering the yeas and nays, and also a motion to reconsider the vote by which the conference report on the Indian appropriation bill was agreed to.

Mr. PICKLER. Mr. Speaker, perhaps we might dispose of one matter. I ask unanimous consent that the order by which the yeas and nays were ordered be vacated.

Mr. MADDOX. I suggest that the gentleman without that request until the chairman of the committee is present.

TAXATION ON NATIONAL-BANK NOTES, ETC.

The SPEAKER laid before the House an act (H. R. 4326) "to subject to State taxation national-bank notes and United States Treasury notes," with amendments of the Senate thereto. Mr. COOPER of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, the Senate amendments are all formal; none of them go to the substance of the bill, and I move that the House concur.

The SPEAKER. The amendments will be read.

The amendments of the Senate were read.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the bill be read as amended by the Senate.

The Clerk read the bill as amended.

Mr. COOPER of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the amendments of the Senate, and upon that I demand the previous question.

The previous question was ordered. The motion to concur was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. COOPER of Indiana, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate amendments were concurred in was laid on the table.

SECTIONS 2401 AND 2403, REVISED STATUTES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House an act (H. R. 7803) to amend sections 2401 and 2403 of the Revised Statutes with an amendment by the Senate thereto.

The amendment of the Senate was read, as follows:

Page 2, section 2, line 12, after "United States," insert "in the States where the surveys were made."

Mr. MCRAE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

On motion of Mr. MCRAE, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was concurred in was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE PERDIDO.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House an act (H. R. 7827) to authorize a bridge across the Perdido River between the States of Florida and Alabama with an amendment of the Senate thereto.

Mr. MALLORY. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the Senate amendment be read.

The amendment was read, as follows:

At the end of the bill insert:

"Sec. 3. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved."

Mr. MALLORY. I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. MALLORY, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate amendment was concurred in was laid on the table.

AMANDA J. LANE.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House an act (H. R. 3033) granting a pension to Amanda J. Lane with an amendment of the Senate thereto.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Can that bill be allowed to lie on the table and have the right of way to be called up in the future?

The SPEAKER. Only by unanimous consent.

Mr. MARTIN of Indiana. I ask unanimous consent that the bill lie on the table for the present with the right to be called up hereafter.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, that order will be made.

JAMES FAY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House an act (H. R. 7683) to remove the charge of desertion against James Fay with an amendment of the Senate thereto.

Mr. COOMBS. I move that the Senate amendment, which is merely an amendment of the title, be concurred in.

The Senate amendment changing the title to "An act to correct the naval record of James Fay and grant him an honorable discharge," was concurred in.

MATERIALS AND LABOR FOR PUBLIC WORKS.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 86) for the protection of persons furnishing materials and labor for the construction of public works.

The SPEAKER. The bill has been returned from the Senate with amendments, which will be read.

The amendments were read.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, I have examined these amendments; and in my judgment they tend to perfect the bill. They have also been examined by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON], the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, by which committee the bill was reported, and they have his approval. I therefore move that the amendments be concurred in.

The amendments were concurred in.

LANDS IN ARREDONDO GRANT, COLUMBIA COUNTY, FLA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following concurrent resolution of the Senate:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring). That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, requested to suspend the opening of the lands in the Arredondo grant of 25,000 acres in Columbia County, Fla., to entry under the land laws of the United States until the close of the present Congress, unless there is further legislation with reference thereto before that time.

Mr. COOPER of Florida. I ask unanimous consent that this resolution be considered and passed.

Mr. COOMBS. I should like to hear some explanation of the resolution.

Mr. COOPER of Florida. This resolution simply proposes to suspend any disposition of the lands referred to until Congress can consider the question. This section of our State has been settled by a farming community, and is covered with their homes. It was settled long before I was born. There has been a recent decision of the Interior Department affecting the titles of these lands; and we simply wish to withhold the lands from entry under the public land laws until Congress can consider what may be proper legislation to be adopted with reference to the subject.

Mr. MCRAE. I hope the resolution will be considered and adopted.

The being no objection, the House proceeded to consider the resolution; and it was concurred in.

On motion of Mr. COOPER of Florida, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

GUARANTEE COMPANIES.

Mr. HILL. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 4954) relative to recognizances, stipulations, bonds, and undertakings, and to allow certain corporations to be accepted as surety thereon.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read for information.

The Secretary read the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill called up by the Senator from New York?

Mr. PALMER. Mr. President, the bill is a most remarkable one. I think it deserves greater consideration than it can receive in the morning hour. I have no disposition to object to its present consideration, but it will certainly cause debate, because debate is necessary before the bill can be passed.

Mr. HILL. This bill has passed the House of Representatives, and there can be no objection to its consideration.

By unanimous consent the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. HILL. Pending the discussion of the bill the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] would like to have a private bill passed, and I consent.

ENOCH DAVIS.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator from New York yields to me for a moment, as I desire to have the bill (S. 1688) for the relief of Enoch Davis put on its passage at this time. I assure the Senator from New York it will lead to no debate.

By unanimous consent, the bill (S. 1688) for the relief of Enoch Davis was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the proper accounting officers of the Government to liquidate and settle the claim of Enoch Davis, late member of Company G of the Sixth Regiment of Iowa Volunteer Infantry, for pay and bounty; and appropriates $300 for the payment of the amount that may be awarded to him on account of the claim.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MOUNT VERNON ELECTRIC RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 7006) to authorize the Washington, Alexandria, and Mount Vernon Electric Railway Company to extend its line of road into and within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask that the amendments reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia be considered as they are reached in the reading of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill. The first amendment reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia was to strike out section 1, as follows:

That the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Electric Railway Company, a body incorporated under the laws of the State of Virginia, be, and it is hereby, authorized to construct and lay down a street railway with the necessary switches, turn-outs, and other mechanical devices, in the District of Columbia, through and along the following routes:

A main line commencing on B street between Sixth and Seventh streets northwest, at a point to be designated by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, thence westward along B street to Seventeenth street, thence northward on Seventeenth street to E street, and thence westward on E street to the Potomac River, thence across the Potomac River by a suitable steam ferry or transfer barge to Annapolis Island, thence across said island to that part of the arm of the Potomac River known as Little River, and thence across said Little River by a suitable steam ferry or transfer barge to the dividing line between the District of Columbia and the State of Virginia.

Also a branch from the intersection of B and Fifteenth streets northwest along said Fifteenth street to the intersection with Pennsylvania avenue.

Also a branch from the intersection of B street and Fourteenth street northwest along Fourteenth street to the Long bridge.

And the said company is hereby authorized and empowered to construct and maintain at the foot of E street and New Hampshire avenue, and on Annapolis Island, the necessary landings and slips for the operation of a ferryboat or transfer steamer, and a slip for the operation of a transfer steamer, said landing and slip to be constructed on plans approved by the Secretary of War. The necessary land at the foot of New Hampshire avenue and E street for ferry slip and landing may be leased to the said company by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia at such rental and on such terms as said Commissioners may agree upon with said company. The said company is also authorized and empowered to construct, maintain, and operate a double-end steamboat or transfer barge for the transfer of its cars. These routes may be modified or extended by the will of Congress, and the said railway company shall comply with such modifications or extensions.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

That the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Electric Railway

Company, a body incorporated under the laws of the State of Virginia, be, and it is hereby, authorized to construct and lay down a double track street railway with the necessary switches, turn-outs, and other mechanical devices, the number and location of which shall be approved by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, said street railway to be constructed and laid down through and along the following routes:

Commencing on B street, between Sixth and Seventh streets northwest, at a point to be designated by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, thence westward along B street to Thirteenth-and-a-half street, thence northward on Thirteenth-and-a-half street to E street by single track, thence westward on street to Fourteenth street, on a single track, thence southward on Fourteenth street, using the tracks of the Belt Line Street Railway, to the Potomac River, thence across the Potomac River by a suitable ferry or transfer barge to the Virginia shore, where the privilege of a double track on B street from Thirteenth-and-a-half street, connecting with the Belt Line Street Railway tracks at Fourteenth street.

And said company is authorized to construct its road across the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad at or near the Long Bridge, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

And the said Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Electric Railway Company is hereby authorized and empowered to construct and maintain, after acquiring title to the same, at the foot of Fourteenth street, a necessary landing and slip for the operation of a ferryboat or transfer steamer, said landing and slip to be constructed on plans approved by the Secretary of War, and to use an overhead wire for a distance of not exceeding 400 feet, commencing at the extreme southern end of the slip.

And said company is also authorized and empowered to construct, maintain, and operate, subject to the approval of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, a double-end steamboat or transfer barge for the transfer of its cars, with all the modern improvements for the safety and protection of its passengers: Provided, That the said company be authorized to condemn for its use for said landing and slip, as provided for in this act, a space not exceeding 150 by 200 feet.

Mr. McMILLAN. I have one or two slight amendments to offer to the bill, and I desire to inquire whether I shall offer them as the reading proceeds or wait until the reading is concluded?

Mr. FAULKNER. I think the Senator had better propose his amendments as the reading proceeds, while we are acting upon the amendments reported by the committee.

Mr. McMILLAN. On page 3, in line 12, section 1, where the amendment reads "commencing on B street, between Sixth and Seventh streets northwest," I move to amend by striking out "Sixth and Seventh," and inserting "Seventh and Eighth." Seventh street is very narrow at that point, and it will answer the purpose if the railway company brings the railroad to that point, and move to amend the amendment of the committee in that way.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend the amendment reported by the committee, in section 1, line 12, page 3, after the word "between," by striking out "Sixth and Seventh," and inserting "Seventh and Eighth."

Mr. FAULKNER. That is right.

Mr. McMILLAN. I move to amend the amendment to agree to.

Mr. McMILLAN. In line 38 of the same amendment, I move to strike out the word "approval" and insert "supervision."

Mr. FAULKNER. There is no objection to that.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated. The SECRETARY. In line 38 of the amendment, after the words "subject to the," it is proposed to strike out "approval" and insert "supervision;" so as to read:

And said company is also authorized and empowered to construct, maintain, and operate, subject to the supervision of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, etc.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I ask that that part of the bill which has just been read touching overhead wires be again read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PASCO in the chair). The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

Said landing and slip to be constructed on plans approved by the Secretary of War, and to use an overhead wire for a distance of not exceeding 400 feet, commencing at the extreme southern end of the slip.

Mr. HALE. On which side of the river will this be?

Mr. FAULKNER. On the Washington side, at the southern end of the street, the extreme limit of the slip extending out into the river, which does not bring the overhead wires at all in the view of the public, but on private property.

Mr. HALE. What is the necessity of this intrusion of overhead wires when we can do without them?

Mr. FAULKNER. The reason for it is that this line of railway runs by overhead wires on the Virginia shore and by an underground cable on the Washington side, but in order to get the cars off the ferryboat overhead wires have to be used to connect the cars with the underground cable. The company has a certain limited extent on private property, where the company will have to purchase to bring the cars from the boat to connect with the underground cable.

Mr. HALE. Do the overhead wires cross any street?

Mr. FAULKNER. Oh, no. The wires are merely from the end of the slip, so as to connect with the underground line.

Mr. HALE. They cross no street?

Mr. FAULKNER. No.

Mr. HOAR. Would it not be safe, I suggest, to the Senator from Maine, as there is objection to overhead wires on the public streets, to provide that they shall only be placed on private property?

Mr. VALE. I think that is a good suggestion.

Mr. FAULKNER. I think with the limitation of 400 feet the provision as it stands is perfectly safe, certainly with reference to any of the public interests. I do not know what amount of land in which the company could acquire there, and whether it might not be necessary, in order to connect with the underground system, to go somewhat on the public road, but certainly at that point in the city it could do no harm under any circumstances. This point is right at the banks of the river, where, as I understand, it is only a distance of 400 feet from the extreme southern end of the slip, which is the end running into the river.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMILLAN] and I were very careful in drawing this bill, and we tried to guard it in every way. I am satisfied that no public interest and no policy of the Senate will be affected by any of the provisions.

Mr. HALE. The committee ought to jealously scrutinize every proposition to place overhead wires in this city.

Mr. FAULKNER. I fully concur with the Senator in that, and I agree with him in that policy. I think the Senator will find that we have examined this subject with great care and inserted every limitation he would himself suggest if he had examined it.

Mr. HALE. I would insert the words "for the purpose of connection," to show that the overhead wires are to be used only for that purpose.

Mr. FAULKNER. I have no objection to that.

Mr. HALE. After the word "and," in line 34, I move to insert "for the purpose of connection;" so as to read:

And for the purpose of connection to use an overhead wire for a distance of not exceeding 500 feet.

Mr. FAULKNER. I think that is exactly the meaning of the language as it stands.

Mr. HALE. I desire to have it clearly defined and stated that it is to be for that one purpose. Let the amendment be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The SECRETARY. In line 34 of the amendment to section 1, after the word "and," it is proposed to insert "for the purpose of connection."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 4, line 4, after the word "pattern," to insert "and" and subject to the approval of the District Commissioners;" so as to make the section read:

Sec. 4. That the said railway shall be constructed in a substantial and durable manner; and all rails, electrical and mechanical appliances, conductors, stations, etc., shall be of approved pattern, and subject to the approval of the District Commissioners.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 5, line 15, after the word "be" to insert "used or" and in line 16, after the word "constructed," to strike out "or" and insert "nor steam power;" and in line 16, after the word "Washington," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That the tracks of said road shall not be used for the transportation of any cars other than those used for the transportation of passengers on street railways.

So as to make the section read:

Sec. 5. That the said corporation shall at all times keep these lines between the tracks and rails, and the exterior thereto, in such condition as the Commissioners of the District of Columbia or their successors may direct, and whenever any street occupied by said railway is paved or repaired, or otherwise improved, the said corporation shall bear all the expense of improving the streets above described. Should the said corporation fail to comply with the orders of the Commissioners, the work shall be done by the proper officials of the District of Columbia, and the amount due from said corporation shall be collected as provided by section 5 of the act entitled "An act providing a permanent form of government for the District of Columbia," approved June 11, 1878. But no overhead wires shall be used or constructed, nor steam power used within the limits of the city of Washington. Provided, That the tracks of said road shall not be used for the transportation of any cars other than those used for the transportation of passengers on street railways.

Mr. McMILLAN. In line 15, section 5, after the word "constructed," I move to insert "except as hereinbefore provided."

Mr. FAULKNER. I was just going to offer that amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 5, line 15, after the word "constructed," it is proposed to insert "except as hereinbefore provided;" so as to read:

But no overhead wires shall be used or constructed except as hereinbefore provided.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McMILLAN. In connection with the amendment just adopted, after the word "nor," in line 15, I move to insert the word "shall," and in line 16, before the word "used," to insert the word "be;" so as to read:

Nor shall steam power be used within the limits of the city of Washington.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I ask that the entire provision be read as it stands, beginning in line 14, after the date "1878."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

But no overhead wires shall be used or constructed, except as hereinbefore provided, nor shall steam power be used within the limits of the city of Washington. That the tracks of said road shall not be used for the transportation of any cars other than those used for the transportation of passengers on street railways.

Mr. HALE. That is right.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 9, line 8, after the words "operation of," to strike out "cable motor, electric, pneumatic, or other railroad," and insert "street railway;" so as to make the section read:

Sec. 9. That it shall also be lawful for said corporation, its successors or assigns, to erect and maintain, upon private grounds, at such convenient and suitable points along its lines as may seem most desirable to the board of directors of the said corporation and subject to the approval of the said Commissioners, an engine house or houses, boiler house, and all other buildings necessary for the successful operation of a street railway.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 10, line 1, before the word "said," to strike out "main line of the," and in line 3, after the word "act," to strike out "and the branches of the same shall be completed within two years from the passage of this act;" so as to make the section read:

Sec. 10. That the said railway company shall be commenced within one year and completed within two years from the passage of this act.

Mr. HUNTON. I call the attention of the Senator from West Virginia to line 1, of section 10, which reads:

That the said railway company shall be commenced within one year.

It ought to be "the said railroad."

Mr. FAULKNER. Yes. I move, after the word "said," in section 10, line 1, to strike out the words "railway company," and insert the word "railroad;" so as to read:

That the said railroad shall be commenced within one year and completed within two years from the passage of this act.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 11, line 1, after the word "run," to strike out "public carriages" and insert "street railway cars;" in line 2, before the word "cable," to insert "underground;" after the word "cable," in the same line, to insert "or;" in line 3, after the word "electric," to strike out "or other mechanical;" in the same line, after the word "power," to strike out "but nothing in this act shall allow the use of steam power in locomotives;" and in line 5, after the word "Provided," to strike out "further;" so as to read:

Sec. 11. That the said company may run street railway cars propelled by underground cable or electric power. Provided, That for the purpose of making a continuous connection over the route hereinbefore described and designated the said company shall have the right to cross all streets, avenues, and highways which may be hereafter created.

Mr. McMILLAN. In section 11, line 1, after the word "company," I move to strike out the word "may" and insert the word "shall."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 11, line 1, after the word "company," it is proposed to strike out "may" and insert "shall;" so as to read:

That the said company shall run street railway cars, etc.

Mr. FAULKNER. There is no objection to that.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I ask the Secretary to read the provision in section 11, as it will read if amended as proposed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

That the said company shall run street railway cars propelled by underground cable or electric power.

Mr. HALE. I think it should read "underground cable or underground electric power." I move to insert the word "underground," after the word "or," in line 3, and before the word "electric."

Mr. FAULKNER. There is no objection to that, though I think it is covered by the language which is used.

Mr. HALE. As it is left, it very clearly will be a debatable question whether the electric power shall be overhead or underground.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Maine will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend the amendment of the committee in line 3, after the word "or," by inserting "underground;" so as to read:

That the said company shall run street railway cars propelled by underground cable or underground electric power.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 12, line 10, after the word "dollars," to insert "for each day said failure occurs;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 12. That the said company shall furnish and maintain passenger houses as required by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia and shall place first-class cars on said railway with all the modern improvements for the convenience, comfort and safety of passengers, and shall run cars as often as the public convenience may require in accordance with a time table approved by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia. In case of failure to comply with the conditions of this section shall render the said corporation liable to a fine of $50 for each day said failure occurs, to be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction at the suit of the Commissioners of said District.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. In section 12, line 2, after the word "houses," I move to insert the words "and transfer stations."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The SECRETARY. In section 12, line 3, after the word "houses," it is proposed to insert "and transfer stations;" so as to read:

That the said company shall furnish and maintain passenger houses and transfer stations as required by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. In line 3, after the words "District of Columbia," I move to insert the words "but no such passenger house or transfer station shall be built upon the public streets or side walks or upon public property." I want to save the public reservations. If the railroad company erect houses or stations they should put them on private property and pay for it.

Mr. FAULKNER. There is no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The SECRETARY. In section 12, line 3, after the word "Columbia," it is proposed to insert "but no such passenger house or transfer station shall be built upon the public streets or side walks or upon public property."

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 15, line 4, after the word "expenditures," to insert "within the District of Columbia;" and in line 12, after the word "made," to strike out "at the specified time or;" so as to read:

SEC. 15. That said company shall, on or before the 15th of February of each year, make a report to Congress, through the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, of the names of all the stockholders therein and the amount of stock held by each, together with a detailed statement of the receipts and expenditures within the District of Columbia, from whatever source and on whatever account, for the preceding year ending December 31, and such other data as may be required by any general law of the District of Columbia, which reports shall be verified by the affidavit of the president and secretary of said company, and if said report is not made within ten days thereafter, the failure shall be held to operate as a forfeiture of the privileges and rights hereby granted to said company, and it shall be the duty of the Commissioners to cause to be instituted proper judicial proceedings therefor, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 16, line 2, after the word "passenger" to insert "including transportation to the Virginia shore;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 16. That said company shall receive a rate of fare not exceeding 5 cents per passenger, including transportation to the Virginia shore; and the said company may make arrangements with all existing railway companies in the District of Columbia for the interchange of tickets in payment of fare on its road. Provided, That within the limits of the District of Columbia six tickets shall be sold for 25 cents.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 17, line 12, after the word "dollars," to strike out "to be paid by the company;" so as to read:

The person or persons offending shall forfeit and pay for each such offense not less than twenty-five nor more than one hundred dollars, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair announces that the morning hour is closed, and the Calendar of General Orders under Rule IX is in order.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask that the Senate proceed with the consideration of the pending bill. The reading is almost through. There are but two pages remaining.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The reading of the bill will be proceeded with.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, in section 18, line 4, after the word "constructed" to insert "at its own cost;" and in line 5, after the word "railways," to insert "under the supervision and control of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 18. That the said company shall have the right of way across such other railways as are now in operation within the limits of the District of Columbia, and to hereby authorize to construct, at its own cost, its said road across such other railways, under the supervision and control of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia; Provided, That it shall not interfere with the travel of such other railways in such construction.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 20, line 6, after the word "exceeding," to strike out "one hundred and;" and in line 7, after the word "instituted," to strike out "in the usual way in the supreme court of the District of Columbia, under such rules and regulations as said court may prescribe for such purposes," and insert "under the provisions of chapter 11, Revised Statutes, relating to the District of Columbia;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 20. That in the event the company should not be able to come to an agreement with the owner or owners of any land through which the said road may be located or pass, proceedings for the condemnation for the use of the company of so much of said land as may be necessary for the said road, which may be instituted under the provisions of chapter 11, Revised Statutes, relating to the District of Columbia; Provided, That any property owner shall have the right of trial by jury in any such issue.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FAULKNER. I will state that section 21 was inadvertently left in, I suppose by the printer. It applies to a route which was stricken out by the committee and is not in the bill. I therefore move that section 21 be stricken out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from West Virginia to strike out section 21.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FAULKNER. Section 22 should be changed so as to be section 21.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerks will make the necessary changes in the numbering of the sections.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was to strike out section 23, in the following words:

SEC. 23. That said company shall have the right to carry parcels, farm and dairy products on its line in the city, and nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit the transportation of other freight between points in the State of Virginia and its landing at the foot of E street and New Hampshire avenue.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to the end of section [23] 22.

Mr. HALE. How does this provision, in what is now section 22, accord with the proviso put on as in Committee of the Whole, at the end of section 5, on page 6:

Provided, That the tracks of said road shall not be used for the transportation of any cars other than those used for the transportation of passengers on street railways.

Mr. FAULKNER. It accords with it exactly. The Falls Church Railroad is a street railway. It comes in just to the south of the Arlington grounds, and strikes this road just about at the point where it will have a branch up to Arlington. We wish for the convenience of the people there to bring in that street railway over this same track, with all the limitations and conditions, as the Senator will see, which we impose upon this road.

Mr. HALE. The reading of the bill, to anyone not informed, would convey the idea that the Falls Church and Potomac Railway Company is a general railway company.

Mr. FAULKNER. Oh, no; it is not.

Mr. HALE. It is a street railway?

Mr. FAULKNER. A street railway.

Mr. HALE. But it is not so entitled.

Mr. FAULKNER. It is not entitled. This is its corporate name.

Mr. HALE. If the Senator from West Virginia is certain about that, I shall make no point of it.

Mr. FAULKNER. I am certain about it.

Mr. HALE. The provision, then, grants nothing but a desirable connection with another street railway company?

Mr. FAULKNER. The Senator from Maine will see that the latter clause of this section applies to that road all of the limitations, conditions, and restrictions, after it gets to the District of Columbia, that we put upon this road.

Mr. HALE. I perceive that that is done by the provision in the latter part of the section.

Mr. McMILLAN. I will state to the Senator from Maine that the object of the committee has been to bring in all of these suburban lines on one track where it can be done, and to avoid a multiplication of the number of tracks on the streets.

Mr. HALE. I think that is right.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, at the end of section [23] 22 to insert as a new section:

SEC. 23. That should the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Electric Railway Company fail or refuse to construct a double-track street railway on the Virginia side of the Potomac River to the Arlington Reservation and provide accommodations for the necessary travel from the city of Washington to Arlington within one year from the approval of this act, then the right, powers, privileges, and franchises conferred upon said company by this act within the jurisdiction of the District of Columbia shall be, and the same are hereby, forfeited.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was concluded.

Mr. HALE. I ask the Senator from West Virginia to go back with me to section 1, line 12, whether the route that the road is to follow in the city is given.

Commencing on B street, between Sixth and Seventh streets northwest.

Mr. FAULKNER. Between Seventh and Eighth streets northwest. We changed that.

Mr. HALE. Between Seventh and Eighth streets northwest. Where is that with relation to the present station of the Pennsylvania Railroad?

Mr. FAULKNER. The station is on Sixth street, and this is the very wide cobblestone street just back of the market. The object and purpose of this line is to get to the market.

Mr. HALE. Then it does not go so far easterly as the Pennsylvania Railroad station?

Mr. FAULKNER. It commences a block from the Pennsylvania station, just back of the market.

Mr. HALE. —

Thence westward along B street —

That is the cobblestone street.

Mr. FAULKNER. Yes, sir.

to Thirteenth and a-half street.

Mr. FAULKNER. That is a very inferior street, if the Senator knows it. It is one we could not hurt by putting anything on it.

Mr. HALE. It is a street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets.

Mr. FAULKNER. Between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets.

Mr. McMILLAN. It is Thirteenth-and-a-half street.

Mr. FAULKNER. Yes. The road is to come up that street with a single track.

Mr. HALE. It is between the two streets, Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets.

Thence northward on Thirteenth-and-a-half street to E street, by a single track.

How near to Pennsylvania avenue is the point where Thirteenth-and-a-half street reaches E street?

Mr. FAULKNER. It can not be said that it is a block, because, as the Senator will remember, the reservation commences on the east side of Fourteenth street right at the avenue. Just that reservation separates it from the avenue. We contemplate, in the ultimate arrangement of these street railways, as I dare say the Senator from Maine has heard, that the route of the Fourteenth street cable road shall be changed, so that it will run up Fourteenth street from Pennsylvania avenue. There we propose to have the transfer station, so as to relieve the congested condition of Fifteenth street. The proposed road will then run along E street, which is south of the little reservation, to Fourteenth street, where the Belt line runs, after having come across Pennsylvania avenue from E street, north of the avenue.

Mr. HALE. But it is all below Pennsylvania avenue.

Mr. FAULKNER. It is all below Pennsylvania avenue. Then it uses the tracks of the Belt line down to the Potomac.

Mr. HALE. I should think, from my recollection of the location, that coming up E street anywhere westerly of Thirteenth would bring the road pretty near the avenue.

Mr. FAULKNER. That little reservation merely separates it.

Mr. HALE. That is all?

Mr. FAULKNER. Yes, sir.

Mr. McMILLAN. I will state to the Senator from Maine that the power house of the Washington and Georgetown Railroad Company is right at the corner of Thirteenth-and-a-half and E streets. Thirteenth-and-a-half is an old-fashioned little street, and is not used much except for the trucks of the Washington and Georgetown Railway. In fact, it is hardly used at all. It does not come to the avenue. There is a very wide space there.

Mr. HALE. All below the avenue?

Mr. FAULKNER. All below the avenue.

Mr. McMILLAN. The company wanted to come up Thirteenth street and touch the avenue, and we declined to grant permission to do that.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. FAULKNER. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Presiding Officer was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. FAULKNER, Mr. HARRIS, and Mr. McMILLAN were appointed.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had, on the 3d instant, approved and signed the act (S. 2150) to provide an American register for the steamer Oceano, of New York, N. Y.

The message also announced that the President of the United States had, on the 6th instant, approved and signed the act (S. 1468) for the relief of James L. Townsend.

UNIFORM SYSTEM OF BANKRUPTCY.

Mr. GEORGE. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate take up the bill (H. R. 4609) to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. PLATT. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made.

Mr. GEORGE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill, notwithstanding the objection.

Mr. PLATT. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allison,	Faulkner,	Jones, Ark.	Patton,
Bate,	Frye,	Kyle,	Perkins,
Berry,	Gallinger,	Lindsay,	Platt,
Blackburn,	George,	Lodge,	Power,
Brice,	Gordon,	Mace,	Proctor,
Camden,	Hale,	McMillan,	Roach,
Chandler,	Harris,	Menderson,	Sherman,
Cockrell,	Hoar,	Merritt,	Shoup,
Coke,	Higgins,	Mills,	Test,
Cullom,	Hill,	Mitchell, Wis.	Velie,
Davis,	Hoar,	Murphy,	Walsh,
Dixon,	Hunt,	Palmer,	Washington,
Douglas,	Jarvis,	Pasco,	White.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-two Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The question recurs on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Mississippi that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bankruptcy bill. [Putting the question.] The ayes appear to have it.

Mr. HOAR and Mr. HIGGINS called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GEORGE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. GORDON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON].

Mr. MITCHELL (of Wisconsin) (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. PALMER (when his name was called). The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH], with whom I am paired, is absent from the city. I therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. PATTON (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. GIBSON].

Mr. VILAS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL]. If he were in the Chamber I should vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I inquire if the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDESON] has voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not voted.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I do not know how the senior Senator from Nebraska would vote, and therefore withhold my vote. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. McMILLAN (after having voted in the affirmative). I the requirements of public-building bills. I appeal to gentlemen on this side of the House not to allow their personal interests to dominate the general interest and impose additional taxes upon the people.

Since I came into this Hall a few moments ago Representatives—most excellent gentlemen, for whom I have the highest respect—have come to me and said: "I must get my bill through, because it is essential to my interest in my district." I have heard the same plea from the other side. I appeal again to Democrats on this side. With a depleted Treasury, with the gold reserve down to $50,000,000, with the gold reserve and the current revenues of the Government aggregating less than $100,000,000, I appeal to you, in this condition of the Treasury, to postpone these demands upon the people of the United States.

I do not intend, Mr. Chairman, to interpose factious opposition against these measures. It is possible that I may feel constrained to make the point of "no quorum" against some bill which I consider peculiarly unmeritorious. But I prefer not to take that course. I believe that the majority ought to control. The object of the appeal which I now make is simply that Democrats around me may not press these demands upon the Treasury at a time when millions of our people are out of employment.

Gentlemen, these bills that you propose to pass will do you no good in your campaigns for reelection. Those gentlemen on the other side of the Chamber—adroit, shrewd, and able—will parade these figures in the campaign as an evidence of the profligacy of a Democratic House and a Democratic Congress in times of great financial stringency.

In view, therefore, of the Treasury condition, with $50,000,000 already added to the interest-bearing debt of the country, I again ask Democrats to be true to their pledges and withhold their demands upon the Treasury until prosperous times shall return.

Mr. GROSVENOR rose.

Mr. DOCKERY. I yield to the gentleman a moment.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I wish to suggest to the gentleman that there is about an equal amount of danger that these bad men over here will parade the fact that the Democratic party is in control of carrying on the ordinary incidental business of Government.

Mr. DOCKERY. I do not know what those "bad men"—and that expression, let it be remarked, is the gentleman's own language and not mine—may say. But if the "bad men," to whom the gentleman refers, indulge in that comment, I feel warranted in the assertion that they would be departing from a maxim of a great leader of the Democratic party, when he said on a certain occasion: "Tell the truth." [Laughter.]

Mr. HOUTER. What was the truth he wanted told?

Mr. DOCKERY. Oh, well, he wanted the truth told. That is sufficient.

I think, Mr. Chairman, when we reach the end of this session, the legislation of the Fifty-third Congress will be a sufficient answer to the suggestion of the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. SICKLES. Well, let us come to a vote now. We have agreed on a tariff bill.

Mr. DOCKERY. I am very glad to hear it and hope the House will concur.

Mr. ROBINSON of Pennsylvania. I would like to ask the gentleman from Missouri a question. I advocated one of the bills, and voted for several of them, for the erection of public buildings here, and I do not think that that action is such as would justify the charge, or warrant the assertion, that I was indulging in profligacy or extravagance in voting away the public money. Is it not a fact, however, that the appropriation for the erection of these buildings will not come out of the present Treasury fund, but that it will be carried forward into the future, to be paid for out of appropriations hereafter?

Mr. DOCKERY. That is true.

Mr. ROBINSON of Pennsylvania. Yet you speak of the workman being out of employment. Is it not true that the erection of these buildings in every city where there is a necessity for a public building will give thousands of the unemployed work?

Mr. DOCKERY. Well, the gentleman's own statement answers itself. In one breath he tells us that these bills make no present charge upon the Treasury, but that the amount is to be carried forward to be paid hereafter, and in the next breath he tells us that the working people are to derive employment from the erection of these buildings. How are they to be employed or to be paid when there is no appropriation?

Mr. ROBINSON of Pennsylvania. I say that the appropriation is carried forward into the future. It is not made in the bills.

Mr. DOCKERY. Does the gentleman consider it a wise business policy to pursue such a course as that at a time when the Treasury is nearly empty? Is that a policy that the gentleman himself would pursue in the ordinary course of his own private affairs? The gentleman knows that we have borrowed money to pay the ordinary running expenses of the Government.

Mr. ROBINSON of Pennsylvania. No, sir; I would not consider it good policy; but I think the Government of the United States is big enough, strong enough, and able enough to appropriate all the money that is needed for such a purpose as this, and that there will be little or no trouble in securing all of the money that is necessary to carry on the affairs of the Government.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I move that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. DOCKERY) there were—ayes 115, nays 16.

Mr. BLACK of Georgia. No quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of no quorum being made, the Chair will order tellers.

Mr. BLACK of Georgia and Mr. BANKHEAD were appointed tellers.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or other wise, a site, and to cause to be erected thereon a suitable building including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices in the city of South Omaha and State of Nebraska, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $200,000.

No money shall be used for the purpose mentioned until a valid title to the site for said building be conveyed to the United States, nor until the State of Nebraska shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the grantee of the proposed site, and the same shall be subject to the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

The building shall be unexposed to danger from fire by an open space of at least 40 feet to each side, including streets and alleys.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following amendment:

Mr. BANKHEAD. I move the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the report.

[Cries of "Vote," "Vote."] Mr. SNODGRASS. Let the report be read.

The report (by Mr. MERCER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 109) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building at South Omaha, Nebraska, submit the following report:

South Omaha is the third largest city in Nebraska. Ten years ago not a town lot in sight; to-day 15,000 people enjoy the privileges of its protection and through its busy thoroughfares.

South Omaha is the third largest stock market in the world. The packing houses employ 5,000 persons, paying them in one year almost $3,000,000. Over 1,000,000 hogs and 500,000 cattle killed in 1892.

The stock yards cover an area of 75 acres. South Omaha continually grows, her industries are varied and prospects great.

Mr. SNODGRASS. I would like to hear the remainder of that report read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is informed that the entire report has been read.

Mr. SNODGRASS. I would like to have some explanation, then, of this bill.

Mr. HAINES of Nebraska. The report explains it.

Mr. SNODGRASS. There is very little explanation contained in the report.

Mr. MERCER. The report is very full, if the gentleman will examine it.

Mr. DOCKERY. There are certain letters accompanying the report that have not been read.

Mr. SNODGRASS. They form a part of the report. I move, Mr. Chairman, that the committee be discharged.

LOUIS PELHAM.

Mr. TURPIE. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 1589) for the relief of Louis Pelham.

The Secretary read the bill.
Mr. PALMER. I dislike to object to the bill, but I shall be obliged to the Senator from Indiana if he will explain it.

any member has the right, at any time during the proceeding before the House, to suggest that a quorum is not present, whereupon it is the duty of the Chair to cause a count to be made and if there is no quorum then a call of the House must be had or an adjournment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will suggest to the gentleman from Indiana that while he may have some reason to believe that to be the practice of the House, the opinion of the Chair is positive that such is not the custom.

The Chair will make the further suggestion that if the gentleman from New Hampshire had first demanded a division, and on a count no quorum had voted, then his point of no quorum could have been made.

For he did not do that. He undertook to make the point of no quorum when the point could not be made. The gentleman therefore lost his opportunity, and the Chair announced that on the vote the decision of the Chair had been sustained as the judgment of the committee.

Mr. BUNN. I ask unanimous consent to say to the gentleman from New Hampshire that I have no sort of objection to his being heard, and if I can get an opportunity I will bring up the bill at another time, so that he can be heard. But inasmuch as to-day is set apart for a special purpose, I am instructed by the committee that if any claim is seriously fought to withdraw it. The gentleman from Maine and the gentleman from New Hampshire will have an opportunity hereafter.

Mr. REED. I want it distinctly understood that I am not in any way fighting or opposing the bill, but only as a matter of duty stating the facts within my knowledge. It may be that Congress, upon examination, may think the court did such an injustice that it ought to right it.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I move that the committee now rise.

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the noon session had to be held.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Division.
The committee divided; and there were—ayes 26, noes 40.
So the motion was rejected.

HENRY HERMAN.

Mr. BUNN. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (H. R. 6235) for the relief of Henry Herman.

The bill was read as follows:
Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to refund to the lawful heirs of Henry Herman, late a citizen of the State of New York, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $2,515.54, with interest thereon from day to day, the same to be received by them in full settlement for all duties and taxes lawfully assessed and paid into the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. BUNN. Mr. Chairman, at the request of my colleague on the committee [Mr. CAMPBELL] I call up this bill, and I yield to him.

Mr. CAMPBELL. The report of the committee speaks for itself.

The report, by Mr. BUNN, was read, as follows:

That committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 6235) for the relief of Henry Herman, have considered the same, and find the facts stated in the report of the Committee on Ways and Means in the Forty-seventh Congress.

Your committee therefore adopt the said report and I recommend the passage of the bill.

[House Report No. 1621, Forty-seventh Congress, first session.]

That a companying bill proposes to refund to Henry Herman, a citizen of New York, the sum of $2,515.54, that being the amount paid by him for duties erroneously assessed and collected on woolen goods imported by the firm of Herman & Co., of which firm Henry Herman was the senior partner in April, 1867. The facts on which this claim for refund is based are these:

On March 18, 1867, Herman & Co. imported into the port of New York a certain lot of woolen goods, the value of which was $100,000. On Saturday, March 23, 1867, an entry of these goods was made at the custom-house March 23, 1867, and the rate of duties stated in such entry was thirty cents per yard on the goods, and on the 24th of March, 1867, the entry was liquidated April 3, 1867, at the rate of duties imposed by the act of March 2, 1862, enacted "An act to provide increased revenues from duties on wool and woolen goods."

Under date of May 21, 1866, Messrs. Herman & Co., by their attorneys, filed a protest against these duties upon the act of March 2, 1862, on the ground that the same were excessive and that the liquidation was made and until after the importer, as a duly entered and paid duties on their goods on goods of June 10, 1864. Due notice of the liquidation of the entry at the custom-house was given to the importer, and the importer, having been duly notified ten days after liquidation of the entry, as required by section 5 of the act of March 2, 1862, the Treasury Department declined to refund the duties. The preceding statement of facts is taken from a letter of the Secretary of the Treasury, dated March 30, 1880.

The act of March 2, 1862, under which the increased duties were exacted, and which purports to have received executive approval on March 2, was in fact approved on Monday, March 4, as the records of Congress show, the legislative day beginning on Sunday, March 3, having been extended to Monday, March 4, under the provisions of an act of Congress. The Secretary of the Treasury, in a letter reviewing this case, dated March 30, 1880, says:

The following facts may be considered as established:
"First, that the liquidation was complete on March 2, 1867.
"Second, that the bill bearing date March 2, 1867, was not approved until March 4, 1867, and therefore was not a law until that day; and,

"Third, that, therefore, as a matter of fact, the goods in question were subject to duty under the act of March 2, 1862.
"While there is no dispute as to the legal right of the goods to entry and liquidation under the lower rate of duties imposed by the act of June 30, 1864, it appears that, in consequence of the failure of Messrs. Herman & Co. to protest in due time, the excessive rate of additional duties upon the act of March 2, 1862, was paid by them. Your committee are of opinion that the failure to enter protest within the time prescribed by law should not, exclusively, be put to the refund of the duties by reason of their having failed to do so, as it is admitted by the Secretary of the Treasury that the Government has no legal claim to excessive import duties imposed by the act of March 2, 1862.

In reference to the failure to enter protest within the prescribed period, it appears that the business partner of Henry Herman & Co., as Messrs. Herman, who attended to the custom-house duties, if the firm of Henry Herman & Co. was suffering from mental derangement when the importation in question was made, although this fact was not apparent to his business partner and friends at the time, and that the duty was levied by custom officials. These facts, in the opinion of your committee, should remove any technical obstacle that may exist touching the failure to enter protest within the period prescribed by the statute.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I understood from the reading of the report that this claimant did not protest and appeal as required by law. It has been the universal practice of Congress, so far as I know, to refuse favorable action on bills where the protest and appeal are lacking; and, therefore, I move that the bill lie on the table.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I hope that motion will not prevail, so that the friends of the bill may have an opportunity to explain it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New Hampshire moves that the bill be laid on the table—

Mr. REED. The Committee of the Whole has no table.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair was going to suggest that the Chair presumed that the intent of the gentleman was to move that the bill be reported to the House with the recommendation that it lie on the table.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I move that the bill be reported to the House with the recommendation that it lie on the table.

Mr. BUNN. I suppose that is debatable.

The CHAIRMAN. Certainly.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I desire to be heard.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair had recognized the gentleman, and he expressed the hope that the question would not prevail, and he concluded that the Chair did not intend to defeat the gentleman's opportunity to be heard.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, in answer to the gentleman from New Hampshire, I would state that I do not think his argument is sound on the question under consideration. The facts are simply these: We were living under a tariff law that existed from 1864 until 1867. A law had passed both branches of Congress on the 2d of March, 1867, but had not received the President's signature, and therefore it was not the law until the 3d of the month. In the meantime the collector of the port, or the people who had charge of that branch of the business, insisted that this party should pay excessive duties under a law which had not yet been signed by the President. He demurred to that at the time, and in the meantime these gentlemen in the firm who had charge of the custom house branch of the business—

Mr. KILGORE. I can not hear what the gentleman says.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Oh, yes, you can.

Mr. KILGORE. The gentleman says that the firm committed suicide, and during the unfortunate troubles of the firm they failed to comply with this requirement within sixty days.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Ten days.

Mr. CAMPBELL. And the result was that this party had to pay this duty; and the only way in which he can be reimbursed is to obtain an enabling act from Congress. That is all there is of it.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I should like to ask the gentleman from New York if in his belief the excessive duty upon these goods caused the suicide of this man's partner?

Mr. CAMPBELL. I would not be surprised; but I can not tell. I was not there at the time, generally.

Mr. KILGORE. I would like to ask the gentleman a question, if he will yield to me?

Mr. CAMPBELL. Certainly.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Can the gentleman give the committee any precedents where Congress has relieved a claimant under circumstances where a protest was not made or an appeal taken?

Mr. CAMPBELL. I cannot at this time, but I know that there are cases, and there are suitable cases, so that kind pointing, I think it is only right that equal justice should be dealt out to all people on the same basis.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. With the understanding that the gentleman from New York will retire to the house these precedents at some future time, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my motion.

The CHAIRMAN. It does not require unanimous consent. [Cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. CAMPBELL. The gentleman from North Carolina, the chairman of the committee, has charge of this bill; but as I have been making an explanation, I move that the bill be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

Mr. KILGORE. Before the motion is put I would like to understand what is meant there by paying this amount to the legal heirs of a particular individual?

Mr. CAMPBELL. I think I have fully explained the matter. One of these people committed suicide.

Mr. KILGORE. I could not hear a word of what was said, or the report when it was read; and I would not be inclined to let this claim go through this evening with the meager information that the committee possesses. If the committee votes against it, I would have no objection. [Laughter.]

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman was serious in his remarks I would make further explanation. The bill has received the unanimous approval of the Committee on Claims in former Congresses. It has been thoroughly investigated by our committee, and has its unanimous favorable recommendation.

Mr. KILGORE. I want to inquire of somebody I can hear [laughter] whether or not this claim—

Mr. CAMPBELL. If the gentleman will not get angry, I will buy a speaking trumpet for him.

Mr. KILGORE (continuing). Whether or not this claimant has not forfeited his right by his own laches, by failing to make a protest, or by paying the duties under protest. If he had paid them under protest he could go to the Treasury Department and they would have the matter investigated, and if they found the facts as they have been stated, the Treasury Department would have refunded his money without any occasion for this party to come to Congress.

Mr. BUNN. I want to say to the gentleman that the proof in the case shows that the partner of this gentleman, whose duty it was to attend to these matters, was insane. It was not found out until afterwards.

Mr. KILGORE. But it was as much the duty of the one to do it as it was of the other to do it.

Mr. BUNN. I am just speaking now about the custom. This protest was not made in time, but the Department has recommended the payment of this claim, and it is absolutely just.

Mr. KILGORE. Who recommends the payment?

Mr. BUNN. I do not remember now.

Mr. KILGORE. Is it in the RECORD?

Mr. BUNN. No; it is not printed there, because the RECORD is very voluminous, but it is in the file room.

Mr. KILGORE. Is there any reference in the report to the fact that the Department has recommended it?

Mr. BUNN. No, sir; but I state it as a fact.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Now, if the gentleman from Texas will just keep quiet! He has my best wishes in his convention to-day, and I hope he will be renominated. [Laughter.]

Mr. BYNUM. Mr. Chairman, this claim is similar to a much more meritorious one which was presented by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MAHON] and was rejected. There was no protest in this case under the law, and therefore there is no legal right. The gentleman who favors this claim [Mr. CAMPBELL] belongs to a party which believes that every importer pays a duty adds that duty to the price of the goods. Now these importers, if they paid a high duty, added it to the price of their goods and collected it from the consumer, so that they have been long since reimbursed, and it is ridiculous for them to come in now thirty years afterwards with this claim. [Laughter.]

Mr. CAMPBELL. That is nonsense.

Mr. KILGORE. Mr. Chairman, following up the suggestion made by the gentleman from Indiana, I want to say that on this side of the House our Republican friends believe that the foreigner pays the duty. Therefore this man is not out nothing, and therefore he is not entitled to any reimbursement. [Laughter.]

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. CAMPBELL, that the bill be laid aside to be reported favorably to the House, the Chairman declared that the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. BYNUM. I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 52, nays 37.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. No quorum.

Mr. BUNN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw this bill, and then I will move that the committee rise and report to the House the bills that we have passed upon favorably.

There was no objection.

The bill was accordingly withdrawn.

Mr. BUNN. I move that the committee rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BAILEY, from the Committee of the Whole, reported that they had had under consideration various bills, and had directed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments.

BILLS PASSED.

House bills of the following titles, reported favorably from the Committee of the Whole House, were severally taken up, the amendments (if any) concurred in, the bills ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed; and motions to reconsider the several votes by which the bills were passed were respectively laid on the table:

- A bill (H. R. 1075) for the relief of Merrill Denham;
- A bill (H. R. 5368) for the relief of H. W. McConnell;
- A bill (H. R. 526) for the relief of Joseph Haxthausen;
- A bill (H. R. 2842) to reimburse George C. Tanner, late consul, etc.;
- A bill (H. R. 7603) for the relief of Charles DeLay; and
- A bill (H. R. 507) for the relief of J. E. Merriam.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. HOPKINS of Pennsylvania, for this day, on account of sickness.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. PEARSON, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles: when the Speaker signed the same:

- A bill (H. R. 2699) making an appropriation and providing for the construction of a United States revenue cutter for service in the harbor of San Francisco, State of California;
- A bill (H. R. 4954) relative to recognizances, stipulations, bonds, and undertakings, and to allow certain corporations to be accepted as surety thereon;
- A bill (H. R. 5901) to reimburse E. H. Nebeker, late Treasurer of the United States;

A bill (H. R. 6415) to provide an immediate revision and equalization of real-estate values in the District of Columbia, also to provide an assessment of real estate in said District in the year 1896 and every third year thereafter, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 6577) to authorize the construction of a wagon and foot bridge across the Chattahoochee River at or near the town of Columbia, Ala.;

A bill (H. R. 6913) making appropriations for current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 7874) to enable the Secretary of the Interior to pay John T. Heard for professional services rendered the "Old Settlers" or Western Cherokee Indians out of the funds of said Indians.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. BOATNER. Mr. Speaker, I am instructed by the Committee on Pacific Railroads to ask that that committee be discharged from further consideration of the bill (H. R. 7878) to facilitate and expedite legal proceedings by the United States and other creditors against Government-aided railroad companies, their officers, stockholders, and the trustees of their mortgages; and that the bill be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.
The House then, on motion of Mr. BUNN (at 4 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.), adjourned.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

By Mr. McRAE, from the Committee on the Public Lands: A bill (S. 447) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to issue a duplicate of a certain land warrant to Emma A. Ripley. (Report No. 1394.)

By Mr. PICKLER, from the Committee on Indian Affairs: A bill (H. R. 7648) for the relief of Kate Eberle, an Indian woman. (Report No. 1395.)

By Mr. TAWNEY, from the Committee on Pensions: A bill (H. R. 7129) granting a pension to Henry Schnetberg, of Indiana, Pa. (Report No. 1401.)

A bill (H. R. 7468) for the relief of William T. Holman. (Report No. 1405.)

By Mr. MORGAN, from the Committee on Military Affairs: A bill (H. R. 7937) granting an honorable discharge to Adam Hand, in lieu of a bill (H. R. 955) of the same title. (Report No. 1406.)

west longitude, in Oklahoma Territory, and located within the territory leased from the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes in the year 1855, and ceded in 1866, and for other purposes.

The bill H. R. 839 for the relief of B. D. Greene was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

EVERY D. BABCOCK AND WIFE.

Mr. DOLPH. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (S. 744) for the relief of Avery D. Babcock and wife, of Oregon, which has been reported from the Committee on Claims. It will lead to no discussion, I think.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to pay to Avery D. Babcock, of Polk County, Oregon, and to Margaret L. Babcock, his wife, $2,000, to be equally divided between them, in full payment of their claim against the Government of the United States for the use and occupation by the United States of their donation claim.

Mr. PLATT. I should like to hear some explanation of the bill.

Mr. DOLPH. Avery D. Babcock and wife, under the donation law of the 27th of September, 1850, took up a donation claim in the Willamette Valley. The wife was entitled to one-half of it, and that is the reason why she is named in the bill. In 1856, after they had occupied and improved it for several years, Gen. Hazen selected it as the site of Fort Yamhill, and it was afterwards also embraced in an Indian reservation, and they were deprived of the use of it for about ten years. Afterwards the fort was abandoned, and the lines of the reservation were limited so that this was excluded, and the land was patented to them. This is the lowest estimate of all the parties, so the committee says, for the use and occupation of the United States, and for being deprived of the use of the land for some ten or twelve years.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PROPOSED EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. GRAY. Pursuant to notice, I now move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Delaware that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. HILL. I should like to offer a resolution, if the Senator from Delaware will allow me.

Mr. GRAY. I should like to oblige the Senator from New York, but, under the circumstances, I must insist on my motion. Several other Senators this morning have asked me to yield, and I have been compelled to decline.

Mr. HILL. Is the motion to proceed to the consideration of executive business in order at any time?

Mr. GRAY. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHERMAN. Debate on such a motion is not in order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Debate is not in order. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. HILL. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PLATT (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. HUNTON], and withhold my vote.

Mr. QUAY (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN], who is not present. If he were here I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the negative). I am paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE], who is not present, and withdraw my vote.

Mr. QUAY. As I stated when my name was called, I have a general pair with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN]. The absent Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES] is also absent. I transfer my pair with the Senator from Alabama to the Senator from Nevada, and vote "nay."

Mr. DIXON. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. McLAURIN], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. CAHEY (after having voted in the negative). I am paired with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. MITCHELL], and withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 21, nays 32; as follows:

So the question was not agreed to.

THE REVENUE BILL.

Mr. HILL. I offer a privileged resolution. I submit the resolution which I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the conferees on the part of the Senate, who are now considering the differences between the two Houses on House bill, number one, entitled "An act to reduce taxation, to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes," be, and they are hereby, requested to report to the Senate if they are at any time to come to an agreement, and if not, to report to the Senate, and also to report the principal items of disagreement, so that the Senate may take action thereon.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is upon the resolution submitted by the Senator from New York. [Putting the question.]

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, it is perhaps proper that I, as one of the conferees on the part of the Senate, should say that the representatives of the majority party of the two Houses have for many days conferred. We have encountered serious difficulties, and it is proper to say that up to this moment we have reached no agreement. There are serious differences of opinion in respect to at least three items in the bill. Possibly, if agreements could be reached as to those, other items might be agreed to; but the items of sugar, of coal, and of iron ore, are all three items in respect to which serious differences of opinion have been entertained and various propositions have been made pro and con, but no one of them has as yet proved quite acceptable to the conferees. We are still at variance, no agreement having been reached. This much it is perhaps due to the Senate that I should say.

Perhaps I need not refer to the various other items of difference; they are somewhat numerous; but, as I said before, I should indulge a strong hope, if the three things which I have mentioned were agreed upon, that we might reach agreements upon all other matters. But my associates on the committee know quite as well as I in regard to this subject, and I should be glad if they would make any statement they might desire.

Mr. SHERMAN. I should like to ask the Senator from Tennessee, through the Chair, whether in his judgment the tariff bill is now before the Senate for such action as the Senate chooses to take?

Mr. HARRIS. Upon the contrary, in my opinion, it is most certainly not now before the Senate for the action to which the Senator refers.

Mr. SHERMAN. It does seem to me that the resolution—

Mr. HARRIS. I mean only, Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me, that I, as one of the conferees, have made a statement of facts to the Senate. The conference committee has submitted no report, nor would the conference committee undertake to submit a report until it had invited the Senator from Ohio and his associates to sit down with us and determine what report we should make.

Mr. SHERMAN. I understand the Senator to say that the tariff bill is not now before the Senate. It seems to me, therefore, that the resolution now pending is premature. Until we can have something to set upon, it is scarcely worth a while for us to take up a resolution such as is proposed. I shall therefore object to the consideration of the resolution. ["No," "No," "No!"]

I waive the suggestion for the present; but I do not wish to enter into a moot-court discussion. Let us have something before us that is tangible.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not understand clearly what the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] proposes. If I heard aright the resolution as offered by him, it is a resolution to state the conferees on the part of the Senate to state the prospect of an agreement, the differences between the two Houses, and to report either an agreement or a disagreement. I think the resolution should be modified; and therefore I move its modification, so that the conferees be instructed to report a disagreement if they can not agree.

Mr. President, the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] very properly, I have no doubt, states that there are great difficulties ties surrounding the differences, and I, as one Senator, should be glad to know the propositions which have been made and those which have been rejected on one side or the other. If the conferees had had a meeting, as is usual with conferees, it would be legitimate for me to inquire or for any Senator to inquire of the Senator from Tennessee as to the details of the differences; but inasmuch as this proceeding has been going on in an entirely informal way, and has partaken rather of the nature of secret and friendly conferences between members of the same political party, I do not feel that I have any right to inquire of the Senator from Tennessee, under the present situation, whether or not the obstacles to agreement are obstacles which present themselves through the conferees on the part of the House Representatives or whether they are obstacles which can be removed by some intimation or suggestion from the Senate itself to the Senate conferees.

Mr. President, we, I submit, are in no condition to make an inquiry as to the real situation between the conferees, because, for myself, I should not feel that I could properly inquire whether the conferees on the part of the House of Representatives are obstinate as to the suggestions and propositions which I understand, at least from the newspapers, have been made repeatedly by our conferees to the House conferees as to these differences. Therefore, it seems to me until these differences in the conference committee are unfolded, unless the Senators who are and have been in these conferences are willing to state the difficulties, we are not in a position to inquire of them what the differences are.

The conference having now been for nearly three weeks engaged in the discussion of this question, I think we ought to exact from our conferees either that they report an agreement or that they report a disagreement, so that we may know in this Chamber what are the troubles as to this great bill now hanging between the two Houses. I should be glad if the Senator from New York would so modify his resolution or accept my suggestion of amendment that the conferees shall either report an agreement or a disagreement in order that the two Houses may have unfolded to them in all the details the differences which now exist between the two Houses upon the tariff bill.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. President—

Mr. ALLISON. I offer the amendment, and I hope the Senator from New York will accept it.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President—

Mr. GRAY. One moment, if the Senator pleases. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. What is the present status of the resolution?

Mr. HILL. It is before the Senate.

Mr. BERRY. Subject to objection.

Mr. GRAY. I ask the Chair.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution proposed by the Senator from New York.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President—

Mr. GRAY. Has the request for unanimous consent been put to the Senate? I object to the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. ALDRICH. I suggest that the objection is too late. An amendment has been offered and the resolution has been discussed on both sides of the Chamber.

Mr. GRAY. The discussion has been proceeding by unanimous consent.

Mr. HILL. In the first place, I desire to suggest that that is not the case, and, in the second place, that after the resolution has been proceeded with for fifteen minutes it is too late to make the objection.

Mr. GRAY. The debate has been proceeding by unanimous consent.

Mr. BERRY. An objection will lie to the further consideration of the resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will answer the parliamentary inquiry of the Senator from Delaware. When the resolution was presented by the Senator from New York, with the request for present consideration, the Chair submitted to the Senate the question as to whether there was objection to the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. ALLISON. I so understood.

Mr. GRAY. I did not hear it.

Mr. VILAS. That certainly was not heard here.

Mr. ALDRICH. It was heard everywhere.

Mr. GRAY. The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS], as a member of the conference, proceeded by unanimous consent to make a statement.

Mr. HILL. That was when the Presiding Officer was putting the question on agreeing to the resolution. Then the Senator from Tennessee rose and desired to make a statement before it was carried.

Mr. MANDERSON. The "aye" vote had been taken on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. HILL. Yes, sir; and nearly everybody said "aye." Mr. MANDERSON. Then the Senator from Tennessee rose and was recognized.

Mr. BATE. But the noes were not called.

Mr. RANSOM. The Reporter can determine that question at once by reading his notes of what took place.

Mr. BERRY. An objection can be made at any time.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, am I not entitled to the floor?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has not yet answered the parliamentary inquiry raised by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY].

Mr. HILL. I submit that the proper time to raise an objection to the consideration of a resolution of this character is at the beginning. My recollection is that the Chair asked whether there was objection to the consideration of the resolution. There was none. Then the Chair proceeded to put the question on agreeing to the resolution. He called for the ayes, and was just about to call for the noes, when the Senator from Tennessee desired to make a few remarks, as he had a right to do.

Mr. HOAR. I wish to make a suggestion to the Chair. As I understand the matter, the Chair submitted the request for unanimous consent, and it was granted. Then the Chair put the question on the resolution, and the ayes answered. The ayes having answered, the Senator from Tennessee rose, as is the custom in the Senate, and addressed himself to the resolution, the noes not having been called for, and the result of the vote not having been declared. Now the Senator from New York has taken the floor.

I submit to the Chair that if that be the fact, it is altogether too late now to place the resolution by objection. The Senate has given consent for its present consideration, and the question on its adoption was put after that consent was given. If that be not the fact, the record of the stenographer will show.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair desires the record to be read. The recollection of the Chair is that the Chair submitted to the Senate the question as to whether there was objection to the consideration of the resolution offered by the Senator from New York. The ruling of the Chair will be deferred until the record is read.

Mr. VILAS. Will the Chair oblige me by permitting me to make one suggestion in reference to the matter?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will hear the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. VILAS. If the proposition was submitted to the Senate, it certainly was not heard at my desk or by my immediate neighbors. The methods of business in the Senate have not been so exact heretofore with respect to these also, final compliances with technical rules that an important resolution like the one proposed by the Senator from New York should be crowded upon the Senate in haste and against the will of the members of the body who would like to consider it, as the rules provide, and especially not upon any misunderstanding.

But I was about to call attention to the fact that the rule does not particularly limit to the instant of proposal the necessity for objection. Rule XIV says:

Whenever a bill or joint resolution shall be offered, its introduction shall, if objected to, be postponed for one day.

That is the first clause. The fifth clause is:

All resolutions shall lie over one day for consideration—

That is, this resolution—

unless by unanimous consent the Senate shall otherwise direct.

Mr. HILL. Will the Senator from Wisconsin allow me for a moment?

Mr. VILAS. In one moment. I am sure that if in the confusion existing in the Chamber the invitation of the President of the Senate for objection was not heard, it was not to be considered as against the objection of many Senators on the floor as a forclosure and consent on their part. There ought to be no misunderstanding, no snap judgments, no nice and finical adherence to technical rules in a body like this, and no surprises, as the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. RANSOM] well says.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I do not propose to beg the question, as I think the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS] does. The resolution must be treated in the same manner as any other motion pertaining to the business of the Senate is treated. It is entitled to no more favors and no more consideration than any other resolution. The Senate ought to be permitted once in a while to do what it wants to do. If the Senate desires to pass the resolution, it ought to be entitled to the right to do it, and no finical, technical objection ought to be raised by a Senator to prevent the Senate from passing upon the resolution; and the same facility, sir, is upon the other side. I therefore submit to the Senate that the resolution, which pertains to a most important subject pending before this body, ought to be discussed and disposed of. The Senator from Tennessee did not ask unanimous consent to make his remarks, the irresistible duress of a force inevitable. It is a present necessity, a burning and pressing question of flint and eyes of flame, that may not be bidden down, that will not be evaded or avoided. It is the duty of our appointees upon the committee of conference to agree. That is their office and function. They were appointed to agree, not to divide or to sever; and as they were appointed to agree, I believe it is appointed, destined, predestined, that they shall and must agree. They are as free to agree as they are to confer.

Therefore I am in favor of preserving the present status and retaining the bill in conference. What will disagreement be? It will be, sir, to court in advance defeat, disaster, and discomfiture; it will be to turn back the hands on the clock of progress and reform for the period of another generation.

Disagreement is the unpardonable political sin, not to be forgiven in this age or the next. I have not allowed myself as yet to conceive or imagine that there is to be a final disagreement in conference.

Mr. President, my proposition is one which may cost some self-sacrifice, which will call for the exercise of pure patriotism, of self-denial, of disinterestedness, but it will cost no Senator any feeling of political consistency or any shadow of reproach. The proposition is, sir, that the majority conferees upon this committee tender to the Senate their resignation as conferees and let the Chair appoint their successors. Similar action must follow elsewhere. No one will be appointed here who is not a friend of the bill, the bill after its enacting clause and subsequent to its title, that bill which is to be written. As to conditions and terms of unanimity no one will be appointed from this Chamber who is not in favor of legislation, legislation now, to repeal the present law and to abolish protection and its monstrous brood of trusts and monopolies.

It is a mere usage of the Senate to appoint only members of the Finance Committee upon such a committee of conference. Any Senator is just as legally competent to serve in that position as those who are now serving. Those gentlemen have served honorably, nobly; they have done the country and the Senate great service, invaluable service; they have reduced the scandalous discrepancy between the two Houses to the minimum of difference, and that is a very great work. There they stand like sentinels, and why like sentinels may they not be relieved? Why should they not welcome relief from this protracted vigil of labor and endurance?

I have no doubt of the fate of an enactment reported by the conference committee formed either in this way or the present mode. I have no doubt it will become the law. It will be a measure of relief, comfort, and reform within the lines of Democratic principle and policy; it will be a measure for which every Democrat in either House may vote, and it will be a measure that no Democrat anywhere in the Republic need discourage or disavow.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, the question before the Senate, as I understand it, arises upon the resolution offered by the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] and the amendment proposed. I shall not attempt to inquire into the parliamentary proposition which has been debated to some extent. I prefer to let the matter rest for some little time to come. I find nothing definite regarding it in the Silurian epigrams miscalled the rules of the Senate. Whenever we are confronted with the actual question of order suggested by the Senator from New York, I shall call upon those whose long experience in the Senate enables them to tell us what the Senate has been in the habit of doing in that regard.

The resolution itself, disavowed from the amendment proposed this morning, will bear rewording in the light of the bill command which I propose to make:

Resolved, That the conferees on the part of the Senate who are now considering the differences between the two Houses on House bill 484, being an act entitled "An act to reduce taxation, to provide revenue for the Government and for other purposes," be and they are hereby requested to report to the Senate—

As I understand it, the Senator from New York designs to modify the resolution so as to make the report imperative. He has eliminated the request. Am I not right?

Mr. HILL. Yes.

Mr. WHITE. The resolution continues:

to report to the Senate if they are likely to come to an agreement.

They are ordered to report if they are likely to come to an agreement; and, if not, to report to the Senate a disagreement. They are instructed to report to the Senate if they are likely to come to an agreement; and I presume the resolution means that if, in their opinion, they are not likely to come to an agreement, then they shall report a disagreement.

In a parliamentary sense it is absolutely impossible that the gentlemen who constitute the conferees on the part of the Senate can unaided report a disagreement. They may come into this body with the declaration "we can not agree with the gentlemen who represent the House of Representatives." But our conferees can not of themselves report a disagreement. The disagreement must result from the failure to act of those who represent both Houses, and must under all parliamentary rules not only represent the opinions of both sets of conferees, but must likewise bear the signatures of those assenting to it—a majority of each committee. I presume, however, that the object of the Senator from New York is to bring about such a condition of things that the various gentlemen composing the committee of conference on the part of the Senate shall arise here, or report here in some mode, their belief as to the probability of an agreement.

Mr. President, while it is true that a majority of the committee of conference is composed of members of the Democratic party, we must not forget that there is a minority representing the other side. We were told when this resolution was introduced—and in the nature of things we know it to be a fact—that that minority has not been in continuous consultation with the majority during the consideration of all the various matters of dispute which have had the consideration of the Democratic conferees, and as has been admitted and as must necessarily be true, there was no discourtesy involved or intended in that procedure; but until the Senate conferees and the House conferees meet together, regardless of party, how can it be said that there has been any conference whatever?

The impossibility, or the impropriety rather, of suggesting a report to the Senate at this time, consists not only in the fact that the Senate conferees have no power to make such a report, but likewise because, as we were informed by a distinguished minority member of the committee, the Republican representatives have not even had official notice as to the points of threatened disagreement.

Mr. DOLPH. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. WHITE. Certainly.

Mr. DOLPH. If the conferees have not yet had a meeting, is it not time they were discharged from the further consideration of the bill and new conferees appointed?

Mr. WHITE. If the Senator from Oregon will excuse me, if I said the conferees have not had a meeting, I did not intend to make such a statement. They have had many meetings, but they have not had meetings upon all the occasions when each of the various items which are the subject-matter of dispute were being considered, nor was it proper that they should, because naturally those who are responsible for the bill prefer to meet and discuss its merits before presenting it to the entire conference. My objection to that, I understand, upon any score or by any one.

Again, if the members of the conference on the part of the Senate desire to be relieved or if they believe they should receive from the Senate any particular instruction upon any topic, they will come here and make the request. I do not propose to go upon record or to be anywhere regarded as manifesting any want of confidence in our conferees, in their ability, their integrity, or their desire to serve their party and their country, and so I do not think that it will subserve any useful purpose to order them or to ask them in an imperative way to do a particular thing.

Our equals upon this floor, we have selected them for their peculiar qualifications, transcending that of the average Senator, to represent the entire body in this delicate and intricate work. The majority of the committee have been persistently and constantly engaged in endeavoring to effect an agreement. That we well understand. Not one word did any member of this committee utter, until this subject was introduced, to indicate that he was tired of his task or anxious that he should be relieved.

I do not agree with my able and eloquent friend from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE] that the passage of this bill or the formulation of any tariff measure would be promoted by such radical action as he desires to have taken or as he has suggested; nor do I think that an instruction such as the Senator from New York proposes will have any other effect than to breed discontent and to make an agreement less probable.

I confess, like my friend from Indiana, that I look with a doubt at the outset upon the resolution when I know that it comes from my friend from New York [Mr. HILL]. I admit that if he offers a resolution in which I find actual merit the mere fact that he may differ from me with reference to this bill can not justify the withholding of my support. But certainly when we know that the objects of our friend, so far as the bill now before the conference is concerned, are essentially destructive, and that he shows more than ordinary care and attention any resolution which he tenders concerning it, and when we find our distinguished friends upon the other side of the Chamber likewise somewhat enthusiastic for the adoption of this resolution we must not be blamed if we are critical or suspicious.

I believe that, notwithstanding the delay, notwithstanding the manifest desire of the entire country that something should speedily be done, it will be better that this resolution shall not be passed, and that this conference shall stand as it is now constituted for a while longer. I may be asked how long; I may be asked if the conferees have not had time enough to agree. It is easy for those who have no burdens upon their own shoulders, who are unaware of the difficulties of the conference room, who know nothing of those matters which are being considered by our committee day by day, to attack those who are intelligently doing their best and to cry for immediate action. I shall be pleased personally if they are able to evolve a tariff measure agreeable to the country, though they have to wait many days yet. The sooner the better, but it must be done.

Mr. President, the great question is, will action such as the Senator from New York suggests expedite the passage of this measure? That Senator declares that the adoption of this resolution will hasten the result. I think that in one respect he is right. I believe that the adoption of the resolution as he has written it, this instruction to the Senate conferees, will expedite the determination of this matter, because such an expression now means, in my opinion, the death of the bill and the defeat of tariff legislation at the present session. I am willing to wait a short time; I am willing to pause a moment more; I am willing to publicly take my share of responsibility for some further procrastination, rather than to take that action which, in my judgment, must bring about not only political chaos, but worse than that, the permanent injury, or the injury for many years, of the whole United States.

Mr. President, the importance of the present enactment of tariff legislation is not confined to the Democratic party; the business interests of this country are clamoring for it. The demand is for affirmative action, too, not negative action, and the mandate for the enactment of a bill is not confined to any particular section or any particular class of people. My friend concedes that. He has given this as one of his reasons for the passage of his resolution. But the means and methods which he has adopted here constitute, in my judgment, the strongest process which human ingenuity can devise to prevent the accomplishment of the object closest to the heart of the Democratic party as well as to the business interests of the United States, namely, action upon the tariff at this session.

Mr. President, not only is business prostrated, but we have a Treasury threatened with depletion; we have a Treasury which can not be supplied because of the insufficient revenue derived from the tariff law enacted by the Republican party. We are not legislating merely to retard and to cripple trade throughout the land, but also to enable the Government to maintain itself, carry on its business, meet its obligations, and supply those deficiencies which have been created as the result of misguided antecurrent Congressional policy.

Believing, therefore, that the immediate adoption of this resolution would, instead of hastening, retard the enactment of a tariff bill, I shall register my vote against it.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President, as Congress is soon to adjourn and there is very important executive business which must be transacted, I move that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. HILL. Upon that I call for the yeas and nays, and I hope the motion will not prevail.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BUTLER (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON], and therefore withhold my vote. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. BRICE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. GORDON (when his name was called). On this question I am paired with the junior Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. PLATT (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. HUNTON], who has been called away by sickness in his family. I should vote "nay" if he were present.

Mr. QUAY (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN]. If that Senator were present I should vote "nay," but in his absence I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. GORDON. I transfer my pair with the Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON] to the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. IRBY], and vote "yea."

Mr. HILL. I desire to know by what authority that transfer is made?

Mr. GORDON. I will state to the Senator from New York that I inquired before making that transfer, and was informed by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] that he has some telegrams from the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. IRBY], which I hope he will now read for the information of the Senator from New York.

Mr. HILL. That will be entirely satisfactory; but I desired to know.

Mr. LINDSAY (to Mr. JONES of Arkansas). Read them.
Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I have a telegram, dated July 30, as follows:

[Telegram.]

LAURENS, S. C., August 10, 1894.

Senator J. K. JONES, Washington:

Please telegraph me every day status of tariff bill, and please arrange a pair for me in favor of it.

J. L. M. IRBY.

On a subsequent date, the 7th of August, I received this telegram:

[Telegram.]

LAURENS, S. C., August 7, 1894.

Senator JAMES K. JONES:

I thank you for keeping me advised. I telegraphed you several days ago to pair me in favor of the passage of some tariff bill. I hope you will attend to this, if you have not already arranged it. Please telegraph me as a receipt of this.

J. L. M. IRBY.

I have another telegram, which reads as follows:

[Telegram.]

CROSSVILLE, S. C., August 10, 1894.

Senator JAMES K. JONES:

Pair me in favor of free sugar if a proposition of that sort comes up. Send answer to Laurens.

J. L. M. IRBY.

Mr. TURPIE. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. VOORHEES] is detained at his residence in this city by a very serious indisposition. If he were present he would vote "yea."

Mr. BRICE. I will transfer my pair with the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT] to the senior Senator from Indiana [Mr. VOORHEES] and vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. McPHERSON. I have a general pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 35, nays 35, as follows:

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Forty-four Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The Senate will receive a message from the House of Representatives.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6254) to prevent interference in the collection of State, county, and municipal taxes assessed against corporations and corporate property, and for other purposes, asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. DE ARMOND, Mr. WOLVERTON, and Mr. POWERS managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills:

Springer, Talbott, Md. Van Voorhis, Ohio Williams, Ill.
Stallings, Tarsney, Wadsworth, Wilson, Ohio
Stephenson, Tawney, Walker, Wilson, Wash.
Stevens, Terry, Washington, Wise, Hopkins, W. Va.

So the House refused to adjourn.

Mr. J. BAKER of New Hampshire. Mr. Speaker, unanimous consent was given to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. WHEELER] to-night to print remarks on the general subject of pensions. I ask that unanimous consent be given to all present to-night to do the same.

Several members objected.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Then I move that consent be granted.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks, in the absence of a quorum, such an order could not be made. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I move a call of the House. The question was taken; and on a division there were—yes 18, noes 24.

Mr. MAHON. Yeas and nays.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS of New York. I make the point of order that the rule of the House provides that 15 members may have a call of the House. Here are 15 demanding it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair thinks it would require a majority of the 15, if that were the total number present. Less than that number, however, could not order a call, or compel the attendance of the absent members.

The question now is on ordering the yeas and nays.

Mr. TATE. Pending that, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The House divided, and there were—yes 26; noes none.

Mr. MAHON. The yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 17, nays 35, answered "present" 1, not voting 293; as follows:

Mr. HARRIS. As chairman of the committee having charge the subject-matter of the sufferers from the Ford's Theater disaster I deem it proper to say in this connection that the sufferers in the Railway Mail Service or any other Government service bear no sort of parallel to the case presented to the two Houses of Congress in respect to this case. The Government owned the Ford's Theater. The Government placed five or six hundred of its employes there to perform their official duties. The Government undertook to change that structure, and by reason of that undertaking and in its execution the building collapsed and a number of men were killed instantly by the disaster. A number of other employes were more or less seriously injured, and many of them very seriously.

I shall not undertake to assert that there would not be a legal liability under exactly the same facts occurring between employer and employer if they were private individuals and could sue each other, but I need not assert the legal liability that exists for the injuries thus sustained. Whether there be a legal liability or not, no fair-minded man can hesitate to believe and act upon the opinion that there is the highest order of equity in favor of a fair and reasonable compensation for the injuries sustained by reason of that accident. The committee of which I have the honor to be the chairman are unanimously of that opinion, without the shadow of doubt or dissent.

As to the amount of compensation in the death cases, there may be margin for differences of opinion, but that a fair and reasonable measure of compensation is demanded by every consideration of equity and justice no fair-minded man can doubt, in my opinion.

From the unfortunate position that I occupy as chairman, I am the recipient of the statements of the suffering widows and orphaned fathers and husbands who were killed by that disaster. Most of them are to-day suffering in penury and want. Delay is exceedingly hurtful, if it may not be even more fatal than hurtful. The Senate amendment merely provides for the death cases. The cases of injury require a much larger scope and a more accurate investigation than where the persons were killed upon the instant.

Therefore, the committee of which I have the honor to be the chairman reported an amendment and asked the Committee on Appropriations to incorporate the appropriation to provide for the widows and orphans of the persons who were killed there. In respect to the injured parties the committee propose to scrutinize and carefully investigate and finally determine according to their honest judgment what measure of compensation should be granted in each individual case.

This much I have deemed it due to the position I hold to say to the Senate, and having said it, I hope our conferees will give it such weight as in their judgment they think fair and reasonable and right.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PASCO in the chair.) How shall the conferees be appointed?

Mr. COCKRELL and others. By the Chair.

By unanimous consent, the Presiding Officer was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate at the further conference, and Mr. COCKRELL, Mr. GORMAN, and Mr. ALLISON were appointed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed a joint resolution (H. The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That there be printed for the use of the Committee on Finance 1,000 copies of Senate Report No. 559, Fifty-third Congress, second session.

Mr. FRYE. What does that report relate to?

Mr. COCKRELL. It is the comparison of the tariff and administrative acts of 1890 and House bill 4894 as it passed the Senate with the rates of the bill as it passed the House and of the Mills bill of 1888.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

EXTENSION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate a joint resolution from the House of Representatives.

The Secretary. A joint resolution (H. Res. 217) to continue the provisions of existing laws providing temporarily for the expenditures of the Government.

Mr. ALDRICH. I object to the first reading of the joint resolution.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made.

Mr. ALDRICH subsequently said: I am satisfied, upon an examination of the rules, that I could not properly object to the first reading of the joint resolution which came from the House of Representatives. Therefore I withdraw the objection to the first reading, and object to its second reading.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be considered as read the first time, then.

The joint resolution (H. Res. 217) to continue the provisions of existing laws providing temporarily for the expenditures of the Government was read the first time by its title.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made to the second reading of the joint resolution.

LAWS RELATING TO DISTRICT STREET RAILWAYS.

Mr. GORMAN. From the Committee on Printing I report back with amendments the joint resolution (S. R. 99) to compile and publish the laws relating to street railway franchises in the District of Columbia, and I ask for its present consideration.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The amendments of the Committee on Printing were, in line 5, after the word "Congress" to insert "that may be in force at the end of the second session of the Fifty-third Congress;" in line 6, after the word "Columbia," to insert "the same to be compiled under the direction of the attorney of the District of Columbia;" in the same line after the word "that," to fill the blank by inserting "five hundred;" in line 7, after the word "Senate," to fill the blank by inserting "one thousand;" and at the end of the joint resolution add, "but the usual number shall not be printed;" so as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be printed and bound in one convenient volume, at the Government Printing Office, all the various acts of Congress that may be in force at the end of the second session of the Fifty-third Congress relating to street railway franchises in the District of Columbia, the same to be compiled under the direction of the attorney of the District of Columbia; and that 500 copies of the same shall be furnished for the use of the Senate, 1,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 1,000 copies for the use of, and distribution by, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia; but the usual number shall not be printed.

The amendments were agreed to.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THE COMMITTEE ON PRINTING.

Mr. GORMAN. I report from the Committee on Printing a resolution, and I ask for its present consideration.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be read for information.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Printing be, and is hereby, authorized to sit during the coming recess for the performance of any and all duties devolving upon it.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. GORMAN. There is no expenditure involved in the resolution. It is the usual and necessary provision for the Committee on Printing.

The resolution was agreed to.

SENATE EMPLOYEES AT MATTIE BUILDING.

Mr. GORMAN submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

Mr. GORMAN. I move that the Senate adjourn.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, August 13, 1894.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Rev. W. E. PARSON, D. D.

The Journal of Saturday's proceedings was read and approved.

EXTENSION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the consideration of a joint resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

A joint resolution (H. Res. 209) to continue the provisions of existing law providing temporarily for the expenditures of the Government.

Enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the provisions of the joint resolutions approved June 22, 1893, providing temporarily for the expenditures of the Government, be, and the same are hereby, extended and continued in full force and effect to and including the 24th day of August, 1894.

Mr. SAYERS. I will state for the information of the House that the resolution and the amended resolution, which have been adopted, extending the appropriations will expire to-morrow, and I do not believe it is possible for us to agree upon the sundry civil bill to-morrow in time to reach the President. I therefore ask the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. Why not make it the 14th instead of the 24th?

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Does the gentleman think the extension of ten days is long enough?

Mr. SAYERS. Abundance.

Mr. JOHNSON of Indiana. Give yourselves plenty of time.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the resolution? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. DINGLEY. Is that an extension of the appropriations for ten days.

Mr. SAYERS. Yes.

The resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. SAYERS, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the committees for reports.

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I ask that that bill lie on the table, the Senate bill having passed the House last Thursday.

MISSOURI, OKLAHOMA AND TEXAS RAILWAY COMPANY.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BAILEY). This completes the call of committees for reports.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. Speaker, has the regular order been called?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It has not.

Mr. BURROWS. I ask unanimous consent for the passage of the Senate joint resolution, which I send to the desk (S. R. 68), for the relief of William D. Mack, a clerk in the Record and Pension Division of the War Department.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this resolution?

Mr. DOCKERY. Let it be read.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That William D. Mack, a clerk in the Record and Pension Division of the War Department, who lost his life in a railroad accident while returning from the navy, may be paid the balance of his salary, and that he is hereby authorized to receive the balance of his salary for the year ending June 30, 1894, and that the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay to said William D. Mack such portion of his salary as has been withheld from September 1st to October 1st (forty-four days) on account of injuries received in the said railroad accident.

Mr. BURROWS. I will say to the House that this is the matter to which I directed attention some time since—the case of a man employed in the War Department who, on the 4th of July, going to Gotskyburg, accidentally lost both of his feet, and was put in a hospital, where he was confined for one month beyond the term of sick leave allowed under the law. The amount involved is $132. When I called attention to the case before it had not been considered by the House Committee on Military Affairs, but since that time they have considered it, and have reported it favorably, and I will have the report read if it is desired.

Mr. COX. What does the gentleman say is the amount?
Mr. BURROWS. One hundred and thirty-two dollars.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of this joint resolution?

Mr. ALDERSON. I object, Mr. Speaker. I think that can take the regular course.

DEPOSITIONS DE BENE ESSE.

Mr. TERRY, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on the Judiciary reported back with a favorable recommendation a bill H. R. 7957 as a substitute for the bill (H. R. 7048) to amend section 864 of the Revised Statutes of the United States in relation to taking depositions de bene esse. The substitute was referred to the House Calendar, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed, and the original bill was laid on the table.

JAMES A. SEXTON.

Mr. GOLDZIER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the Senate bill (S. 2331) to authorize the Postmaster-General to credit account of James A. Sexton with amount of funds stolen.

Mr. COX. Has that bill been considered by any committee?
Mr. GOLDZIER. Yes, sir; by the Committee on Claims. The bill has passed the Senate, and the report of the Committee on Claims is on file.

Mr. COX. Who reported that bill from the Committee on Claims?

Mr. GOLDZIER. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. RICHARDS], who authorized me to call it up.

Mr. COX. I would like to have the report in that case read.
Mr. DOUKERY. Let us first have the bill read.

The bill was read, as follows:
Enacted, That the Postmaster-General be, and he is hereby, authorized to credit the account of James A. Sexton, postmaster at Chicago, Ill., in the sum of $3,657.00 for postal funds stolen from his office December 3, 1893.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request for the present consideration of this Senate bill?

Mr. KILGORE. I object, Mr. Speaker, and demand the regular order.

Mr. GOLDZIER. I trust the gentleman will not insist on his objection. This bill is recommended by the Department.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The Clerk proceeded under the rule to call the committees in the second morning hour.

Mr. BUNN (when the Committee on Claims was called). Mr. Speaker, I ask that the Committee on Claims be informally passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, do I understand that this is the call in the second morning hour?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Yes, sir.
Mr. HEARD. Well, I protest that, this being a day to which the District of Columbia is entitled under the rule, there is no second morning hour, and I therefore call for the regular order, which is the consideration of District business.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If the gentleman had made his point of order in the beginning the Chair would have sustained it, on the ground that the practice heretofore has been as the gentleman suggests, but unless the Committee on the District of Columbia claims, this day, the regular order would be the call of committees in the second morning hour. Paragraph 2 of Rule XXIV provides that—

On all days other than the first and third Mondays in each month, as soon as the business on the Speaker's table has been disposed of, there shall be a morning hour for reports from committees.

Then, in paragraph 4, it is provided that—

After the morning hour has been devoted to reports from committees, or the call committed, the Speaker shall again call the committees in regular order for one hour, upon which call, each committee, on being named, shall have the right to call up for consideration any bill reported by it on the previous day.

The Chair thinks under the rules, therefore, there is a second morning hour on every day, except the first and third Mondays; but the practice has been that whenever the Committee on the District of Columbia desired the second or the fourth Mondays of the month, it has been accorded to them after the first morning hour and the second morning hour has been dispensed with.

Mr. HEARD. Well, Mr. Speaker, I failed to make the point at the beginning because in the confusion which existed on the floor I did not observe that the call of committees and reports had been completed, and in fact reports continued to be made by committees continuously until after the completion of the call.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Upon that statement the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HEARD] to call up for consideration matters reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. BUNN. A parliamentary inquiry: The call will rest with the Committee on Claims in the next morning hour?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The call will properly rest with the committee which was entitled to be called first this morning.

FREE LIBRARY IN DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. HEARD. I desire to call up the bill (H. R. 6642) to establish a free public and departmental library and reading room in the District of Columbia.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. HEARD. If no motion is made to go into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of the bill, I hope we may proceed with its consideration in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HEARD] asks unanimous consent that this bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

Mr. KILGORE. I object.

Mr. HEARD. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering bills on the Union Calendar from the Committee on the District of Columbia.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole (Mr. HATCHER in the chair), and proceeded to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6642) to establish a free public and departmental library and reading room in the District of Columbia.

The bill was read, as follows:

Enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be, and is hereby, established in the District of Columbia a free public and departmental library and reading room, being also a circulating or lending library, for the use of the citizens of the District of Columbia and of the employees of the several departments and offices of the Government in Washington. The general management of the library shall be committed to a board of trustees, consisting of eleven citizens of the District of Columbia, to be appointed by the President of the United States.

Sec. 2. That said library shall be located in the new post-office building of Washington, D.C., and the architect of the same is hereby directed to provide his plans and specifications for the building suitable for and adapted to library and reading-room purposes, adequate to the accommodation of not less than 75,000 volumes.

Sec. 3. That whenever provisions for the library are complete, including, periodicals, and papers in the existing libraries of the several Executive Departments and offices of the Government in the city of Washington, in the judgment of the head of the Department, bureau, or office assigned and required for the special official use of said Department, bureau, or office shall be transferred to the free public and departmental library and reading room, or its use, and it is hereby made the duty of the head of each Department, bureau, or office in which a circulating library is maintained for the use of employees of the Government to deliver all such books, periodicals, and papers, without charge, to said library, and the head of each Department, bureau, or office thereafter no general circulating library, but only such library as is required for its special official use, shall be established or maintained by any Department, bureau, or office of the Government in the District of Columbia.

Sec. 4. That the Librarian of Congress is hereby authorized and directed to turn over to the free public and departmental library and reading room such duplicate copies of books in his charge as are not required for the use of the Library of Congress.

Sec. 5. That upon the completion of rooms for the library herein provided for, said board of trustees shall appoint one librarian and such assistant librarians and other employees as the said board may deem necessary.

Sec. 6. That all moneys appropriated to the District of Columbia, and all moneys appropriated to the Government, on duty in the city of Washington shall be entitled to the privilege of the free public and departmental library and reading room, free of all charge, in the same manner as the books and papers in the circulating library, under such national regulations as shall be prescribed by the board of trustees. Provided, That the books and reading material shall be for use only from weekdays, and on Saturdays, and on the day following each day excepting Sundays and holidays, on which days said library and reading room shall be kept open from 9 o'clock past midnight to 10 o'clock past midnight.

Sec. 7. That the expenses incurred in the maintenance of the free public and departmental library and reading room, including all salaries of employees, on duty said library by the United States and covered by the District to include these expenses shall be paid by the annual estimates submitted to Congress.

The amendments reported by the committee were read, as follows:

In the first insertion after the word "library," insert the words, "of miscellaneous books," and in line 1 of section 4 after the word "the," insert the words "Joint Committee on the Library upon report by the."

Mr. HEARD. I desire to offer from the committee some formal amendments.

Mr. DOCKERY. It is understood that this does not dispense with the general debate. The gentleman does not desire that?

Mr. HEARD. Oh, not at all.

The amendment of Mr. HEARD was read, as follows:

In line 1 of section 6, strike out "citizens" and insert "residents."

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Let us understand whether the bill has reached the amendable stage.

Mr. HEARD. I will say to the gentleman that the object of this amendment is simply to change the word "citizens" to the word "residents." If there be any objection I will withdraw it.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. I want it understood whether general debate is closed. I do not understand that we have yet reached the amendable stage.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understood the gentleman from Missouri to send this amendment to the desk to be read simply for information.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. I have no objection to that.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Chairman, as has doubtless been observed by members who have listened to the reading of this bill, its object is to establish a free library in the District of Columbia. It will no doubt surprise a great many members when I state that there is no free library in this city. I suppose it is probably true that there is not in the United States another city of equal population certainly not one of equal importance—that has such a free public library. The object of the bill is to establish such an institution.

Permit me to state the provision made by the bill for the accumulation of books for this library. There are in, I believe, three of the Executive Departments of this Government located in Washington, what are known as departmental libraries, consisting largely of books of a technical character, for specific use in the conduct of affairs of such departments. There are also in these three libraries a considerable number of books relating to general subjects, the use of which is enjoyed free by the officers and employes of those Departments respectively, but by them only.

Now, one design of this bill is to authorize the withdrawal from these several Departments of those books which do not relate to the specific business of the same; and to these it is proposed to add such duplicate volumes as can be spared from the Congressional Library. These contributions are to be made the nucleus of this free public library.

Mr. KILGORE. I understand the gentleman to say there is no library in this city to which residents or citizens can have access?

Mr. HEARD. I understand that to be the case, so far as the masses of the people are concerned.

Mr. KILGORE. Do they not have access to the Congressional Library?

Mr. HEARD. They do not; at least, not everybody.

Mr. KILGORE. Can not any reputable man or woman go there and get a book out of that library?

Mr. HEARD. My understanding is that within certain limits the public can have the use of the books in the Congressional Library, as the gentleman from Texas knows; but that privilege is not general, and the hours for the opening and closing of the Library practically forbids its use to a very large proportion of the inhabitants of the District who would like to avail themselves of the privilege.

Mr. KILGORE. Would it not be better and cheaper, though, to change the hours of opening and closing the Library and extend them, rather than to go to the expense which would be necessarily incurred in starting an entirely new establishment? Besides that, we are now having constructed a new Library building in which there will be no difficulty in accommodating everybody who desires to enjoy that privilege, and without the expense of establishing another, or the necessity for encroaching upon any of the space in the Post-Office building, which ought to be devoted entirely to some other matters.

Mr. HEARD. Well, Mr. Chairman, these are important questions, of course, which are to be considered in connection with the bill. I want to say, however, that so far as keeping the Congressional Library open longer hours than at present is concerned, in order to accommodate the people, there would be the advantage of the proposal before the House in that one-half of the expense would be paid by the District of Columbia, and only one-half by the General Government; whereas if the other plan were adopted it would all be paid out of the Treasury of the United States.

Again, Mr. Chairman, the saving that would be effected by this plan would be a lessening of the expense that has now to be met by the General Government in keeping up the departmental libraries to which I have referred, the uses of which being so narrowed they would require less attention, or fewer attendants to care for them than at present.

Mr. KILGORE. I understand it would not add a dollar to the expense to keep the Congressional Library open a little longer hours each day; that is to say, a little earlier in the morning and a little later in the afternoon. Besides, that is already provided for, and if there are books in the departmental libraries which could be withdrawn without detriment to them, they could go into the Congressional Library when it gets into operation in the new building, and thus afford additional accommodation for everybody who chose to avail themselves of it.

Mr. HEARD. The gentleman from Texas, though, as every other member of the House, knows that there is at present a great want of room in the Congressional Library.

Mr. KILGORE. Oh, I understand that, of course; but we expect to move out of it before very long.

Mr. HEARD. If the gentleman will hear me a moment. The gentleman's idea, as I understand it, is that when the new building for the Congressional Library is completed there will be ample opportunity to store there the books that have now no place because of the want of room in the present library, and in addition the accumulation of books which are not needed in the departmental libraries, and in that event the accommodation could be given to the people without appropriating any portion of the space in the new post-office building.

Mr. KILGORE. And plenty of time.

Mr. HEARD (continuing). Now it has been suggested by some, and urged with a good deal of force, that instead of setting apart space in the new post-office building, it might be better to set apart a section in the new library building. That is, of course, a matter that the House will consider before it disposes of the bill. On the other hand, it is contended that a location nearer to the center of the city would be more advantageous and accessible to the reading public than up here in the new building.

But, the way, these are all matters of detail to be determined hereafter. The main proposition is to fix upon the plan which the bill embodies, or some better one, to give to the people of this city the privileges of a free library.

Mr. KILGORE. If the gentleman will allow me a moment.

Mr. HEARD. Certainly.

Mr. KILGORE. I understand the post-office building now being constructed is for the purpose of accommodating every thing that is in the city post-office, and to other post-office matters besides, so as to accommodate those offices that are now in rented buildings. If that building is to be partly occupied by a new public library, it seems to me it would not commend itself as a matter of economy, in view of the fact that we are renting other buildings which would continue to be rented under that arrangement.

Mr. HEARD. Within the limits to which the library would subject that building, which would be comparatively small, it would undoubtedly absorb some space. But it would not be a very material encroachment upon the building. It was the design of the law to provide a building for the use of the city post-office and other departmental work in the District. That is true. It is contended, however, and with some force, that the reduction of the space now occupied in these different Departments where libraries now exist would compensate largely for the use of the space in the new post-office building to be used for the library, which is estimated to be only 6,000 square feet. The House is to consider, therefore, whether the benefit to be conferred will justify a further appropriation for the space designed to be occupied in that building.

But aside from the question of whether the library should be located in one building or another, the greater question of importance is whether there shall be established for this people in the District of Columbia a public library. That is a matter entirely for the judgment and action of Congress, and as to whether it shall be established, whether in a building entirely apart or in the post-office building, or in the library building, that is a matter for further consideration.

Mr. KILGORE. My theory is that the one great library ought to be ample and sufficient, by arranging the hours, to meet all the requirements to which the gentleman has referred.

Mr. HERMANN. Let me ask the gentleman from Missouri whether it is contemplated by the bill now before the House that the entire amount of money for this proposed library shall be appropriated by the General Government?

Mr. HEARD. Not at all.

Mr. HERMANN. How much of it?

Mr. HEARD. I will say that the provision here for the donation of the books is simply that there shall be transferred from the departmental libraries those books relating to general subjects not necessary in the proper conduct of Department business—in other words, not applying specifically to Depart-

The amendment to the Committee on Naval Affairs was to strike out section 2 in the following words:

SEC. 2. That the accounting officers of the Treasury be, and they are hereby authorized and directed to pay to the said Louis G. Sartori, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the difference of pay between the sum which he has received as an officer of the Navy and the amount to which he would have been entitled had he not been passed over, but promoted regularly according to seniority.

And to insert:

SEC. 2. That upon promotion, as authorized by this act, he shall be allowed the pay of a captain retired on account of disability, in conformity with the act of Congress approved March 3, 1873; but no additional back pay shall be allowed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EMPLOYEES IN DISTRICT HEALTH DEPARTMENT.

Mr. HARRIS. By direction of the Committee on the District of Columbia I report a joint resolution. I will make a brief statement in regard to it. On the 2d of October a special act was approved authorizing the health department of the District of Columbia to employ two additional clerks at $100 per month. That act provided for their payment up to the beginning of the fiscal year, the 1st of July, upon the presumption that the District appropriation bill would be passed by that time. These clerks are provided for permanently in that appropriation bill, but the Auditor decides that they can not be paid for the time being until the 1st day of July and the time at which the appropriation bill takes effect. I therefore report the joint resolution from the committee.

The joint resolution (S. R. 101) providing for clerical assistance in the health department of the District of Columbia was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the president of the act entitled "An act to provide for clerical assistance in the health department of the District of Columbia" approved October 2, 1893, are hereby continued and declared to be in force and effect from the 1st of July, 1894, and that the approval of the act making appropriations for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year 1895.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate that the joint resolution be considered at this time. It simply provides for the payment of those two clerks during the period of time I have indicated.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INDEX TO PRIVATE CLAIMS.

Mr. GORMAN, from the Committee on Printing, submitted a report, accompanied by the following resolution: which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Ordered, That the usual number of the index to private claims, from the Forty-seventh to the Fifty-first Congresses, inclusive, prepared by the Secretary of the Senate, in compliance with a resolution of the Senate of September 30, 1890, be printed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. WHITE introduced a bill (S. 2309) to supplement and carry out and enforce the provisions of a treaty made pursuant to a convention concluded at Washington, D. C., March 17, 1894, between the United States of America and His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of China, and to more completely prohibit the coming of Chinese laborers into the United States; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. VILAS introduced a bill (S. 2310) to limit the benefit of pensions under the general law, founded upon the service of soldiers and sailors in the late war, to such persons as claim or shall hereafter claim the same through marriages contracted prior hereto; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. SQUIRE by request introduced a bill (S. 2311) to provide for the establishment and maintenance of a college for the education of daughters of American soldiers and sailors; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

On motion of Mr. MANDERSON it was Ordered, That John W. Waterer be permitted to withdraw from the files of the Senate, under the rules that forbid the papers relating to the (S. 466) in the Fifty-third Congress, to be removed the charge of desertion standing against him, leaving copies thereof.

AMERICAN PRISONERS IN CUBA.

Mr. CALL. I introduced a resolution in the Senate on the 23d of July requesting the President of the United States to institute negotiations for the release or trial of certain citizens of the United States claimed to be held in unlawful imprisonment in the Island of Cuba. I send to the desk a letter received from one of them, and ask that it may be read and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested, in the absence of objection.

The Secretary read as follows:

CAROLINE NIEL, SANTA CLARA, CUBA, August 9, 1894.
DEAR SIR: I am a resident of Key West, Fla., a citizen of the United States of America, having lived and voted in Key West and New York City, and I am registered as a citizen of the United States of America in the United States of America consulate at Genoa, by my consul, after having exhibited to him satisfactory evidence of citizenship.

Now, my object in writing to you is to ask your aid in my behalf, for I have been a prisoner in the Carcel Real here in Santa Clara for some ten months, without trial, or much hopes or prospects of being tried and released, for if I could get a trial before any fair and impartial court I would be freed as soon as at liberty.

I am held here as a political prisoner without any just cause. The only cause of my arrest and long imprisonment is that I was unfortunately wounded in the town of Cruces last October when there was some kind of trouble in the country near that town, and being a citizen of the United States of America, was arrested on suspicion of sympathizing with the Cubans.

Is it not possible for you to ask our Secretary of State, Mr. Walter G. Graham, to instruct our consul-general at Havana to act promptly in my behalf, and to see what redress and privileges are afforded to American citizens in such cases, under our treaties and regulations between Spain and the United States of America?

Your prompt and favorable action in this matter is urgently requested by one of your fellow citizens in trouble.

Yours, very truly,

JOSE MENDEZ NIMEZ.

HON. WILKINSON CALL.

U. S. A. Senate, Washington, D. C., U. S. A.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, the United States are a great power. They command inexhaustible resources of force and for peaceful and respectful negotiation. I have no reason to think that I have any other cases of this character save any other cause than the "law is inviolable delay." But whether this be true or not, the Government of the United States owes protection to its citizens in foreign countries, and has a right and is bound to demand their release after a reasonable detention without trial.

This duty is especially imperative in relation to the Cuban citizens of the United States, whose relations to the Government of Spain render them liable to unreasonable suspicion and to arbitrary arrest. I hope that prompt action will be taken by the Government in this and all other like cases for the release of citizens of the United States who are subjected to arbitrary and unreasonable arrest and confinement.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The letter will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, in the absence of objection.

PRINTING OF THE REVENUE BILL.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, there will be a great demand in the country for copies of the tariff bill which has recently been passed, and I offer the order which I send to the desk providing for its printing.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The order will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Ordered, That 5,000 copies of bill H. R. 459, as passed, and to be known as the sugar-trust bill, be printed at the expense of the Senate.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let that lie over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will go over under the rule.

Mr. VEST. What was the motion in regard to the resolution of the Senator from Maine? I could not hear it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that the resolution was offered by the Senator from Maine, to which resolution there is objection, and it goes over under the rule.

Mr. HALE. Let it be again read, so that the Senator from Missouri may understand it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be again read. The Secretary again read the resolution.

Mr. VEST. Is that the title of the bill, or does the Senator give the title himself?

Mr. HALE. I refer to what will be the popular acceptance of the bill as the sugar-trust bill. I do not insist that it be put into the title of the bill, of course, but public sentiment upon the matter will settle all that.

Mr. VEST. I respectfully question the right of the Senator from Maine to say what is the popular acceptance. He has no right to give any such appellation to any bill here, and it is an outrage upon the Senate for him to do so.

Mr. MILLS. I move to lay the resolution on the table.

Mr. ALDRICH. Regular order, Mr. President.

Mr. MILLS. Let us have the question upon my motion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that the present consideration of the resolution of the Senator from Maine objected to, it has gone over under the rule, and is not before the Senate for consideration at this time.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 11th instant approved and signed the following acts:
 An act (S. 1470) granting a pension to Otis Smith;
 An act (S. 740) for the relief of George H. Jewett, of Arlington, Washington County, Neb.; and
 An act (S. 2217) to provide for the closing of a part of an alley in square 185 in the city of Washington, D. C.

FREE COAL.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate bills from the House of Representatives; which will be read by title.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 7968) to place upon the free list bituminous coal, shale, slack, and coke.

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask that the bill on its first reading may be read at length.

The Secretary read the bill the first time at length, as follows: Be it enacted, etc., That from and after the passage of this act, the following articles, when imported into the United States, shall be admitted free of import duties:

Bituminous coal and shale, and coal slack or culm, and coke.

Mr. MANDERSON. I object to the second reading of the bill.

Mr. VEST. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry. I am not very familiar with the rules of the Senate; but as I understand the rule a single objection carries this bill over until to-morrow. Is it in order to move, notwithstanding that objection, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of this measure?

Several SENATORS. Oh, no.

Mr. VEST. I submit the inquiry.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks that such a motion would not be in order, and that a single objection carries the bill over.

Mr. MANDERSON. I call attention to Rule XIV, which is very explicit on the subject.

Mr. VEST. I was under the impression that that was the rule—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has no doubt that it is the correct ruling.

Mr. VEST. But I desired to make the motion if possible.

FREE IRON ORE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the bill (H. R. 7999) to place upon the free list all ores of iron.

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask for the reading of the bill in full.

The Secretary read the bill the first time at length, as follows: Be it enacted, etc., That from and after the passage of this act the following articles, when imported into the United States, shall be admitted free of import duties:

Iron ore, including manganese iron ore, also the dross or residuum from burnt pyrites, and sulphur ore, as pyrites or sulphure of iron in its natural state.

Mr. MANDERSON. I object to the second reading of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will go over.

FREE BARBED FENCING WIRE, ETC.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the bill (H. R. 7970) to place upon the free list barbed fencing wire, and wire rods for the manufacture of the same.

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask that the bill may be read at length.

The Secretary read the bill the first time at length, as follows: Be it enacted, etc., That from and after the passage of this act, the following articles, when imported into the United States, shall be admitted free of import duties:

BARBED FENCING WIRE.

Wire rods of iron or steel when imported for the manufacture of barbed wire fencing under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

Mr. MANDERSON. I object to the second reading of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will go over.

FREE SUGAR, MOLASSES, ETC.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the bill (H. R. 7971) to exempt from duty sugar, molasses, etc.

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask that the bill may be read at length.

The Secretary read the bill the first time at length, as follows: Be it enacted, etc., That from and after the passage of this act the following articles, when imported into the United States, shall be admitted free of import duties: All sugars, all sugar bottoms, all sugar molasses and sugar sweeteners, strips of cane juice, melada, concentrated molasses, and concentrated and concentrated molasses, and molasses.

Mr. MANDERSON. I object to the second reading of the bill.

Mr. HILL. If it is in order, I desire to give notice of some amendments to these bills, which I now ask to have printed, and I ask to have one of them read. By reading one, it will be discovered what the other amendments are.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read the amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. HILL to the bill (H. R. 7968) to place upon the free list all ores of iron, which was to add at the end of the bill:
 All provisions of law in existence at the time of the passage of this act providing for the taxation of incomes are hereby repealed.

RECENT ELECTION IN ALABAMA.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution submitted by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER], coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. CHANDLER on the 11th instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Privileges and Elections be directed to inquire into the facts of the election held in the State of Alabama at the present month of August, and to ascertain and report whether such election was full, fair, free, and honest, and resulted in the choice of a Legislature entitled to elect a United States Senator, and that said committee as a whole or by a subcommittee shall have power to send for persons and papers and sit during the approaching recess of Congress.

Mr. PUGH. Mr. President, I received a telegram from my colleague [Mr. MORGAN] on last Saturday, informing me that he would be in the Senate on yesterday. I have heard nothing from him since that time, and I ask that that resolution go over, believing that he will certainly reach the city to-day, or that I shall be informed of his inability to get here.

Mr. CHANDLER. I have no objection to the resolution going over until to-morrow, retaining its place as a part of the morning business.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, the resolution of the Senator from New Hampshire will go over, retaining its place.

DOMINION COAL COMPANY, OF NOVA SCOTIA.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Order of Business 322, being a resolution that the special committee appointed to investigate the charges of bribery against certain Senators be instructed to inquire into the facts connected with the organization and history of the Dominion Coal Company, Limited, of Nova Scotia.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution indicated. Is there objection?

Mr. GRAY and Mr. BERRY. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection.

LEGAL REPRESENTATIVES OF JOHN WIGHTMAN, DECEASED.

Mr. QUAY. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 886) for the relief of the legal representatives of John Wightman, deceased.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill, the pending question being on the amendment reported by the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert a substitute.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The substitute has been previously read.

Mr. HARRIS. The bill seems to be voluminous, and I should like to have a statement as to its purport before I consent to its further consideration. What does the claim amount to, and what is it based upon?

Mr. QUAY. The bill proposes to make an appropriation of $6,888 to the heirs of a former mail contractor. The matter is in charge of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. HUNTON], who will explain the details of the measure.

Mr. HARRIS. Has the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads favorably reported the bill?

Mr. HUNTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. HARRIS. Unanimously?

Mr. HUNTON. I will explain the matter.

Mr. HARRIS. I do not care for a lengthy explanation.

Mr. VILAS. Will the Senator from Virginia permit me to say a word right there.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. HUNTON. No, sir; I will make a statement, and then the Senator from Wisconsin can follow.

In response to the inquiry made by the Senator from Tennessee, I beg to state that the bill was reported unanimously from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads in the absence of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS], who is now the chairman of that committee. At that time the committee was presided over by our late distinguished friend from Georgia, Mr. Colquitt. When the bill came up in the Senate the Senator from Wisconsin, who is now the chairman of the committee, moved its reference back to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

The bill was considered by the committee a second time and was reported back to the Senate favorably, I believe, with only one dissenting vote. The question now comes before the Senators as to whether it will pass the bill thus twice reported from the Committee on Post-Offices and Post Roads. While I am on the floor I may as well explain to some extent the provisions of the bill.

It appears that Mr. Wightman was a post-office contractor for carrying the mails from Pittsburgh to Erie, in the State of Pennsylvania. He carried the mails six times a week for the sum of $9,000 per annum. An appropriation for a daily mail was not made in the appropriation act of 1859, and the service was reduced from six times a week to three times a week.

There was great distress along the line of the route; it was a thickly settled country and very much in need of mail facilities, and a petition as long as the moral law was sent to the Postmaster-General asking him to restore the daily mail service. Thereupon the Postmaster-General and Mr. Wightman had an interview, and the Postmaster-General said: "Mr. Wightman, if you will carry the mails over this route six times a week I will recognize you as the contractor for carrying the mail six times a week and will recommend that the Congress of the United States shall pay you in the next appropriation bill the old sum of $9,000." This arrangement was entered into between the Postmaster-General and Wightman, and the latter did carry the mail between those two points six times a week for one year. He received therefor in money $4,500, leaving still due him the sum of $4,500.

At the next meeting of Congress, when the appropriation had to be made or refused, the Postmaster-General made an urgent request that Mr. Wightman should be paid his $4,500. Mr. Buchanan, who was then President of the United States, in the conclusion of his message in regard to this contract and others of a similar character, says:

For these reasons I recommend the passing of a bill, at as early a day as may be practicable, to provide for the payment of the amount with interest.

That was not done, sir. Mr. Wightman first, and then his representatives afterwards, appeared before every succeeding Congress and asked the payment of this sum. Finally, in a recent Congress, a bill was passed referring the case to the Court of Claims. The Court of Claims reported back as a matter of fact and as its judgment on the law of the case that Mr. Wightman was entitled to the principal sum, leaving out the interest, because the court was not allowed by the law under which it was acting to pay interest on claims.

From the time of the payment of the principal, Mr. Wightman's representatives have had a claim before both Houses of Congress to pay the interest on that sum of money from the time the money became due until the principal was paid under the judgment of the Court of Claims. That is the provision of the pending bill. It is to pay the interest on the principal, $4,500, that principal having been paid. The interest amounts to the sum mentioned in the bill, $6,888.75.

Mr. COCKRELL. What was the amount of the principal?

Mr. HUNTON. The principal was $9,000 originally, and the principal sum paid under the judgment of the Court of Claims was $4,500 or thereabouts.

When this matter was up before there was something said about the Government not paying interest on what it owes. I, for one, do not sympathize with any such view. I know, Mr. President, that if you owe a debt the law makes you pay interest on it from the time it falls due, and if the law did not compel you to do it your own sense of propriety would. I can not draw a distinction between the morality and binding force of the law as applied to an individual and their application to a government. It was said heretofore by my friends, the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] and the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS], I believe, that the Government never paid interest on such claims.

With great respect to those two Senators, I beg leave to take issue with them. I have before me a document published under the authority of Congress, and I call the attention of the Senate to a large list of claims which the Government has paid interest on. I read from House Report No. 40, Forty-fourth Congress, first session, with respect to the claim of the Choctaw Nation. In this document are cited fifty-three acts of Congress in which interest has been allowed upon claims when paid. There is one very notable case to which I desire to call the attention of the Senate. There will be found on page 51 of this document an act approved July 29, 1854, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to pay John C. Fremont $183,825, with interest thereon from the 1st day of June, 1851, at the rate of 10 per cent per annum in full of his account for beef delivered to Commissioner Barbour for the use of the Indians in California.

I might go through the whole list of fifty-three claims cited in the document, where acts have been passed paying interest on claims, but the time of the Senate is too precious to do so.

But here is the claim of John C. Fremont for beef delivered to Indians, and I ask the Senate whether a claim for furnishing beef is any more sacred than a claim for labor actually performed in carrying the mails along the route from Pittsburgh to Erie, in the State of Pennsylvania?

More than that, the Senate will find upon examination of this document that, in the claims, fifty-three in number where interest has been allowed, that there is no claim among them which could appeal to both Houses of Congress for interest to the same extent that the claim of Wightman does. It was recommended by Mr. Holt, the Postmaster-General who made the contract; it was recommended by Mr. Buchanan, who was then President of the United States, and it has been recommended repeatedly since by Postmasters-General and Presidents.

I beg leave to state one more fact. Mr. Wightman in carrying out the understanding between him and the Postmaster-General paid out $1,500 in cash in order to execute the contract. So he lost the interest on the $1,500, and it is but fair that the Government should pay him interest upon what the Government owed him at the time the contract was completed.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is there a written report in the case? I understand the Senator from Wisconsin (Mr. VILAS) has made a minority report.

Mr. VILAS. I think perhaps the views of the minority will state just what is the nature of the bill as well as anything can.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The views of the minority will be read.

The Secretary read the views of the minority accompanying the report, as follows:

The undersigned, a minority of the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, to whom was referred the bill (S. 886) for the relief of the legal representatives of John Wightman, deceased, is unable to agree to a favorable report on the bill, and submits, as briefly as possible, his reasons for dissent. This is a claim for interest, pure and simple, upon a sum of money which was claimed by the deceased as due him under a contract for carrying the mail during the year ending June 30, 1859, which was finally paid in pursuance of an act of Congress approved August 4, 1886. The amount found due and paid under that act was $4,125. The amount claimed by the contractor from the time when the service was performed until the payment of that judgment, is $6,888.75. Nothing else is now claimed, the debt—if it ever was a debt—having been fully discharged.

It is never claimed by the contractor that he is entitled to express contract or express law. It is unnecessary to say that no law exists for the payment of interest to creditors of the United States, except in the case of its bonded debt, upon which interest was expressly provided by law.

In this case there was no contract for the payment of interest. More than that, there was no contract for the payment of the principal. This was paid entirely by the contractor, and he was bound to pay it, under the authority of which alone the Court of Claims had the right to render a judgment against the United States.

The present bill, it is simply an appeal to Congress to bestow interest as a favor or gratuity, upon the theory of some special equity.

The case was, briefly stated, that the deceased had a contract to carry the mail six times a week, which he carried for three years, in pursuance of the contract itself, and because of a failure of appropriation, reduced to three times a week; and the contractor carried the mail six times a week upon the expectation that Congress would authorize his payment, which was effected twenty-six years afterwards. It is impossible to distinguish any just reason why such a claim should have interest awarded to the claimant when none is allowed to a creditor with a legal debt, payment of which has been deferred for years.

The deceased voluntarily put himself in the attitude of a claimant instead of a creditor; and although his claim was eventually allowed, his equity is not so great as that of a creditor would have been.

It can require no discussion to show that if this claim for interest is to be allowed, it is out to the force of a general bill to allow interest to all creditors who have hitherto suffered delay in the payment of their demands against the United States.

WM. F. VILAS.

Mr. VILAS. Mr. President, I have no possible interest in opposing this claim. I merely desire to call the attention of the Senate plainly to its nature. It is simply a bill to pay over $6,000 interest upon a claim amounting to about $4,000, which Congress passed an act to grant several years ago. The theory of the claim is that the deceased, Mr. Wightman, was a mail contractor in 1859 and 1860, just before the war broke out, and the Department, because of the lack of appropriations, and exercising the authority which the contract preserves in every case to the Postmaster-General, and which the law requires him to exercise, reduced the number of trips from six times a week to three times a week.

The contractor, however, at the solicitation of people interested, continued to carry the mail the full number, six times a week, and thus he had a claim against the United States for compensation for carrying the mail the additional three times a week. He had received, of course, one month's pay upon notice of discontinuance of the extra service, but the law requires and authorizes the Postmaster-General to pay one month's services in such cases.

Some years afterwards, in 1886, Congress finally passed an act appropriating the amount of the balance due for the service of the additional three times a week; and this is a bill simply to pay interest upon the amount so appropriated from the time when the mail service was rendered to the date when the act was passed.

Of course, I state in the views of the minority, Mr. Wightman voluntarily put himself in the position of a claimant. He was not a creditor of the United States; Congress made him a creditor. This bill would prefer him to every other creditor, except those who hold the bonds of the United States, and it would necessarily make every creditor entitled to interest on every deferred debt unless there is reason for a discrimination between one and another of the Government's creditors.

I have felt it my duty to make a plain statement of what the bill is, the entire committee disagreeing with me, I am bound to say. If the Senate thinks we will, in response to repeated solicitation, establish the precedent of passing a bill to pay interest upon claims some years after we have allowed the claim, I make this statement plainly in order that the Senate may be possessed of the facts, and without a particle of overstatement as to what is done with the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to ask the Senator from Wisconsin one question in explanation. What was the language of the act of Congress authorizing the payment of the $4,000?

Mr. VILAS. I think it referred the case to the Court of Claims. I am not quite sure for the moment.

Mr. HUNTON. That is exactly right.

Mr. VILAS. The Senator from Virginia says I am right. It referred the case to the Court of Claims, and authorized the Court of Claims to allow the amount if the court found the facts to be as stated.

Mr. HUNTON. I think the Senator is wrong there. There was a reference of the case to the Court of Claims without saying anything about what the Court of Claims should allow. The Court of Claims considered the case and allowed the principal, but was not authorized under the law which gave jurisdiction in such cases to give anything but the principal. That is the fact.

Mr. VILAS. If the Senator from Virginia will allow me, he will see that I was correct in my remembrance of the act. The act says:

That the chairman of the legal representatives of John Wightman, deceased, for an account of the mail service rendered by said John Wightman—claims—me, and the same is hereby, referred to the Court of Claims, and the said court is authorized and required to take jurisdiction of the said case, and to give its decision, and its award, upon the satisfaction of the said court that the said service was performed.

Omitting the details—
and the same as any part thereof has not been paid five times and in this case, the said court said it was proper to give the compensation provided in the mail contract.

Mr. HUNTON. The Senator from Wisconsin reads from the record—

Mr. VILAS. I read from the act itself.

Mr. HUNTON. The Senator reads from the act itself to show that I am wrong and the act which he reads very clearly shows to my mind that he is wrong and I am right. As I stated before, according to the language of the act referring this case to the Court of Claims, it was a reference to that court to determine what should be done in the way of compensation to Wightman if he had rendered the service, and the Court of Claims was limited to the principal amount due; it could not give the interest.

There was one point omitted by the Senator from Wisconsin in his statement of the facts of the case to which I desire to call his attention and that of the Senate. He states the facts with entire accuracy except that he omits one, and it is the important fact in the case, because I believe that the question of the right of this party to the interest on the sum that was due him hinges upon the fact that I am about to relate.

When this mail service was reduced from six times a week to three times a week there was complaint all along the line of the route from Erie to Pittsburgh. The parties before the Postmaster-General, and the Postmaster-General said: "I am powerless to give you a daily mail, but if the contractor will agree to carry out his former contract, I will legalize it as far as I can by directing the postmasters along the line of the route to open the post-office and receive the mail and deliver it out to those to whom the mail is addressed." Under that arrangement between Wightman and the Postmaster-General, Wightman undertook to carry and did carry the mail six times a week, performing the service thus legalized by the Postmaster-General, under a promise from the Postmaster-General that "as far as in me lies, I will see that you are paid for it when Congress meets."

If it was not an express contract between Mr. Wightman and the Postmaster-General it was such a strong implied contract as between individuals always carries interest to the party recovering upon an implied contract.

It is my right in this statement, the fact in the case, there can not be any doubt about the equity of Wightman's representatives to interest upon the sum that was due him from the time the original sum became due until the principal was paid a few years ago. Upon this point I desire to call the attention of the Senate to a joint resolution that was passed in the very beginning of the Government. I believe it is maintained that it is not in force now, but I will show what the Government thought was right. It was passed on the 3d of June, 1784, and reads as follows:

That an interest of 6 per cent per annum shall be allowed to all creditors of the United States for supplies furnished or services done from the time that the payment became due.

I hold that that joint resolution of Congress of 1784 expresses nothing more than the law of the case, which ought to bind the Government if the Government was subject to be bound by law. We know that if this question of affairs existed between two individuals, and it was recognized as the Government has recognized in this case, that the principal sum was fairly due to Wightman, then as a necessary appendage to that fact would follow the payment of interest on the claim. I think that Mr. Wightman is as much entitled to the interest on this money as he was to the principal.

I beg to say, in the language of the Senator from Wisconsin, that I have no particle of interest in the case, any more than he has. I never heard of John Wightman or his legal representatives until the case was put into my hands as a member of the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads. I considered the case with a great deal of care, and I could not escape the conclusion that when the Government admitted, as it did by paying the sum, that it owed John Wightman $1,125 from 1860 down to the time when the principal was paid, that admission carries along with it an admission that he is entitled to interest upon that sum also, and especially when carrying the mail six times a week was the cause of an expenditure of $1,500 to a subcontractor to help him carry out this contract or stipulation with the Postmaster-General.

How much more it cost Wightman we can not tell. The mail could not be run every day on a route of that magnitude without a large outlay of money, and he expended money under the implied contract between Holt and himself with the expectation that when the money became due it would be paid to him, and as the money was not paid to him when I became due I hold—never mind any other doctrine as an honest man; however, honorable Senators may differ from me—that when the Government failed to pay that money which was justly due him, and which it has admitted to be due him, it owes the interest also.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Mr. President, this claim has received more than usual consideration at the hands of the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads. The bill, it will be remembered, was reported heretofore from that committee unanimously, and considered for a time by the Senate, and it was recommended at the instance of the friends of the measure to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads for further consideration. It was carefully reconsidered, and the result is that the committee, with the single exception of one member, united in reporting back the bill favorably, as stated by the Senator from Virginia, who was instructed by the committee to report the bill. It is true the chairman of the committee dissents; and he has given his reasons for the position he takes.

This is an exceptional case, and even if it were not exceptional we will not do to say that the passage of the bill is to establish a precedent that the Government of the United States will pay interest on a claim. Such ground can not be taken from the fact that I hold in my hand a list of fifty-three acts of Congress heretofore passed by which interest was allowed. The first act was passed the 14th of January, 1793, and the last not a great while ago. Such an act was passed May 31, 1794, and July 23, 1795, and January 23, 1798; and then in 1802, one in 1803, two in 1810, two in 1812, three in 1814, two in 1814, one in 1815, two in 1816, one in 1818, two in 1820, one in 1822, two in 1823, two in 1824, two in 1826, one in 1827, one in 1828, one in 1830, five in 1832, two in 1834, four in 1836, one in 1838, one in 1842, one in 1846, one in 1859, one in 1847, one in 1852, another in 1854, and two in 1870.

Every one of these fifty-three cases was an act where interest was paid on claims against the Government of the United States. So it will not do to say that we are inaugurating a new principle here, or that we propose to establish a rule for which there is no precedent.

It has not been the custom, I admit, to pay interest generally on claims, although to tell the truth, so far as I am concerned I could never see any very good reason why if the Government owes an honest debt to one of its citizens and fails to pay it when it is due, it should not pay interest, just the same as an individual is expected to pay interest in law and in morals.

But this is not an exceptional case, as stated fully by the Senator from Virginia, and I shall not detain the Senate by going into its history further. It is enough to know that this committee, Democrats and Republicans, after a second investigation of the case, have come to the conclusion that this is an honest claim and one that the United States ought to pay. I may refer to one fact. Under Mr. Buchanan's Administration, when Mr. Holt, recently deceased, was Postmaster-General, his claim by name was referred to in the Postmaster-General's report and in the message of the President of the United States, and it was there stated that it was a claim, principal and interest, that would not be withheld on the part of the Government without dishonor to the Government.

Mr. HIGGINS. If the Senator from Oregon will allow me, I should like to ask him a question.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Certainly.

Mr. HIGGINS. Are there precedents for the payment of interest?

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. There are fifty-three, to which I have just called attention, giving the date of the acts.

Mr. HIGGINS. It is an old policy of the Government?

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. The general policy of the Government is the other way, I presume, although as I have said there are fifty-three acts of Congress on the statute book to-day, placed there since the formation of the Government, where interest pure and simple has been paid. There have been exceptional cases.

Mr. HIGGINS. On what ground has this exception been placed?

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. On that which has been stated fully by the Senator from Virginia who made the report, and who is more able to give the details than I am.

Mr. HIGGINS. When the Senator himself can not state it. I am sorry.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I can state it. The appropriation failed on an important mail route in the State of Pennsylvania, where it seemed to be absolutely necessary to continue the mails. The President of the United States and the Postmaster-General said to this man, "There is no appropriation; we can not pay you, but if you will go on and go to the expense of putting on stock and supplying the people on the route with the mails, taking your chances, we will see that you are paid at the end of the time." The contractor did so. He went to great expense, as the report shows, in putting on stock, and he carried the mails and performed his contract. Then the Government failed to pay him. It failed to pay him the old contract price until some twenty or thirty years afterwards.

Now, we say he is entitled to interest on the amount of that claim from the time he ought to have been paid until the time when he was paid, whether it amounts to $1 or whether it amounts to $500,000. It is a matter of honor on the part of the Government; it is a matter of justice to the claimant; it is a matter of right between the individual parties; and it is a matter of right between the Government and one of its citizens, the contractor. That is the view of the committee with one exception take of this case. I do not wish to detain the Senate any longer. I submit the question to the Senate.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President, there is some mystification in regard to this case, and I beg to say that with this report before me I can not agree to the statement of facts made by the Senator from Oregon. Here are the facts as found by the Court of Claims and that finding divests this case of a great deal of the sentimentality of obligation on the part of the Postmaster-General which has been woven into it by the Senator from Virginia and the Senator from Oregon. What are the facts?

On the 26th of June 1853, the Postmaster-General said:

This is the finding of facts by the Court of Claims—
"The Postmaster-General, in reason of failure by contractors to make necessary appropriations, caused the service to three times per week, and correspondingly reduced the compensation, to wit, to the sum of $4.00 per annum."

That was perfectly legal. It was in accordance with the expressed will of Congress in refusing to appropriate the money to carry the mails six times a week. Now, let us go further.

6. Shortly after the order of curtailment to three times a week, owing to non-payment to the Postmaster-General by citizens along the route interested in the mails for revocation of the order of reduction, the Postmaster-General—

Did what?

The Postmaster-General indicated to the agents sent by these citizens to the Postmaster-General—

Not to the contractor. The contractor was not present. There was no promise, direct or indirect, on the part of the Postmaster-General, but—

The Postmaster-General indicated to the agents sent by these citizens to the Postmaster-General that if the contractor, John Wightman, would carry the mails three times a week, and assist to the justice of Congress for future appropriations to pay for the restored service, he would—

Do what?

He would cause the postmasters along the route to deliver the mails to him six times a week.

There is the only kind of contract that was in any manner made. It was an indication by the Postmaster-General to citizens who wanted service six times a week instead of three times a week that if the contractor went on and performed the service and induced Congress to pay him, he would cause the postmasters to deliver the mails to him six times instead of only three times as he was required to do under the law.

7. On the faith of such assurances from the Postmaster-General, Wightman did carry the mails six times a week; each way from one point about the 1st day of July, 1859, to and including the 30th day of June, 1860, the mails during that time having, under the orders of the Post-Office Department, been delivered to him six times a week each way.

8. The said contractor, John Wightman, was paid for carrying the mails three times a week each way during all said time, during June 30, 1859, the sum of $905, one month's extra pay, and no more.

9. The amount at the contract rate, for the service of carrying the mails three times a week from and including the 1st day of July, 1859, to and including June 30, 1860, is $4,125, after deducting the credit of $375 for one month's service.

CONCLUSION OF LAW.

On the foregoing finding of facts the court decides as a conclusion of law: The claimant is entitled to recover $4,125 for the additional service of carrying the mails six times a week in the findings.

That amount was paid and the question is whether interest shall be paid upon it? I know there are precedents for paying interest, isolated examples, the facts of which we have not before us. We know that constantly the Departments where an appropriation is failed or has not been made up to the amount, employees of the Government are told, "You can go on and do the work; we will accept of it, if you will trust to Congress for the appropriation." It may be that the appropriation is made at the next session or it may not be made for years. That is the case all through the service.

Mr. President, there are a hundred such cases as this, and probably a thousand. If we establish it as a matter of law that we are to pay interest upon mail contracts, where will it end? I sympathize with the claimant in this case. It was probably an extraordinarily great hardship to him; but where is it to end? Are we to say that the Government is liable for the payment of interest upon all contracts? Here are claims for supplies taken by a competent authority during the war. We paid for the supplies in 1860 and in 1860. Those supplies were furnished; they were worth a certain amount of money; the Government got them on that day; and are we to say that we shall go back and pay interest from the time the Government received the benefit of the supplies up to the time when the principal was paid?

Mr. President, this would be a dangerous precedent; and while this is an extraordinarily hard case, and I sympathize with those who claim the money, I can not in justice to the taxpayers of this country favor such a precedent.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, I know nothing about this case except what has been stated to-day before the Senate. It is perfectly clear to me that the payment of claims like this would be a very bad precedent, but it would involve perhaps the payment of millions of money. In 1859 and 1860 we were passing through a period of great financial stringency, and throughout the country the postal routes were limited and the cost of the service in every respect was reduced to the lowest possible sum. This gentleman who had the contract in Pennsylvania suffered only the same inconvenience that probably thousands of other contractors did. A general reduction of the amount of service on all the postal routes of the United States occurred in those two years, and on every one of those claimants, whether living or represented by heirs, would have a stronger right to claim money from the Government of the United States than this claimant.

This claimant had no contract with anybody authorized to make a contract to pay for any more service than three times a week. The Postmaster-General performed his bounden duty to keep within the limits of the expenditure appropriated by law. He had no right to make a contract for any more service than was authorized by Congress. The service was limited by the appropriation. The same rule of reduction of service was applied all over the United States. I happen to know that at that time it was applied in Ohio, and I have known of contractors who, for the convenience of the people, went on and carried passengers and mails six times a week when they were only paid for three times; but there was no pretense of any claim ever made by them.

Mr. HUNTON. Will the Senator from Ohio allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. SHERMAN. Let me go on a little further. As to the pretended declaration made by the Postmaster-General, it had no more operation in law or in equity than the declaration of any man walking along the road. He had no right to make such a stipulation, nor did he make it, because he never agreed that the money should be paid or that an additional appropriation would be made in the future. He did not promise anything of that kind. He promised nothing except that the mail would be received by the postmasters and delivered to the contractor every day if he presented himself at the post-offices along the route. Now I will hear the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. HUNTON. I beg to ask the Senator from Ohio, if a party had done service for the Senator by his consent without a contract, and the dealing between him and that individual raised an implied contract on the Senator's part to pay him $5,000, would he as an honest man say, "I will pay you the $5,000 ten years afterwards, but I will not pay the interest?"

Mr. SHERMAN. That is a very fallacious argument. It is an absurdity on the part of my honorable friend. It seems to me. This was not done for the benefit of the United States of America. The United States of America, through its officers, said they could only afford to pay for service three times in the week, and the work was done for the convenience of the people along the route. If this case is to be tried in a court of honor as being under a contract those people ought to be called upon to pay the money. Clearly the people who were benefited along the route ought to have paid it.

But there is another point, Mr. President, about the payment of interest. It is true there have been fifty or sixty cases during the history of our Government, going back a hundred years in which we have paid interest, but what were the circumstances as to the particular claim? In more than a million cases we have refused to pay interest. It is the standing rule not to pay interest. No one expects interest in collecting a claim from the Government. The Government of the United States is always presumed to pay when due, and therefore there is no interest to pay; but if we do not pay when bound to pay we only exercise the power that all Governments exercise in delaying payments on account of public exigency.

It is not wise to depart from the established rule, except in some clear and strong case of a contract made for a stipulated amount and for a stipulated time, which would create an obligation to pay interest. Fifty or a hundred or a thousand such cases might occur where the interest ought to be paid, but if this bill should be passed this claimant would receive a sum of money which we never promised to him. He has already received a sum of money to the full amount of the principal, obtained, it is true, by badgering Congress year after year, and now he comes in and wants interest. If interest at 6 per cent is allowed, instead of $5,000 interest, we ought to pay him $10,000 interest, because the claim has been in existence for thirty or forty years, and he will come back after awhile and say we have not paid him enough interest.

Private claims against the Government ought to be subjected to the severest test and scrutiny, and the Committee on Claims, the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads, and the House of the service ought to be careful not to set precedents like this and open the door to unreasonable demands.

For the benefit, therefore, of the people of the United States I make these remarks. I should like to vote in compliment to my friend from Pennsylvania for his bill, but under the circumstances I believe it will be setting a bad precedent, and I think the bill ought to be defeated.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. President, I have not been in the Senate all the while this matter has been under discussion, but I understand this is a claim for interest where the principal claimed to be due has been paid by the Government. That being so, I desire to say a word or two about the importance of adopting a precedent by the payment of interest in this case.

It is only a short time since a bill passed the Senate in quite a similar case, for money claimed to be due a constituent of mine, residing in the State of Connecticut, upon a contract for carrying the mail. I have never heard of the principal only being paid, and I never thought in behalf of my constituent nor did my constituent think of asking for interest in that case. There were some four or five thousand dollars of principal due, which were paid. The case to which I refer is the case of Nancy E. Day, administratrix, and the claim dated back to the 24th of May, 1861, being one month's pay of her husband for carrying the mail upon a contract from New Orleans to Mobile. That has been what Congress has done with regard to all these claims. Congress has not paid interest on claims just as much as it added to interest as this. I have no doubt, and more so. The case of Nancy E. Day, I think, was more entitled to the payment of interest than the one now under consideration, because that was upon a contract, the amount being due for the carrying of the mail one month prior to the time, or at the time when the South set up the so-called Confederate government.

The question of the payment of interest is a very large question, Mr. President. It may be that the Government ought to pay interest in all cases in which it withholds money, but the fact is that it has not done so, and that, whether the rule be founded in equity and good morals or not, the rule is the other way. It is only when some person comes and by persistence in pressing a particular claim induces Congress to pay interest that any exception has been made to the rule. So, as the Senator from Ohio says, there are a few cases in which Congress has allowed interest; but in the innumerable cases where claims have not been paid and the parties have had to come to Congress for payment, no interest has been allowed.

Take the case of claims which are set up by the Indians against the Government, which come to my knowledge by reason of my service on the Committee of Indian Affairs. I believe I am not mistaken in saying that if the rule of paying interest upon such claims as this is to be adopted and settled as the rule of Congress, there are from five to ten million dollars due to the Indians for interest upon their transactions with the Government which should be paid. I merely speak of this to show how large a question this is. It is in my mind as a member of the Committee on Indian Affairs, not yet reported upon—and, of course, I do not know what report will be made—a bill proposing to pay $500,000 of interest, the principal having been paid, which was only $240,000.

In sending a case to the Court of Claims last year the Committee on Indian Affairs provided that the Court of Claims should not consider the question of interest. That was a case in which the principal sum claimed was about $700,000, dating back to 1838, and the interest would have been about a million and a quarter dollars. At this very session claim after claim has been urged upon the Committee on Indian Affairs and the Committee on Appropriations by parties representing Indians, asking for the payment of interest in very much larger sums than the principal sum.

If we are to reverse the rule and provide that the Government shall pay interest on all claims where the payment of money is deferred for any reason and under any circumstances, then let us do it by general act. A general act of that kind would not get five votes in the Senate, in my judgment; it would get scarcely any votes, because the amount which would have to be paid under such a general law would be simply enormous. The rule of the Government having been the other way, I think we should either maintain the rule, or else, if we change the rule, we should change it to make it applicable to all persons.

My reason is there that the party in this case should have the interest paid him, the principal having been paid, which does not exist in the Day case, which I hold in my hand, where the Government paid $3,000 for one month's service under a contract for carrying the mail? So of innumerable other cases. We must have some rule on the subject which will be just and equal to all claimants. It will not do to say that it is just and equitable that this claimant should have this amount of interest and then not provide for the great number of other claimants. If we are going to change the rule, let us change it as to all and not change it as to one.

Mr. HUNTON. One word, Mr. President, and then I shall submit this case to the Senate, so far as I am concerned.

I admit the general practice of Congress has been to deny interest to claimants, but from the foundation of the Government to this time there have been exceptional cases. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] and I laid before the Senate fifty-three of those exceptional cases. How many more there are we do not know and nobody in the Senate can tell me. All I mean to maintain is that this is an exceptional case, as much so as any one of those alluded to in the list produced by me to the Senate, and we ask the Senate to pay interest because it is an exceptional case.

I beg to state to the Senator from Connecticut and to the Senate that two different committees of the House of Representatives have reported that this was an exceptional case and that interest ought to be paid; two committees of the Senate have reported to the Senate that this is an exceptional case and that it ought to carry interest; the Postmaster-General has said it is an exceptional case and ought to carry interest; and the President of the United States has said it is an exceptional case and ought to carry interest. Therefore I hope the Senate will concur in their view that this is an exceptional case, which ought to carry interest and will pass the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, and was read the third time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

EXTENSION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the House joint resolution in regard to the extension of appropriations.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the joint resolution (H. Res. 217) to continue the provisions of existing laws providing temporarily for the expenditures of the Government.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask that the joint resolution may be read the second time by its title.

Mr. ALDRICH. After the second reading I shall object to the third reading of the joint resolution to-day.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the joint resolution be read the second time.

The joint resolution (H. Res. 217) to continue the provisions of existing laws providing temporarily for the expenditures of the Government was read the second time by its title.

Mr. ALDRICH. I object to the third reading of the joint resolution to-day.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection being made, the joint resolution will go over.

BAYOU DES GLAISES AND ATCHAFALAYA RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 7665) to authorize the St. Louis, Avoylees and Southwestern Railway Company to bridge Bayou Des Glaises and Atchafalaya River in the State of Louisiana.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment, in section 7, after the word "Avoylees," to insert "State of Louisiana;" and in line 9, after the words "Red River," to insert "in said State;" so as to read:

That the St. Louis, Avoylees and Southwestern Railway Company, its successors or assigns, be, and is hereby, authorized to construct and maintain a railway bridge and approaches thereto over and across Bayou Des Glaises, in the State of Avoylees, State of Louisiana, and also a railway bridge and approaches thereto over and across the Atchafalaya River, between Melville and the mouth of Red River, in said State, at such point as may be selected by said railway company for crossing said bayou and river with its railroad line, subject to the approval of the Secretary of War.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

BOUNTY LAND WARRANTS—REMOVAL OF BAR OF DISLOYALTY

Mr. GEORGE. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3130) to repeal in part and to limit section 3480 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

Mr. PLATT. I suggest that there is no quorum present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CULLOM in the chair). The absence of a quorum is suggested. The Secretary will call the roll.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Tennessee that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 2 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, August 15, 1894, at 12 o'clock m.

SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, August 15, 1894.

Prayer by Rev. J. H. MCARTY, D. D., of the city of Washington.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following resolution, August 13, 1894:

Resolved, That the order heretofore made requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on H. R. 4864, "An act to reduce taxation to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes," be rescinded; that the conferees heretofore appointed on the part of the House be discharged from further duty in that behalf, and that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendments to said bill and agree to the same.

Ward by the Government, which said sum shall be paid to the said B. D. Greene.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HARRIS. I shall not object to the consideration of this bill, but I give no voice now, until the routine business of the morning hour is concluded. I shall object to the consideration of any other measure.

Mr. GEORGE. I hope the Senator from Tennessee will allow me to get in one bill that I have been trying for a week to have passed.

Mr. HARRIS. As soon as the routine business is over I think every Senator will have an opportunity to call up bills for consideration.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PASCO. I am directed by the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2231) for the relief of B. D. Greene, the bill having the same purpose in view as the bill just passed, to report it adversely. I move that the bill be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. I am directed by the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1095) to authorize the Third Auditor of the Treasury to audit certain quartermaster's vouchers belonging to John Finn, of St. Louis, Mo., to report it favorably with amendments.

The bill is intended to correct a technical mistake in a bill passed in the last Congress, and I ask unanimous consent to place it on its passage.

Mr. HARRIS. What is the request?

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. The bill is intended to correct an error in an act passed in the last Congress, and I hope I may be allowed to have it considered at the present time.

Mr. HARRIS. I have given notice that until the routine morning business is disposed of I shall object to the consideration of any bill.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. By unanimous consent I will withdraw the report for the present.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The report will be withdrawn, if there be no objection.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, I intend to ask leave of absence from the Senate for a few days, and in regard to the resolution which has just been reported adversely, I ask the Senate to take it up for consideration.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Florida asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which has just been reported.

Mr. HARRIS. When routine morning business has been concluded I shall certainly interpose no objection to such request now made.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection being made, the resolution can not now be considered.

INVESTIGATION BY THE COMMITTEE ON COMMERCE.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the following resolution, submitted by Mr. RANSOM on the 10th instant, reported adversely thereon:

Said committee is also hereby authorized to visit and examine such other works of river and harbor improvement on the Mississippi River as they may deem proper, and to report the interest of commerce may demand, and shall have power to subpoena witnesses, to administer oaths and take testimony, to employ a stenographer, and to appoint a sergeant-at-arms from the messengers of the Senate; and that the actual necessary expenses of said committee, properly incurred, shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate in the usual manner.

BILL INTRODUCED.

MARIA HALL.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House an act (S. 253) granting a pension to Maria Hall, widow of Joseph D. Doak, deceased.

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of that bill.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Maria Hall, widow of Joseph D. Doak, deceased, late a private in Capt. Renshaw's company of Tennessee militia from December 6, 1812, to April 20, 1813, and from September 20, 1813, to December 10, 1813.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri for the present consideration of this bill? Mr. KILGORE. I think we have passed that bill two or three times already in this House.

Mr. DE ARMOND. No, sir. It has never been presented before.

Mr. KILGORE. Let the report be read, Mr. Speaker.

The report was read, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 253) granting a pension to Maria Hall, widow of Joseph Doak, deceased, have examined the same and report:

The following facts are established in this case: Soldier performed military service as recited in the bill. Soldier's widow remarried, and for this reason pension was denied her in the Pension Bureau. Claimant is now a widow, aged 90 years, and entirely supported by charity. The bill is a meritorious one, and your committee recommend its prompt passage.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. DE ARMOND, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

MARYLAND AND WASHINGTON RAILWAY COMPANY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a joint resolution (S. R. 96) to extend the charter of the Maryland and Washington Railway Company.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, in the temporary absence of the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. RUSK], I ask unanimous consent that Senate joint resolution be taken up and passed, as the House committee has reported a like measure unanimously.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That the time for building and completing the railroad provided for in an act entitled "An act to incorporate the Maryland and Washington Railway Company," approved August 1, 1880, be, and the same is hereby, extended six months from and after the 1st day of August, 1894.

Mr. HEARD. I only want to say, Mr. Speaker, that this is a road chartered in the State of Maryland to run to the District line, and by Congress to come from that point to the boundary of this city, and this joint resolution extends for six months the time for its construction. I think there can be no objection to it on the part of anybody.

Mr. DINGLEY. Has the work been commenced? Mr. HEARD. I understand that they have commenced work on the road in Maryland, and they ask only six months to complete it to the boundary of this city.

The joint resolution was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HEARD, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed was laid on the table.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. LUCAS, for two weeks, on account of sickness.

To Mr. MCALL, indefinitely, on account of sickness in his family.

To Mr. ROBINS, indefinitely.

To Mr. GORMAN, indefinitely, on account of sickness.

To Mr. COCKRAN, indefinitely, on account of sickness in his family.

To Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee, indefinitely, on account of sickness.

To Mr. CONN, indefinitely, on account of sickness.

To Mr. WELLS, indefinitely, on account of sickness in his family.

To Mr. HOPKINS of Kentucky, indefinitely, on account of sickness in his family.

To Mr. ENLOE, indefinitely, on account of sickness in his family.

To Mr. WHEELER of Alabama, for one week, on account of important business.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

Mr. HULICK, by unanimous consent, obtained leave to withdraw draw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers (a petition for a pension) in the case of Joseph Shaylor, Seventh Congress, no adverse report having been made thereon.

TURNER MERRITT.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 3285) for the relief of the estate of Turner Merritt, late of the parish of East Baton Rouge, La.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Court of Claims be, and it is hereby is, authorized and directed to investigate and feel whether or not Turner Merritt, late of the parish of East Baton Rouge, La., was loyal to the United States during and after the war of the rebellion, and if he was loyal, then and in that event, said court is further authorized and directed to investigate, find, and report to Congress how much cotton, if any, was taken from him and sold by the Federal army in the hands of Turner Merritt, and if it is value then was, and whether any payment has been made therefor, also how much of said cotton was thereafter sold by the Government and for how much, and if it should appear from the testimony to be given in said court, that any witnesses have died whose affidavits are now on file in the case, such affidavits shall be received as evidence and shall be allowed in evidence as if such witnesses had been proper.

An amendment recommended by the Committee on War Claims was read, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That the claim of Turner Merritt, late of the parish of East Baton Rouge, La., for cotton alleged to have been taken from claimant during the war of the rebellion by the United States forces, and used by them in the hands of Port Hudson, be referred to the Court of Claims under the provisions of what is commonly known as the Bowman act, and section 14 of the Act of March 3, 1877, and the said court is further authorized and directed to investigate and report to the House of Representatives as authorized and required by said statutory provisions, reserving to said House of Representatives the right to finally dispose of any claim upon the receipt of said report."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. BARTLETT. I object.

Mr. ROBERTSON of Louisiana. The gentleman, I am sure, will withdraw his objection when he understands that this merely refers the case to the Court of Claims, without binding Congress in any way, shape, or manner to make an appropriation in case the court should pass favorably upon the claim.

Mr. BARTLETT. Is this for cotton seized?

Mr. ROBERTSON of Louisiana. No, sir; it is for cotton used for breastworks in the defense of Port Hudson.

Mr. BARTLETT. By whom?

Mr. ROBERTSON of Louisiana. By Gen. Grant.

Mr. BARTLETT. I object.

STEAMER MARGARITA.

Mr. ADAMS of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 6986) to provide for the American registry of the steamer Margarita.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioner of Navigation is hereby authorized and directed to cause the foreign-built steamer Margarita, of Philadelphia, purchased and owned by an American citizen and repaired by him in the United States, to be registered as a vessel of the United States.

And that the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby is, authorized and directed to authorize and direct the inspection of said steam vessel, steam boilers, steam pipes, and appurtenances of said boilers, and cause to be granted the proper and usual certificate issued to steam vessels of the merchant marine without reference to the fact that the said steam boilers, steam pipes, and appurtenances were not constructed pursuant to the laws of the United States and were not constructed of iron stamped pursuant to the laws of the United States, but to the fact that the said steam boilers, steam pipes, and appurtenances will be the same in all respects as to strength and safety as are required in the inspection of boilers constructed in the United States for marine purposes, save the fact that said boilers, steam pipes, and appurtenances not being constructed pursuant to the requirements of the laws of the United States and are of unstamped iron, shall not be an obstacle to the granting of the usual certificate if said boilers, steam pipes, and appurtenances are found to be of sufficient strength and safety.

Mr. FITHIAN. Is there a report in this case?

The SPEAKER. There is.

Mr. PIGOTT (to Mr. FITHIAN). The bill is all right.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the report be read.

The report (by Mr. PIGOTT) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6986) to provide for the American registry of the steamer Margarita, having considered the same, respectfully report as follows: This steamer was purchased in England by A. J. Drexel, an American citizen, of the Philadelphia and Camden Steamship Company. The steamer has expended in repairs upon the said steamer in an American port the sum of $15,000 and has made and approved plans for the improvement of $30,000, including the cost of having the usual certificate of said steamer, the light, painting, calking, etc., new boilers, and outfitry overhauling the machinery.

During the Fifth, Fifth, and Fifty-second Congresses a large number of vessels were authorized by act of Congress to be registered as vessels of the United States in volume 25 of the United States Statutes at Large, pages 124, 425, and 681. Your committee, having carefully examined all the acts in the case, respectfully recommend that the bill be passed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania for the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. PAYNE. I have no objection to the gentleman making an explanation of the bill.

Mr. ADAMS of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman will not interpose any objection in the way of the patriotism of an American gentleman who wishes to sail under his country's flag, and who has made every effort to do so. Mr. Drexel last summer had an American yacht, which he owned and sailed in, owing to the ill health of his wife, he was ordered to take a trip abroad.

But true to his American instincts, which he had inherited from his father, he brought the ship into our ports, and expended $45,000 additional in an American shipyard to put it in proper condition for the purpose contemplated. He discharged the English captain and the English crew, and in these hard times keeps in constant employment a crew of forty men and a Yankee skipper; and with this natural pride which belongs to a Yankee citizen he comes here now asking Congress, having used every honorable and patriotic effort to get this ship of American build, to be allowed to sail the ship under our own flag and with an American register.

I trust, Mr. Speaker, when these circumstances are known that this courtesy will be extended to him. I trust, in view of the patriotic instincts exhibited by one of our citizens, under such circumstances, who desires to sail under his own flag, as a loyal American citizen, and obey in every way the laws of the bill he contemplates. I trust when these facts are known that there will be no member of this House who will make an objection to the request for unanimous consent to consider the bill. Does any member of this House suppose that I, being the representative in part of one of the great cities of this country, in which are the largest shipping interests in the United States; that I, coming from the city of Philadelphia, full of shipyards, and now building the great American Navy, would dare to rise in this place and introduce a bill or ask consent to have one considered that would hurt in any way American shipbuilding interests?

I hope, therefore, in view of the peculiar circumstances of the case, and the large amount expended in an American shipyard on the remodeling of this yacht, that the strict letter of the law will not be allowed to stand in the way of doing a simple act of justice to an American citizen who desires the privilege of sailing with an American register and under the American flag.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. PAYNE. I object.

OCALA, FLA., PORT OF DELIVERY.

Mr. COOPER of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1885) to extend the privileges of the transportation of dutiable merchandise without appraisement to the city of Ocala, in the State of Florida.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read subject to objection. The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the privileges of the seventh section of the act approved June 1, 1890, governing the transportation of dutiable merchandise without appraisement be, and the same are hereby, extended to the city of Ocala, in the State of Florida. And the said city of Ocala is hereby constituted a port of delivery.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. DOCKERY. Before consent is given to the consideration of this bill, I think there should be some explanation of it. Is this recommended by the Department?

Mr. COOPER of Florida. It is recommended by the Treasury Department.

Mr. DOCKERY. As I caught the reading of the bill it creates some additional officers.

Mr. COOPER of Florida. No. Let me say to the gentleman that this is recommended by the Treasury Department for the reason that Ocala has become a very large cigar-manufacturing point, and they are proposing now to transfer several large cigar factories from Havana to Ocala, if it can be made a port of entry. For that reason, in view of the largely increasing business of the place in this direction, the Department recommends the passage of the bill.

Mr. DOCKERY. What number of additional officers does it create?

Mr. COOPER of Florida. It does not create any that I know of.

Mr. WISE. None whatever.

Mr. DOCKERY. No additional charge on the Treasury?

Mr. COOPER of Florida. No, sir.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, and being read the third time, was passed.

On motion of Mr. COOPER of Florida, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE COLUMBIA RIVER.

Mr. ELLIS of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1772) extending the time for the completion of a railroad bridge over the Columbia River at or near Vancouver, in the State of Washington.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the time for the completion of the bridge across the Columbia River at or near Vancouver, in the State of Washington, under the act of Congress approved August 29, 1890, entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Columbia River by the Oregon Railway Extension Company," be, and the same is hereby, extended until the 15th day of April, 1898.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the Senate bill?

Mr. COOMBS. I would like some explanation first, Mr. Speaker. Has this bill passed the Committee on Interstate Commerce?

Mr. ELLIS of Oregon. It has. It is the unanimous report of that committee. The report is very short. If the gentleman desires he will read. It will state, however, that this is simply the ordinary extension of a franchise which was granted about four years ago.

Mr. COOMBS. It extends the franchise to 1897; quite a long time.

Mr. ELLIS of Oregon. Under the circumstances it is not a long time. The river is very broad, and the company got into some financial difficulties, and is now in the hands of a receiver. Prior to that time the work was partly done. The piers are already built; but it will take some time to complete the superstructure. It is a gigantic enterprise.

Mr. COOMBS. Have there been any protests against it?

Mr. ELLIS of Oregon. None whatever.

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, and being read the third time, was passed.

On motion of Mr. ELLIS of Oregon, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS CONTENTNEA CREEK, NORTH CAROLINA.

Mr. BUNN. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 2303) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Contentnea Creek, Grifton, Lenoir County, N. C., and to establish it as a post-road.

The bill was read.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill; which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. BUNN, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

W. D. MACK.

Mr. HULL. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 68) for the relief of W. D. Mack, a clerk in the Record and Pension Division of the War Department.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That William D. Mack, a clerk in the Record and Pension Office, and a veteran of the late war, who lost both feet in a railroad accident while returning from the anniversary ceremonies to the battle of Gettysburg, on July 4 last, is hereby exempted from the operation of so much of the act approved March 3, 1893, making appropriations for legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, as limits the amount of sick leave with pay that be granted by heads of Departments, and that the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay to said Mack the portion of his salary as has been withheld from September 11 to October 14 (thirty-four days) on account of injuries received in the said railroad accident.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the joint resolution; which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HULL, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS NEWARK BAY.

Mr. DUNN. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 7839) to bridge Newark Bay.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the boards of chosen freeholders of the counties of Hudson and Union, in the State of New Jersey, or the legally constituted authorities of the City of Bayonne and the City of Elizabeth, as may be determined by the authorities of the State of New Jersey, now or hereafter to be granted, shall be, and they or either of them are hereby, authorized to locate, build, equip, and operate a bridge across Newark Bay, in the State of New Jersey, between the city of Elizabeth, in the county of

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HENRY J. HEWITT.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1274) for the relief of Henry J. Hewitt.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. MANDERSON. I shall not object to the consideration of that bill, but I should like to know why at this late day it is necessary to pass a bill of that character?

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the report be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. PEPPER July 11, 1894:

The Committee on Claims, having had under consideration the bill (S. 1274) for the relief of Henry J. Hewitt, respectfully report as follows:

The facts in the case are set out in House Report No. 58, Fifty-first Congress, first session, when the Committee on War Claims reported favorably. That report was adopted as part of the report of the Committee on War Claims of the House of Representatives of the Fifty-second Congress (see House Report No. 2157, Fifty-second Congress, second session), and again by the same committee of the Fifty-third Congress, second session (see House Report No. 559, all of which are hereto attached and made a part of this report).

Your committee will add that there appears to be an equity in this case arising out of laches for which the claimant is not responsible. He appears to have acted in good faith, and in view of the facts in relation to the status of the claimant and the use to which at least part of his property was applied, the committee see no reason why he should not have an opportunity to present his case to the proper officers for investigation and report.

Your committee therefore recommend the passage of the bill.

[House Report No. 376, Fifty-third Congress, second session.]

The Committee on War Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3337) for the relief of Henry J. Hewitt, submit the following:

The facts in the case were presented in the Fifteenth Congress, and was favorably reported upon by the House Committee on War Claims, to whom it was referred.

After a careful investigation of the facts involved, your committee adopt the report of the Fifty-second Congress, a copy thereof being hereto attached and made a part of this report, and recommend that the bill do pass.

[House Report No. 2157, Fifty-second Congress, second session.]

The Committee on War Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4696) for the relief of Henry J. Hewitt, submit the following report:

The facts out of which this bill for relief arises will be found stated in House Report from the Committee on War Claims of the Fifty-first Congress, hereto annexed and made a part of this report.

Your committee report that the facts above stated are true, and report herewith a substitute for the bill and recommend its passage."

[House Report No. 268, Fifty-first Congress, first session.]

The Committee on War Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1849) for the relief of Henry J. Hewitt, report as follows:

The affidavits of the claimant, Henry J. Hewitt, and ten other persons, several of them ex-Union officers and soldiers, and two or three of them employees of claimant in carrying the United States mails during the years 1862, 1863, 1864, and 1865, show that a large quantity of forage and several horses and wagons belonging to claimant were taken by the United States military authorities in Northern Missouri during the years named. It also appears that at the time this forage and these horses and wagons were taken the claimant was a subcontractor for carrying the United States mails in Northern Missouri and Southern Iowa, one of these mail routes being No. 10481, and it is alleged by claimant in his affidavits that this personal property, so taken, was purchased by him for the purpose of fulfilling his contract in carrying the United States mails over the several mail routes.

The affidavits also allege that the hotel, storehouse, and barn owned by claimant at Macon City, Mo., and the barn owned by him at Lancaster, Mo., were seized during the years above named by the United States military forces.

It also appears from the evidence on file that very soon after the war the claimant placed his claim in the hands of A. Slingerland, clerk of the court of Macon City, Mo., for the purpose of having it filed in the proper Department and prosecuted; that a short time subsequent thereto Mr. Slingerland was ordered to visit for the benefit of his impaired health, and while there he died; that the claimant supposed that his claim had been properly filed by Mr. Slingerland in his lifetime, and did not learn to the contrary until some years after his death and too late to file the same in the proper Department.

Your committee believe that this delay in presenting this claim was not due to any laches on the part of the claimant, and in view of the allegation that the articles taken were purchased by him for the purpose of fulfilling his contract to carry the United States mails, he should in all equity have the same opportunity as other loyal claimants have heretofore had to establish the justice of his claim.

Your committee are therefore of the opinion that the claim of Henry J. Hewitt should be investigated by the Quartermaster's Department, United States Army, as other claims of this character have heretofore been investigated.

They accordingly report herewith a bill as a substitute for the bill (H. R. 1849), and recommend that the same do pass.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CLERKS IN HEALTH DEPARTMENT, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the joint resolution (S. R. 101) providing for clerical assistance in the health department of the District of Columbia; which was read the first and second time.

Mr. DOCKERY. I ask unanimous consent that this resolution be now considered. It will take but a moment.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide for clerical assistance in the health department of the District of Columbia," approved October 2, 1893, are hereby continued and declared to be in full force and effect from July 1, 1894, until the date of the approval of the act making appropriations for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year 1895.

Mr. DOCKERY. These clerks are already provided for; but this resolution is made necessary by the decision of the Comptroller, who thinks they are not entitled to pay for the time mentioned.

There being no objection, the resolution was considered, ordered to a third reading, and being read the third time, was passed.

REFERENCE OF SENATE BILLS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House bills of the Senate of the following titles; which were severally referred as indicated, namely:

A bill (S. 1713) to permit Commodore Louis C. Sartori, now on the retired list of the Navy, to be rear-admiral on said list, in accordance with his original position on the Navy Register—to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. JOSE of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of that bill.

Mr. SAYERS. I hope the gentleman will allow it to remain on the table for the present until we dispose of the pending conference report.

The SPEAKER. In the absence of objection the bill will remain on the table.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The report and the accompanying bill will be printed and referred to the House Calendar.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I now call up the conference report on the general deficiency appropriation bill?

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the bill. The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 7477) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, and for prior years, and for other purposes.

Mr. SAYERS. I yield four minutes of the time allowed for debate to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. SNOOKBASS]. Mr. SNOOKBASS. Mr. Speaker, in the short time yielded to me I do not hope to be able to discuss all of the questions relative to the Senate amendment appropriating $1,800,000 to the Southern Pacific Railroad Company. It is important to know, however, who constitutes this company, and what the company is. This is the "blanketed" company. This is the company that for thirty years has been engaged in a conspiracy

A bill (H. R. 7294) empowering fourth-class postmasters to administer oaths to pensioners;

A bill (H. R. 7685) to authorize the St. Louis, Avoyelles and Southwestern Railway Company to bridge Bayou Des Glaisses and Atchafalaya River, in the State of Louisiana; and
A joint resolution (S. R. 101) providing for clerical assistance in the health department of the District of Columbia.

LAND SUBDIVISIONS IN THE DISTRICT.

Mr. GALLINGER. The bill (S. 1005) to prevent the recording of subdivisions of land in the District of Columbia in the office of the Recorder of Deeds was called up by me a few days ago and was read at length. It will take but a moment to pass it, and there is urgency in the matter. I ask for its present consideration.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. CULLOM presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Gilchrist, Ill., and a memorial of sundry citizens of Galva, Ill., remonstrating against appropriating Government moneys for sectarian Indian education, etc.; which were referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

HOME FOR DESTITUTE COLORED PERSONS.

Mr. TURPIE. I ask unanimous consent to call up for present consideration the bill (H. R. 7695) to provide for the erection of a national home for aged and infirm colored persons and for the maintenance of the inmates thereof.

Mr. HARRIS. The routine morning business must be concluded before I can consent to the consideration of any bill.

Mr. TURPIE. One bill has already been considered.

Mr. HARRIS. I was not aware of it, and I regret that I was not.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there are no further petitions or memorials, the reports of standing and select committees are next in order.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. PASCO, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1793) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Robert Roby, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. PUGH. I am directed by the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7461) to amend an act entitled "An act to create a new division of the northern judicial district of Georgia," approved March 3, 1891, to report it favorably and to ask for its immediate consideration.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let it be read for information.

Mr. PUGH. The bill simply changes the time of holding the district court at Columbus, Ga., from January and June to May and December.

Mr. HARRIS. If I may be permitted to make some reports from a committee, I shall have no objection to the consideration of bills that Senators want to pass.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Reports of committees, standing and select, are in order.

Mr. McLAURIN. I am directed by the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2318) for the relief of B. F. Berry, to report it with an amendment. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill. It will take but a minute.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. HARRIS. I have objected to one or two before, and I can not discriminate between Senators.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the calendar.

DUTY ON SUGARS, ETC.

Mr. HARRIS. I am directed by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7971) to exempt from duty sugars, molasses, etc., to report it with an amendment.

Mr. CHANDLER and Mr. PLATT. Let the amendment be read.

Mr. HARRIS. Let the bill go to the Calendar, and the amendment will be read, of course, if Senators desire it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment of the committee need be read.

The SECRETARY. The committee report to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That from and after the passage of this act there shall be levied, collected, and paid on all sugars and on all tank bottoms, sirups of cane juice, or of beet sugar, and on all molasses, including molasses, and concentrated molasses, a duty of 40 per cent ad valorem.

That there shall be levied, collected, and paid on molasses testing above 40 and not above 56 polariscope a duty of 2 cents per gallon; if testing above 56 polariscope, a duty of 4 cents per gallon.

Mr. MANDERSON. I should be greatly pleased if the Senator from Tennessee, who reports the bill thus amended, would inform the Senate concerning the amendments that were referred with the bill to the committee. I am prompted to make this request for the reason that so far as the bounty amendment is concerned that received the approval of a majority of the Senate. While there was not final action upon the resolution of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] it was very evident that a majority of the Senate favor a bounty clause. Did the committee consider that matter?

Mr. HARRIS. The committee voted upon it.

Mr. ALLISON. I will say to the Senator from Nebraska that I felt, as I have no doubt the majority of the Senate felt, that its vote was a practical instruction to the committee to report free sugar with a bounty, and I offered that amendment in committee.

Mr. MANDERSON. But a majority of the committee have favored the placing of a duty upon sugar.

Mr. ALDRICH. A duty of 40 per cent.

Mr. MANDERSON. Forty per cent flat, without a bounty.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, I desire to say a word with reference to the report just made. What action did the committee take upon the amendment which I offered for the repeal and cancellation of the revenue bill? Was that acted upon?

Mr. HARRIS. Perhaps the briefest, and the most pertinent, inquiry as respectful an answer as I could give to these various inquiries may be found in the fact that the committee has reported the bill back with an amendment; and that is really all that I need say.

Mr. CHANDLER. I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. HARRIS. But I will say to the Senator from New Hampshire that there was a majority of the committee decidedly opposed to his amendment.

Mr. CHANDLER. I wish to ask a parliamentary question, and that is whether the rejected amendments should not be reported back from the committee and go upon the Calendar? Have not those amendments some parliamentary status notwithstanding they have been treated with contumely by the committee?

Mr. COCKRELL. Oh, that is ridiculous. That has never been done.

Mr. CHANDLER. I do not want the Senator from Missouri to answer a question that I ask the Senator from Tennessee. I am willing to take the ruling of the Chair. I should prefer that always when I make these inquiries, but the Chair does not always have an opportunity to answer.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Tennessee reports back the bill, and it will go to the Calendar.

Mr. CHANDLER. What is the status of the amendments which were referred to the committee and not reported back, I ask the Chair?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has no information in regard to amendments not reported by the committee.

Mr. HARRIS. If the Senator from New Hampshire will allow me, I think I may safely say—

Mr. CHANDLER. I do not need to allow the Senator. The Senator need not ask my permission to make the statement. I will allow him with pleasure, although I might prefer that he should not make it.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, it is the most innocent of all innocent statements; but neither the Senator from New Hampshire nor any other man who has served here for three hours ever heard of an amendment that was not favorably considered by a committee being reported back as a report.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President—

Mr. HARRIS. I propose to report some other bills from the committee.

Mr. CHANDLER. I will only say that I apologize for my ignorance, having never heard here more than three hours, in not knowing the rule which the Senator has laid down. I have not studied parliamentary law as much as he has, and I regret if it has given the Senator any pain, or agonized him to any degree whatsoever, that I made the inquiry.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I rise—

Mr. HARRIS. I want to put on record my certificate that the Senator from New Hampshire was not ignorant. Other motives controlled him than that of ignorance. I propose to report the following bill—

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I rise to the report heretofore made by the acting chairman of the Committee on Finance, and I think I am entitled to be recognized before other reports are received.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Oregon upon the bill just reported.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I desire to give notice that if the bill just reported by the acting chairman of the committee is ever called up, when it is called up, and at the proper time, I shall offer an amendment to the bill, proposing to incorporate in it the provisions of the act of 1880 relating to the duty on wool.

Mr. QUAY. When the bills were laid on the table immediately after they were received from the House of Representatives I offered as an amendment to each one of the four the McKinley actentire. That amendment seems to have disappeared. It has not received the action or indorsement of the committee. I inquire of the Senator from Tennessee what has become of my amendments, because I intend to bring them when these bills come up for consideration? They are not in print.

Mr. CULLOM. Those are small amendments that were lost in committee.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon subsequently said: I now submit the proposed amendment to House bill 7971, which I shall offer at the proper time, placing a duty on wool. I ask that it be printed.

Mr. HARRIS. Let it be printed and lie on the table.
Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Let it be printed and lie on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WHITE in the chair). The amendment will be printed and laid on the table.

COAL AND COKE.

Mr. HARRIS. I am directed by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7968) to place upon the free list bituminous coal, shale, slack, and coke, to report it with an amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask that the bill may be read as proposed to be amended before it goes to the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment of the committee will be read.

The SECRETARY. The committee report to add at the end of the bill the following proviso:

Provided, That upon bituminous coal and shale and coal slack or culm, and coke, imported from any country, whether independent or a dependency, which imposes a duty upon bituminous coal, shale, coal slack or culm, or coke, exported from the United States, there shall be levied and collected the rate of duty existing prior to the passage of this act.

FREE IRON ORE.

Mr. HARRIS. I am directed by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7969) to place upon the free list all ores of iron, to report it without amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

FREE FENCING WIRE, ETC.

Mr. HARRIS. I am directed by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7970) to place upon the free list barbed fencing wire and all wire rods for the manufacture of the same, to report it with an amendment.

Mr. CULLOM. Let us have the bill read, so that we may see how it stands as proposed to be amended.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment of the committee will be stated.

The SECRETARY. The committee report to strike out all after the word "duties," in line 3, in the following words:

BARBED FENCING WIRE.

Whereas rods of iron imported for the manufacture of barbed wire fencing under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

Barbed fencing wire and all other fencing wire or strips, round, flat, or twisted, of iron or steel, and all wire rods of iron or steel, when imported for the manufacture of such fencing, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

So as to make the bill read:

Whereas rods, etc., that from and after the passage of this act, the following articles, when imported into the United States, shall be admitted free of import duties: Barbed fencing wire and all other fencing wire or strips, round, flat, or twisted, of iron or steel, and all wire rods of iron or steel, when imported for the manufacture of such fencing, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

Mr. ALLISON. I think the Senator from Tennessee who reports this bill ought to explain to the Senate that as the bill came from the other House it did not put fencing wire upon the free list, but put the material of which fencing wire is made on the free list, in order to give those who manufacture fencing wire free material. There was no provision in the bill as passed by the House whereby fencing wire or barbed wire should be made free. On the contrary, the very reverse of it was provided for, namely, that the material used should be made free, while the duty remained upon barbed wire.

Mr. HARRIS. It is true that the construction the committee placed upon the House bill was that it made iron or steel rods free, but did not make barbed wire free; and therefore the committee has reported in lieu of the House bill the provision which has been read.

Mr. CULLOM. I inquire of the Senator from Iowa whether the Senate has not once or twice voted in favor of a duty on all these articles, both the barbed wire and the iron of which the wire is made?

Mr. ALLISON. I think I ought to say, as respects all these bills, that after a very sharp contest upon each of them in the Senate, the Senate by a decided majority voted in favor of a duty. Thereafter, I think, three times, with only 4 dissenting votes, for a duty upon coal and iron ore. Finally, upon a test with the House of Representatives, on the motion of the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL], but 6 votes could be found in this body in favor of putting iron ore or bituminous coal upon the free list.

As to barbed wire, I think I ought to say that the tariff bill as it came to us from the other House, known then as the Wilson bill, provided for a duty of 25 per cent ad valorem upon iron and steel rods and upon fencing wire. The Senate, in the final adjustment of that paragraph, reduced the duty from the amount provided by the House. A very sharp contest was made in favor of a duty upon fencing wire, in which my friend from Illinois [Mr. PALMER], on the opposite side of the Chamber, took the lead; and after a very full and thorough debate, by a fair majority the Senator from Illinois was sustained in his contention, and we provided for a duty upon steel rods and also upon the wire. The Senator from Illinois nearest me [Mr. CULLOM] must remember that a duty was placed upon all these articles after a very sharp and close contest and thorough debate in this body; and the committee now practically reverses the conclusions of the body made within six weeks on all of them.

Mr. HARRIS. At the request of the chairman of the Committee on Finance, and with the approval of the committee, I ask for the following order—

Mr. ALDRICH. Before the bills which have just been reported pass from the consideration of the Senate to the Calendar—

Mr. BERRY. Is the bill up for consideration now—the barbed-wire bill or any other bill? Is it before the Senate to be considered at this time?

Mr. ALDRICH. I desire to make a statement for the minority of the committee in regard to—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill is not before the Senate, the Chair will state to the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. HARRIS. I hope the Senator from Rhode Island will be permitted to make a statement as a member of the committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will recognize the Senator from Rhode Island, but the Chair was answering the parliamentary inquiry of the Senator from Arkansas. The bill is not before the Senate for consideration at this moment. The Senator from Rhode Island will proceed.

Mr. ALDRICH. From my position I say that the bills just reported reversed the views of the majority of the committee and are not consented to but are antagonized by the minority members of the committee.

I wish to say another word upon the bill which came from the other House, in regard to barbed wire, and which shows the value which can be attached to this precipitate action in favor of tariff reform by the House of Representatives. The disposition and desire as expressed here was to put barbed wire upon the free list, to reduce the profits of the barbed-wire manufacturers for the benefit of the farmers of the United States. The bill as it came from the House of Representatives maintained the duties upon barbed wire unchanged at a very high ad valorem rate, but gave those manufacturers free materials, thereby increasing enormously their profits in the manufacture of barbed wire, without reducing the price to any consumer anywhere in the United States.

This, I think, is a better than any argument can the nature of the movement for tariff reform which has been so precipitately entered upon in another place.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. President, I beg but a moment to make a single remark. Nothing, I think, illustrates the value of an amendment of the rules of the Senate more conspicuously and specifically than the remarks made by the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON]. The bills to which they have referred are not before the ENTRY OF LANDS FOR CERTAIN PURPOSES.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present a conference report on the bill (H. R. 7451) to authorize the entry of lands for gravel pits and reservoir purposes and authorizing the grant of way for pipe lines.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the statement, which perhaps will be satisfactory without the reading of the report. The Clerk read the statement of the House conferees, as follows:

STATEMENT.

The first amendment of the same makes it certain that no land except that which is now subject to entry under the laws of the United States and not occupied can be disposed of under section 1 of this act.

The second amendment provides for a forfeiture of the title to the United States for nonuses for a period of two years.

The third amendment allows the sale for reservoir purposes in quantities not exceeding one-quarter section of unoccupied public lands not reserved for public use, but reserves all mineral and all lands suitable for reservoir site heretofore reserved, or that may be hereafter reserved. It also vests in the Secretary of the Interior the power to declare a forfeiture for a violation of any of the conditions upon which lands suitable for reservoir or water-storage purposes are sold under this act. It vests in the Secretary of the Interior authority to withdraw other reservoir sites upon the application of any State, county, or district, or organization, and to allow them the use thereof for the storage of water for irrigation, mining, or useful purposes.

THOS. C. MCRAE,
ROBERT NEILL,
JOHN F. LACEY.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I hope the report will be agreed to.

The conference report was agreed to.

REPUBLIC OF HAWAII.

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House consider a resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk, which I am directed by the Committee on Foreign Affairs to report favorably, and I ask that joint resolution No. 210 lie on the table. The joint resolution reported is in lieu of joint resolution No. 210.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution congratulating the Republic of Hawaii.

Resolved, etc., That the United States of America congratulates the Republic of Hawaii on the peaceful assumption of the powers, duties, and responsibilities of self-government, as indicated by the recent adoption of a republican form of government.

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution reported favorably from the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request for the consideration of this resolution?

Mr. GROSVENOR. I think that some later time had better be fixed for the consideration of this, so as to give us time to make arrangements about it.

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, we have consumed much time in discussing Hawaiian affairs, and I do not suppose any one desires to open the debate again. I do not, and I hope that the resolution, which is simply a resolution to congratulate the Hawaiian Republic on having peacefully assumed the duties and responsibilities of self-government, will be allowed to pass without debate.

Mr. PAYNE. I understand that some members of the minority of the Committee on Foreign Affairs desire to discuss this resolution, and I think it would be better to let it go over. Otherwise I shall have to object.

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky. If the resolution is not agreed to, there is no danger that it will not be acted upon by both Houses at this session.

Mr. PAYNE. They have waited so long that I think they can wait another day. I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

MRS. MARTHA FRANK.

Mr. LAWSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to consider the bill (H. R. 7002) to pension Mrs. Martha Frank.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension roll, subject to the regulations and provisions of law governing the payment of pensions, the name of Mrs. Martha Frank, widow of William Frank, member of the company of Capt. John Little in the Indian war of 1850.

The amendment recommended by the committee was read as follows:

Add after line 8 the words "and allow her a pension rate of $75 per month."

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. I would like to ask the gentleman if this bill has been considered in Committee of the Whole at a Friday night session?

Mr. LAWSON. It has not. On account of the adjournment over last Friday there was no opportunity to consider it in Committee of the Whole. The bill was reported last week.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. Why was it not considered earlier?

Mr. LAWSON. This lady is 100 years old and quite indigent, and whatever is to be done must be done soon to be of any benefit to her.

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. What is the age of the applicant?

Mr. LAWSON. Over one hundred years.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request for the consideration of this bill?

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, I do not desire to object; but I want to ask the gentleman from Georgia why arrears of pension is proposed to be given in this bill. I understand the bill grants a pension from a date prior to the passage of this act. I also understand the practice of Congress to be only to grant pensions from the date of the passage of the act.

Mr. LAWSON. I propose to put her on the same footing with other pensioners of the Indian wars.

Mr. LOUD. I think it had better be considered at a Friday night session. [Cries of "Oh, no!"]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California objects.

B. J. VAN VLECK.

Mr. HAUGEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the consideration at this time of the bill which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The bill was read, as follows:

A bill (H. R. 3402) for the relief of B. J. Van Vleck, administrator of Henry Van Vleck, deceased.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Treasurer of the United States shall pay out of any money in his hands not otherwise appropriated, to B. J. Van Vleck administrator of Henry Van Vleck, deceased, or to his duly authorized attorneys in fact, the sum of $4,550.20, being the amount due said Henry Van Vleck at the time of his death as a balance on account of extra work done on the locks of the Ste. Marie Canal, in Michigan, with interest thereon from October 2, 1882, the date of approval of said claim by the Secretary of War.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

Mr. SAYERS. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. HAUGEN. Mr. Speaker, I want to say to the gentleman from Texas that this bill has been approved by the War Department.

Mr. SAYERS. I object to the passage of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

EXTENSION OF CHARTERS OF BUSINESS CORPORATIONS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk and put upon its passage a bill with reference to business corporations in the District.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent for the consideration of a bill which the Clerk will report, after which the Chair will ask if there be objection. The bill has just come from the Senate.

The bill was read, as follows:

A bill (S. 233) to amend section 553 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to the District of Columbia.

Be it enacted, etc., That section 553 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to the District of Columbia, be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding to said section the following provision:

"That any corporation heretofore or hereafter organized under the provisions of this section may renew its charter for any stated number of years, not exceeding twenty, by filing in the office of the recorder of deeds of the District of Columbia a certificate in writing signed by a majority of its trustees, and duly acknowledged, certifying that at the last regular meeting of the stockholders held prior to the date of such certificate, or at a special meeting called for that purpose, the stockholders of such company, by a vote of at least two-thirds of all the shares of the stock of the company, resolved to renew the charter thereof for a period designated by them: Provided, That the proposed renewal shall be approved by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in writing indorsed on said certificate: And provided, That a duly authenticated copy of the resolution of the stockholders in respect to such renewal shall be acknowledged by the recorder of deeds."

The filing of such certificate so approved shall be and operate as a renewal of such charter for the specified time therein. The charter so renewed may afterwards be renewed from time to time: Provided, That no one renewal shall be for a longer period than twenty years, and that each renewal shall be authorized by the stockholders and be subject to the approval of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in the manner hereinbefore provided.

"The provisions of section 553 of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to the District of Columbia shall apply to the record of all certificates of renewal of charters authorized by this act."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request to consider this Senate bill?

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to have some explanation of this bill before consent is given.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. I will explain it in a moment. By existing law the limitation on the existence of corporations in the District of Columbia is twenty years. There are corporations whose charters are about to expire under that limitation. There is no provision of law now for the renewal of those charters. This bill simply provides that these existing corporations, which are business corporations, may renew their charters for another twenty years with the consent of the Commissioners and of the stockholders of the respective companies.

Mr. COOMBS. I understand this bill does not apply to railroads?

Mr. COBB of Alabama. It does not. It relates to business corporations. The bill allows them to petition for an extension. The bill has been examined by the House Committee on the District of Columbia and reported favorably, and now comes from the Senate.

Mr. BLAND. Under what law are they extended now? Mr. COBB of Alabama. They can not be extended now. They have to apply for a new charter, which puts business enterprises to a good deal of trouble.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this Senate bill? (After a pause.) The Chair hears none.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. COBB of Alabama, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

Mr. BLAND. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman withhold that motion until the enrolled general deficiency bill comes in? The Chair understands it is about ready.

Mr. BLAND. I withdraw that motion, but demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded. The regular order is the call of committees for reports.

TO PROVIDE FEMALE HELP WITH SEATS.

Mr. DEARMOND, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the bill (S. 1841) to provide that all persons employed favorably in stores, shops, offices, or manufactories shall provide seats for the same when not actively employed; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

EXCLUSION AND DEPORTATION OF ALIEN ANARCHISTS.

Mr. BOATNER, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the bill (S. 2314) to provide for the exclusion and deportation of alien anarchists; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

CONGRATULATING THE REPUBLIC OF HAWAII.

Mr. MCCREARY of Kentucky, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported a joint resolution (H. Res. 225), in lieu of H. Res. 210, congratulating the Hawaiian Islands on their peaceable assumption of the power of self-government, and recognizing that Republic as free, sovereign, and independent; which was referred to the House Calendar, and, with accompanying report, ordered to be printed, and House resolution was ordered to lie on the table.

LEAD ORE AND SILVER LEAD ORES.

Mr. TARSNEY, from the Committee on Ways and Means, reported favorably the bill (H. R. 7362) to amend paragraph 165, Schedule C, of an act of August—, 1894, entitled "An act to reduce taxation, to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes"; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows: To Mr. TURNER of Georgia, indefinitely, on account of sickness.

To Mr. McLAURIN, indefinitely, on account of sickness in his family.

EXCLUSION OF ALIEN ANARCHISTS.

Mr. BOATNER. Mr. Speaker—
The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?
Mr. BOATNER. I rise to move to suspend the rules and pass Senate bill 2314.

The SPEAKER. The Chair cannot recognize the gentleman to move to suspend the rules.

Mr. BLAND. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to: and the House accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 53 minutes p. m.) adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, August 23, 1894.

The House met at 12 o'clock m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. E. B. BAGBY.

The Journal of the proceedings of Tuesday was read and approved.

RECORDING LAND SUBDIVISIONS, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 1005) to prevent the recording of subdivisions of land in the District of Columbia in the office of the Recorder of Deeds.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be considered now.

I will state, if I may be allowed to make a brief explanation, that the existing law on this subject is so drawn as to make evasion possible. Maps or plats of subdivisions in the District of Columbia may now be recorded in two places; that is, in the office of the recorder of deeds, and also in the office of the surveyor of the District. The District Commissioners have sent to the committee a letter, in which they urgently recommend the passage of the Senate bill, which provides that these maps or plats shall be recorded only in one place. That, it would seem, is ample for all purposes in connection with the matter. It makes reference to such subdivisions more convenient, while the present system, which authorizes their recording in two places, simply involves unnecessary expense, and has heretofore led to considerable confusion in the opening of streets through such subdivisions.

I ask that the letter from the Commissioners be read in connection with the statement I have made, to show the urgency of this matter.

A MEMBER. Is this recommended by the District Committee?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The chairman of the committee [Mr. HEARD] a few moments ago asked me to make this motion. He is temporarily absent from the Hall.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection the letter to which the gentleman from Tennessee refers will be read.

The letter was read, as follows:

OFFICE OF COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
Washington, August 22, 1894.

DEAR SIR: The Commissioners of the District of Columbia have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the bill (H. R. 1005) to prevent the recording of subdivisions of land in the District of Columbia in the office of the Recorder of Deeds, and to express their appreciation of the interest of the House of Representatives in the subject. The Commissioners are of the opinion that the bill is of great importance, and they are of the opinion that it is of great importance that it should be passed as soon as possible.

Very respectfully,

JOHN W. ROSS,
Recorder of Deeds.

Hon. JOHN T. HEARD,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, after which the Chair will ask if there be objection to its present consideration.

The bill was read, as follows:

It enacted, etc. That hereafter it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to record any map or plat of the subdivision of land in the District of Columbia in the office of the recorder of deeds for said District, whether such map or plat be attached to a deed or other document or is offered separately for record.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. PAYNE. I understand from the reading of this bill that it refers to maps or plats only, and not deeds.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Yes; that is correct. Under some construction of law they have been authorizing these subdivisions to be recorded in two places.

Mr. PAYNE. I do not understand from the language of the bill whether it has reference to the recording of deeds or not.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. No; it refers to maps or plats.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be again read, if there be no objection.

The bill was read at length.

Mr. PAYNE. That is all right.

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, and being read the time, was passed.

On motion of Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

B. F. BERRY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 2318) for the relief of B. F. Berry.

Mr. KYLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of this bill.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, after which the Chair will ask for objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

It enacted, etc. That the Secretary of the Interior be directed to issue to B. F. Berry, of Simpson County, Miss., a patent to the east half of the northwest quarter of section 34, township 2 north, range 2 east, Choctaw meridian, situated in said Simpson County, Miss., conveying to said B. F. Berry the title of the United States to said land upon his payment to Lloyd M. Kelley, of said county, of the sum of money paid by said Kelley into the land office at Jackson, Miss., for said land on the 23d day of April, 1894.

Sec. 2. That this act take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. PAYNE. Has this been considered by the House committee?

Mr. KYLE. Mr. Speaker, it has not been considered by the committee, but with the consent of the House, I think I can explain very briefly the purpose of the bill, and then there will be no objection to it. There is no appropriation involved in it.

Sometime between 1850 and 1860 the land mentioned in the bill was preempted, or the party who applied for it supposed he had preempted it, and it has been continuously held and occupied by him and those who held under him. In the early part of 1875 B. F. Berry, the party named in the bill and for whom relief is sought by it, purchased the land and since then has greatly improved it.

Last spring Lloyd M. Kelley, a neighbor of Berry's, learned that in the original entry a clerical mistake had been made in the description of the land. In other words, another quarter section had through mistake been described in the papers, and the land which Berry thought he was entering, and which has been held and occupied and improved by him and those under whom he holds, was left out, and Kelley homesteaded it.

Now, the bill simply provides that Berry, upon the payment of the fees, etc., due the United States, and the payment to Kelley of the amount paid out by him, may homestead the land. There certainly can not be any objection to it.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading; and being read the third time, was passed.

On motion of Mr. KYLE, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

REFERENCE OF SENATE BILL.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 2038) for the relief of Oklahoma settlers; which was referred to the Committee on the Public Lands.

ESTATE OF LELAND STANFORD.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 2307) to require the prompt prosecution and speedy determination of the claim of the United States against the estate of the late Leland Stanford.

Mr. CULBERSON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of that bill.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, subject to the right of objection.

The bill was read at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. MAGUIRE. I object.

Mr. CULBERSON. Then I ask its reference to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be so referred.

HUTCHISON AND SOUTHERN RAILROAD.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (S. 2290) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act granting the right of way to the Hutchison and Southern Railroad Company through the Indian Territory.'"

Mr. DUBBOCK. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of this bill; and I shall be glad to say a word in explanation of it, if any gentleman so desires.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc. That the provisions of section 2 of the act entitled "An act to amend an act granting the right of way to the Hutchison and Southern Railroad Company through the Indian Territory," approved February 3, 1892, be, and the same hereby are, extended for a further period of three years.

There being no objection, the House proceeded to the consideration of the bill; which was read three times, and passed.

On motion of Mr. DUBBOCK, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

PETER HAGAN.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the joint resolution (H. Res. 79) for the relief of Peter Hagan.

The SPEAKER. This is a House bill, which has been returned from the Senate with an amendment. If no gentleman desires to make any motion respecting the bill, it will be referred to the Committee on Claims.

The bill was referred accordingly.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills and a joint resolution of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 6529) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the St. Croix River, between Wisconsin and Minnesota;

A bill (H. R. 2842) to reimburse George C. Tanner, land consul, etc., the sum of $200, paid by him for rent of rooms; and

THE JOURNAL.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the Journal of day before yesterday and the Journal of yesterday be dispensed with.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. HARRIS. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. GEORGE. Will the Senator from Tennessee allow me to request a leave of absence for my colleague?

Mr. HARRIS. I yield to the Senator from Mississippi for a moment.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. GEORGE. I ask that an indefinite leave of absence be granted to my colleague [Mr. McLaurin], on account of serious illness in his family.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and an indefinite leave of absence is granted to the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. McCLARIN].

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. HARRIS. I renew my motion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Tennessee, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After twenty-five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. JARVIS was, on his request, granted leave of absence for the remainder of the session.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. QUAY (for Mr. CAMERON) presented petitions of Council No. 109, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of McKeesport; Council No. 328, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of Harrisburg; Council No. 507, Junior Order United American Mechanics, of Port Marion; of Trade and Labor Council, of Reading; and of C. G. Creel, of Port Marion, all in the State of Pennsylvania, praying for the passage of the so-called Stone immigration bill; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also (for Mr. CAMERON) presented sundry memorials of citizens of Brush Creek Valley, Hamburg, Broadtop, Philadelphia, and Lemout, all in the State of Pennsylvania, remonstrating against appropriating Government moneys for sectarian Indian education, etc.; which were referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

BITUMINOUS COAL AND IRON ORE.

Mr. COCKRELL. I present a communication from the Acting Chief of the Bureau of Statistics of the Treasury Department, transmitting certain reports relative to imports and exports of bituminous coal and imports of iron ore for the last twenty years. I move that the communication be printed as a miscellaneous document.

The motion was agreed to.

CAPT. W. H. BIXBY.

Mr. ALDRICH. I am directed by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7434) directing the issue of a duplicate of a lost check drawn by Capt. W. H. Bixby, Engineers, United States Army, at Newport, R. I., in favor of Messrs. Hughes Brothers & Bangs, to report it without amendment, and to ask for its present consideration.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

I. H. HATHAWAY & CO.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I am directed by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (S. 232) for the relief of I. H. Hathaway & Co., to report it without amendment, and to ask for its immediate consideration.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. The preamble recites that Thomas H. Handbury, major Corps of Engineers, United States Army, on the 14th of June, 1894, issued a check, numbered 266798, for $10,115.34, on the assistant treasurer of the United States at New York, in favor of I. H. Hathaway & Co., in payment of contract work done at the mouth of St. Johns River, Florida, which check is alleged to have been lost in transmission through the United States mails between St. Augustine, Fla., and Philadelphia, Pa.; and that the act of February 16, 1885, amending section 3646, Revised Statutes of the United States, authorizing United States disbursing officers and agents to issue duplicates of lost checks, applies only to checks drawn to $2,500 or less.

The bill instructs Maj. Handbury to issue a duplicate of the original check, under such regulations in regard to its issue and payment as have been prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury for the issue of duplicate checks under the provisions of section 3646, Revised Statutes of the United States.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. MANDERSON. I introduced a bill for the senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN], and I desire that it shall appear the bill is introduced by him, by request.

The bill (S. 2324) to consolidate the five regiments of the artillery of the Army with the Marine Corps of the Navy into a corps of marine artillery, and to organize the field artillery of the Army, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. PUGH introduced a bill (S. 2325) supplementary to an act entitled "An act for publishing a report of appeal for the District of Columbia and for other purposes," approved February 9, 1893; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. QUAY (for Mr. CAMERON) introduced a bill (S. 2326) to place James T. Peale on the retired list of the United States Army; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PENNSYLVANIA STATE CLAIM.

Mr. QUAY. On behalf of my colleague [Mr. CAMERON], who is necessarily absent, I introduce a joint resolution, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The joint resolution (S. R. 104) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to cause the proper accounting officers of the Treasury to reexamine the settlement of the Second Comptroller of May 22, 1893, of the claim from the State of Pennsylvania for expenses incurred in aiding the United States to suppress the late insurrection, etc., was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc. That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, required to cause the proper accounting officers of the Treasury to reexamine the settlement by the Second Comptroller of May 22, 1893, of the claim of the State of Pennsylvania for expenses incurred in aiding the United States to suppress the late insurrection, and which settlement is provided for in the act of Congress approved July 27, 1861 (12 Stats., 276), which directs "that the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to the governor of any State, or to his duly authorized agents, the cost, charges, and expenses properly incurred by such State for enrolling, subsisting, clothing, supplying, arming, equipping, paying, and transporting its troops employed in aiding to suppress the present insurrection," and to report the amount expended in crediting such payments as have been made to the State for the purposes mentioned in said act on account of troops employed by the governor in aiding the United States to suppress the said insurrection, or of the aid actually given by other of the military agents of the governor and being within the authority conferred upon governors of States by General Orders numbered 75 of 1861 and 18 of 1862, of the War Department, by which they are authorized to organize and prepare troops for the service as they may judge advantageous for the interests of the General Government and are made the lawful authority for raising volunteers. Including such payments as were made by the State upon claims presented against the State for the use of fair grounds and buildings occupied by troops for recruiting and other purposes.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to have the Senator from Pennsylvania make a little explanation of the object of the joint resolution.

Mr. QUAY. I never saw the resolution until it was handed to me this morning on behalf of my colleague. The object is to correct some errors which were made in settling the account of the State of Pennsylvania under the direct tax.

Mr. HUNTON. It merely calls for a report, I understand.

Mr. QUAY. It is an instruction to the Secretary of the Treasury to reopen and reexamine the settlement and correct errors, if there are errors. That is all of it.

Mr. ALDRICH. Does the joint resolution come from a committee?

Mr. QUAY. No, it does not.

Mr. ALDRICH. It seems to me it is a pretty important matter to consider without reference to a committee if it undertakes to instruct any officers of the Government as to what they shall do.

Mr. QUAY. If the Senator objects to its consideration the joint resolution can go over.

Mr. ALDRICH. I think it ought to go to a committee.

Mr. QUAY. Very well.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

CORRECTION OF ERROR.

Mr. COCKRELL introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 105) to change the initials of a name in the Indian appropriation bill; which was read the first time by its title.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was read the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc. That the appropriation to pay "F. G." Niedrhuhs for beef cows delivered at Fort Peck Agency be corrected to read "W. F." Niedrhuhs.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WORLD'S COLUMBIAN COMMISSION DIPLOMAS.

Mr. LINDSAY introduced a joint resolution (S. R. 106) authorizing the printing of the blank diplomas authorized by section 3 of the act of March 3, 1893, the names of the persons is simply for the purpose of bringing the list down to date from the point where Mr. Poore's work stops.

Mr. SAYERS. Who is to prepare the list?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. It has been prepared, as I understand, under direction of the Senate committee.

Mr. SAYERS. Does the bill only provide for printing the list, or does it also provide for paying some employee for preparing it?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I ask that the bill be again read, Mr. Speaker.

The Clerk again read the bill as above.

Mr. SAYERS. I have no objection to the passage of the bill, provided it does not carry an appropriation for an official who is already drawing a salary. If the gentleman will put in a provision that no portion of the money appropriated shall be paid to any person who is now drawing a salary from the Government, I shall not object to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. As I have already said, the catalogue down to a certain date was prepared by Ben: Perley Poore, who for many years before I came to Congress was clerk of the Joint Committee on Printing, and this bill simply provides that the work shall be continued by his successor in office, the present clerk of the joint committee.

Mr. SAYERS. Who is he?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. T. W. Cox. He is clerk of the Senate Committee on Printing and also of the joint committee.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I wish to say a word right here. There will be found in one of our appropriation bills an appropriation to pay this same official $1,200 in addition to the salary which he already receives.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. If the gentleman means the clerk of the House Committee, he is very much mistaken.

Mr. SAYERS. I do not mean the clerk of the House committee, but the clerk of the joint committee.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. That being understood, I want to say that this is a Government publication and a very necessary one, a catalogue of Government publications. If it is a necessary publication, it must be compiled by some one. Now, if you are going to pay some outside party to do this work, you might just as well pay an employee of the House or the Senate, whose duties do not compel him to attend to this business. I have no personal interest in the matter, but I regard this as a necessary publication.

Mr. SAYERS. I will remind the gentleman that he was one of the committee who reported the bill which has now become a law preventing persons who draw official salaries from receiving additional compensation from the Government unless specially authorized to do so.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. That is exactly what we want to do here: we want to give special authority by this bill.

Mr. SAYERS. I will agree to the consideration of the bill provided the gentleman will strike out the provision for the extra payment of this officer and insert simply a provision to pay for the printing.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. But who will do the work? Who is going to compile this catalogue?

Mr. SAYERS. I understood the gentleman to say that the work has already been done.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Not at all. Now, who is going to compile this catalogue of Government publications, running back to 1851, without compensation?

Mr. SAYERS. If you propose to pay the very same officer who is now drawing a large salary.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. If the clerk of the Joint Committee on Printing is drawing salary, he is drawing it for his services as such clerk. Now, if we want this work done somebody must be paid for doing it.

Mr. BLAND. What is the necessity for this work anyway? I never saw any good in publications of this kind.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. We have a great lot of publications—many thousands—and we have no way of knowing what they are. The work here proposed is simply a catalogue to show the publications made by the Government. That is all there is in it. I have no personal interest in the matter. If members of Congress do not want this publication, they can object to this resolution.

In reply to my friend from Texas, let me say that if we put duties upon an officer, I can see no reason why we should not pay him for such service just the same as we would pay a third party.

Mr. SAYERS. I will answer the gentleman.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. One moment. My friend from Texas has said, if I understood him, that he would not object to authorizing this work to be done if some person not an employee of the Government is to do the work.

Mr. SAYERS. The gentleman knows very well—and I ask him to correct me if I make a misstatement—that there are clerks and employees in the Departments here who are in the habit of getting up data on one subject or another and then asking from Congress an appropriation to pay for the preparation and publication of such matter.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The gentleman is correct in that remark. A number of such applications have been before the Printing Committee; but not one has been favorably reported to the House, because we did not believe such work was necessary. But it seems to me members do want a catalogue of Government publications; and if we want it, then we ought to be willing to pay for it.

Mr. BLAND. I have heard a great deal about these "catalogues," and have seen some of them. I believe that about the only utility they have is to inform the junk-shop dealers what publications we are making, so that they may get hold of them. I think we ought to discountenance this whole business, and ought to repeal any law which authorizes it.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. We ought to quit printing the documents, if we are not going to catalogue them so that they may be made accessible and useful.

Mr. BLAND. I think if we would quit printing them it would be still better.

Mr. COLFORD. I would like to ask my friend from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON] whether the gentleman who prepared the former catalogue of this kind was paid extra for the work?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. He was. That work was done by Ben: Perley Poore, who was for many years clerk of the Joint Committee on Printing.

Mr. BLAND. I object to the consideration of the resolution.

Mr. PEARSON, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills and joint resolutions of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

Joint resolution (H. Res. 223) to correct an error in the act entitled "An act to amend an act granting a pension to Elizabeth Voss;"

A bill (H. R. 2342) to reimburse George C. Tanner, late consul, etc., the sum of $200, paid by him for rent of rooms;

A bill (S. 2290) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act granting the right of way to the Hutchinson and Southern Railroad Company through the Indian Territory.'"

WINNEBAGO INDIANS, MINNESOTA.

Mr. MCCLARY of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 7731) for the relief of certain Winnebago Indians in Minnesota.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read, subject to the right of objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Whereas by the fourth section of an act entitled "An act for the removal of the Winnebago Indians, and for the sale of their reservation in Minnesota for their benefit," approved February 21, 1853, it was made the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to allow to said Indians in severalty "lands which they may respectively cultivate and improve, not exceeding 90 acres to each head of a family other than to the chiefs, to whom larger allotments may be made, which lands, when so allotted, shall be vested in said Indian and his heirs, without the right of alienation, and shall be evidenced by patent;" and

Whereas by the ninth section of the Indian appropriation act approved July 15, 1870, the Secretary of the Interior was "directed to cause to be investigated and to determine the claims of certain Indians of the Winnebago tribe now lawfully residing in the State of Minnesota; to issue patents, without the right of alienation, to those of them whom he shall find to be entitled thereto for the lands heretofore allotted to them in severalty," etc.; and Whereas by the Indian appropriation act approved May 21, 1872, it was declared to be the intention and meaning of said ninth and tenth sections of the act of 1870 "to authorize and direct the Secretary of the Interior to cause to be patented to each and every Winnebago Indian lawfully resident in the State of Minnesota at the date of this act, in accordance with the conditions of said two sections, an allotment of land," etc.; and

Whereas such a restriction for all time, without the right of alienation, by anyone, under any circumstances, is an entailment upon the land, which it is not deemed to be desirable: Therefore

That the Secretary of the Interior be and he is authorized to issue patents, without the right of alienation, to said lands, with the consent and approval of the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. HOLMAN. Before consent is given to the consideration of the bill, Mr. Speaker, I wish to inquire who reported it to the House?

The SPEAKER. The report was made by the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. PICKLER].

Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. MCCLARY of Minnesota, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

CLAIM OF WEST VIRGINIA.

Mr. ALDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution (H. Res. 119) to direct the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to the governor of the State of West Virginia the sum appropriated by the act of Congress entitled "An act to credit and pay to the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia all moneys collected under the direct tax levied by the act of Congress approved August 5, 1861."

The SPEAKER. The joint resolution will be read, after which the Chair will ask if there be objection to its present consideration.

The joint resolution was read at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this resolution?

Mr. PAYNE. I object.

I. H. HATHAWAY & CO.

Mr. REYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 7685) for the relief of I. H. Hathaway & Co.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be read subject to the right of objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Whereas it appears that Thomas H. Handbury, major Corps of Engineers, United States Army, did on the 14th day of June, 1894, issue a check numbered 25978 for $10,115.34 on the assistant treasurer of the United States at New York in favor of I. H. Hathaway & Co. in payment of contract work done at mouth of St. Johns River, Florida, which check is alleged to have been lost in transmission through the United States mails between St. Augustine, Fla., and Philadelphia, Pa.; and

Whereas the provisions of the act of February 16, 1885, amending section 3746, Revised Statutes of the United States, authorizing United States disbursing officers and agents to issue checks of lost checks, apply only to checks drawn to $2,500 or less: Therefore

Be it enacted, etc., That the said Thomas H. Handbury, major Corps of Engineers, United States Army, be, and he is hereby, instructed to issue a duplicate of said original check under such regulations in regard to the date and payment as have been prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury for the issue of duplicate checks under the provisions of section 3746, Revised Statutes of the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SAYERS. I understand that this bill is merely to authorize the issuance of a duplicate check to these parties, the original never having been paid?

Mr. REYBURN. That is correct. The check was sent to the contractors, but was lost in transmission through the mail. Payment was stopped at the assistant treasurer's office in New York, and the money has never been paid to these parties.

Mr. SAYERS. Does this bill provide for the execution of the ordinary guaranty bond required in such cases?

Mr. REYBURN. It does.

Mr. LOUD. This bill is drawn under the statutory provision in such cases.

Mr. REYBURN. The contractor must give surety in double the amount of the payment.

Mr. LOUD. It is in the usual form.

Mr. McMILLIN. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania permit me to ask a question?

Mr. REYBURN. With pleasure.

Mr. McMILLIN. I wish to ask what time this loss occurred? I was not able to gather from the reading of the bill, owing to some confusion in the Hall.

Mr. REYBURN. This check was issued on June 14, 1894.

Mr. McMILLIN. Are the facts set forth in the report?

Mr. REYBURN. The report states them briefly.

Mr. McMILLIN. I think, perhaps, you had better have the report read.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the report.

The report (by Mr. MUTCHLER) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7685) for the relief of I. H. Hathaway & Co., for check No. 25978, drawn by Thomas H. Handbury, major, Corps of Engineers, United States Army, on the assistant treasurer of the United States at New York, issued June 14, 1894, in favor of I. H. Hathaway & Co., report as follows:

It appears by your committee, from the evidence submitted, that the said check was mailed, and since that time no trace of it has been found. Payment on said check was duly stopped on June 19, 1894. Under the present law no duplicate check can be drawn for a larger amount than $2,500, and the only remedy for the sufferers of this character is by special act.

Your committee therefore recommend that the bill do pass.

Mr. McMILLIN. What bond does this act require?

Mr. LOUD. The usual statutory bond.

Mr. McMILLIN. That is to say, double the amount of the sum lost?

Mr. REYBURN. Yes. In other words, the contractor must give bond in the sum of $20,000, and is compelled to wait six months after the passage of the act before he can secure the money.

Mr. HUDSON. How long would he have to wait under the law before a duplicate check could be issued?

Mr. REYBURN. It would require a special act of Congress to issue a duplicate check if the amount exceeds $2,500.

Mr. McMILLIN. The reason I asked was, I wished to know whether this bond was adequate, inasmuch as the amount is not specified?

Mr. REYBURN. I understand it is required by a regulation of the Department.

Mr. LOUD. This check is to be paid under the usual statutory provision.

Mr. McMILLIN. I think the gentleman is mistaken in that. How can it be?

Mr. LOUD. Well, the bill provides that it shall be paid under the regulations prescribed in the statutes, except as to the amount of the check, of course.

Mr. McMILLIN. Then the statute requires that the bond shall be double the amount of the check lost?

Mr. LOUD. That is correct.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. REYBURN, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

PUBLIC BUILDING, NEWARK, N. J.

Mr. ENGLISH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 4796) supplemental to an act entitled "An act to authorize the purchase of additional ground in Newark, N. J., adjoining the custom-house and post-office building, and for the improvement thereon and the erection of additions thereto," approved March 1, 1888.

The bill was read at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

Mr. SAYERS. I object.

PROPERTY LOST IN THE MILITARY SERVICE OF THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. HERMANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 75) to extend the time for filing certain claims for compensation for horses and other property lost in the military service of the United States.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of Congress approved January 9, 1883, or any statute in relation hereto, so enacted, shall not be deemed to prohibit the receiving or adjudication of a claim for compensation for property lost in the military service of the United States, whenever filed, when such loss is a matter of record in any official record in the custody of the War or Treasury Departments: Provided, however, That this act shall not be construed to extend to any classes of property other than those for the loss of which compensation has been authorized by now existing laws.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. CATCHINGS. Mr. Speaker, let the report be read.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the report can be read.

The report (by Mr. HERMANN) was read, as follows:

The Committee on War Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1759) to extend the time for filing certain claims for horses lost in the service, etc., report as follows:

This bill provides that the statutes of limitations enacted January 9, 1883, shall not be deemed to prohibit the receiving and adjudication of claims for compensation for property lost in the military service of the United States, when such loss is a matter of record in any official record in the custody of the War or Treasury Departments, which has been filed and certified to by the proper officers prior to January 1870, provided that the classes of property referred to shall be such only as for which compensation has been authorized by now existing laws.

The first section of the act of January 9, 1883, which is referred to in the bill, extends the time for filing claims for horses and equipments lost by officers and enlisted men in the military service of the United States, which expired by limitation December 31, 1875, one year from the passage of the act; the second section of said act of January 9, 1883, extends the time for filing all claims arising under the act of March 3, 1849, entitled "An act providing for the payment of horses and other property lost or destroyed in the military service of the United States, and all acts amendatory thereof," one year from the passage of the act.

The committee are of opinion that the bill is just, especially as its provisions exclude all classes of property other than those for the loss of which compensation has been authorized by now existing laws. Your committee are in favor of the bill, and recommend its passage. Your committee therefore report the bill to the House and recommend its passage.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I should like to have an explanation of that bill.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the gentleman from Oregon will be permitted to make a brief explanation.

Mr. HERMANN. I will state that this bill only applies to such claims as have been authorized by existing law, and as to which there is evidence on file in the Department, properly certified by the certifying officers. It is merely to complete the evidence of such claims as are now of record, but which the recent statute of limitations excludes.

Mr. SAYERS. I shall have to object to any bill of that kind.

Mr. HERMANN. It does not apply to any new claims whatever.

Mr. SAYERS. I object to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The question was taken; and, on a division (demanded by Mr. McKAIG) there were—ayes 80, noes 13.

Accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 53 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Monday next.

Especially we commend to Thy heavenly goodness Thine honored servant, the Vice-President, and the members of his family. Most heartily we bless Thee that his home has been saved; and we pray that his beloved daughter may speedily be restored to health and soundness, and that the family may be complete and sheltered beneath Thy wing.

PRESIDENT'S ANNUAL MESSAGE.

At 1 o'clock and 32 minutes p. m. Mr. O. L. PREBLEN, -R- 21

the President of the United States, appeared in person.

Mr. President, I am directed by the President of the United States to deliver to you a message in writing.

The message was received from the Secretary and handed to the President.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the message of the President of the United States, which the Secretary will read.

The Secretary (Mr. WILLIAM R. COX) read the message, as follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

The assemblage within the nation's legislative halls of those charged with the duty of making laws for the benefit of a generous and free people impressively suggests the exacting obligation and incommensurable responsibility involved in their task. At the threshold of such labor how to be undertaken by the Congress of the United States and in the discharge of an executive duty enjoined by the President, I submit this communication, containing a brief statement of the condition of our national affairs, and recommending such legislation as seems to me necessary and expedient.

The history of our recent dealings with other nations, and our peaceful relations with them at this time, additionally demonstrate the advantage of consistently adhering to a firm but just foreign policy, free from envious or ambitious national schemes and characterized by candor and sincerity.

During the past year, pursuant to a law of Congress, commissioners were appointed to the Argentine Industrial Exposition. Though the participation of American manufactures fell far short of completely illustrating our national industry and industrial achievements, yet it was quite creditable in view of the brief time allowed for preparation.

We have endeavored to press upon the Belgian Government the needlessness and positive harmfulness of its restrictions upon the importation of certain of our food products, and have strongly urged that the rigid supervision and inspection under our laws are amply sufficient to prevent the exportation from this country of diseased cattle and unwholesome meat.

The termination of the civil war in Brazil has been followed by the general prevalence of peace and order. It appearing at an early stage of the revolution that its course would not be attended with influences on the part of this Government, our naval force in the harbor of Rio de Janeiro was strengthened. This precaution, I am assured, tended to restrict the issue to a simple trial of strength between the Brazilian Government and the insurgents, and to prevent complications which at times seemed imminent. Our firm attitude of neutrality was maintained to the end. The insurgents received no encouragement of eventual action from our commanders, and such opposition as they encountered was for the protection of our commerce and was clearly justified by public law.

A serious tension of relations having arisen at the close of the war between Brazil and Portugal by reason of the escape of the insurgent Admiral da Gama and his followers, the friendly offices of our representatives to those countries were exerted for the protection of the subjects of either within the territory of the other. Although the Government of Brazil was duly notified that the commercial agreement existing between the United States and that country based on the third section of the tariff act of 1890 was abrogated on August 28, 1894, by the taking effect of the tariff law now in force, that Government subsequently notified us of its intention to terminate such arrangement on the 1st day of January, 1895, in the exercise of the right reserved in the agreement between the two countries. I invite attention to the correspondence between the Secretary of State and the Brazilian minister on this subject.

The commission organized under the convention which we had entered into with Chile for the settlement of the outstanding claims of each Government against the other adjourned at the end of the period stipulated for its continuance, leaving undetermined a number of American cases which had been duly presented. These claims are not barred and negotiations are in progress for their submission to a new tribunal.

On the 17th of March last a new treaty with China in further regulation of emigration was signed at Washington, and on August 13 it received the sanction of the Senate. Ratification on the part of China and formal exchange are awaited to give effect to this mutually beneficial convention.

A gratifying recognition of the uniform impartiality of this country toward all foreign states was manifested by the coincident request of the Chinese and Japanese Governments that the agents of the United States should, within proper limits, afford protection to the subjects of the other during the suspension of diplomatic relations due to a state of war. This delicate office was accepted, and a misapprehension which gave rise to the belief that in affording this kindly modified protection our agents would exercise the same authority which the withdrawn agents of the belligerents had exercised was promptly corrected. Although the war between China and Japan endangers no policy of the United States, it deserves our anxious consideration, by reason of its disturbance of our growing commercial interests in the two countries and the increased dangers which may result to our citizens domiciled or sojourning in the interior of China.

Acting under a stipulation in our treaty with Korea (the first concluded with western power) I felt constrained at the beginning of the controversy to tender our good offices to induce an amicable arrangement of the initial difficulty growing out of the Japanese demands for administrative reforms in Korea, but the unhappy precipitation of actual hostilities defeated this kindly purpose.

During the destructive war between the two most powerful of the eastern nations, and among them that our commercial interests in these countries may be preserved and that the safety of our citizens there shall not be jeopardized, I would not hesitate to lend our intercession that our friendly aid for the honorable termination of hostilities would be agreeable to both belligerents.

A convention has been finally concluded for the settlement by arbitration of the prolonged dispute with Ecuador growing out of the proceedings against Emilio Santos, a naturalized citizen of the United States.

Our relations with the Republic of France continue to be such that no real basis of national antagonism long between us by friendly sympathy and similarity in their form of government.

The recent cruel assassination of the President of this sister Republic called forth such universal expressions of sorrow and condolence from our people and Government as to leave no doubt of the depth and sincerity of our attachment. The resolutions passed by the Senate and House of Representatives on the occasion have been communicated to the widow of President Carnot.

Acting upon the reported discovery of Texas fever in cargoes of livestock and fresh meats from this country has been revived. It is hoped that Germany will soon become convinced that the prohibitive measures needless as it is harmful to mutual interests.

The German Government has protested against that provision of the German tariff act which imposes a discriminating duty of one-tenth of 1 cent a pound on sugars coming from countries paying no export bounty thereon, claiming that the exaction of such duty is an intervention of articles 5 and 6 of the treaty of 1825 with Prussia.

In the interests of the commerce of both countries, and to avoid even the accusation of treaty violation, I recommend the repeal of so much of the statute as imposes that duty, and I invite attention to the accompanying report of the Secretary of State containing a discussion of the questions raised by the German protest.

Early in the present year an agreement was reached with Great Britain concerning instructions to be given to the naval commanders of the two Governments in Bering Sea and the contiguous North Pacific Ocean, for their guidance in the execution of the award of the Paris Tribunal of Arbitration and the enforcement of the regulations therein prescribed for the protection of seal life in the waters mentioned. An understanding has also been reached for the payment by the United States of $425,000, in full satisfaction of all claims which have been made by Great Britain for damages growing out of the controversy as to fur seals in Bering Sea, or the seizure of British vessels engaged in taking seal in those waters. The award and findings of the Paris Tribunal to a great extent determined the facts and principles on which these claims should be adjusted, and they have been subjected by both Governments to a thorough examination upon the principles as well as the facts which they involve. I am convinced that a settlement upon the terms mentioned would be an equitable and advantageous one, and I recommend that provision be made for the prompt payment of the stated sum.

Thus far only France and Portugal have signified their willingness to adhere to the regulations established under the award of the Paris Tribunal of Arbitration.

Preliminary surveys of the Alaskan boundary and a preparatory examination of the question of protection of food-fish in the contiguous waters of the United States and the Dominion of Canada are in progress.

The boundary of British Guiana still remains in dispute between Great Britain and Venezuela. Believing that its early settlement, on some just basis alike honorable to both parties, is in the line of our established policy to remove from this hemisphere all causes of difference with powers beyond the sea, I shall renew the efforts heretofore made to bring about a restoration of diplomatic relations between the disputants and to induce a reference to arbitration of the dispute. Britain has shown no conspicuous favors in principle and respects in practice and which is earnestly sought by her weaker adversary.

TUESDAY, December 4, 1894.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.

NATHAN F. DIXON, a Senator from the State of Rhode Island; JOHN MARTIN, a Senator from the State of Kansas, and WILLIAM D. WASHBURN, a Senator from the State of Minnesota, appeared in their seats to-day.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

EXPENDITURES AT SPRINGFIELD ARMY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting a statement of the amounts expended at the United States Army at Springfield, Mass., during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1894; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

REPORT OF COURT OF CLAIMS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a list of judgments rendered by that court and the amounts thereof for the year ended November 30, 1894; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented a memorial of sundry transportation and elevator companies of St. Louis, Mo., remonstrating against the passage of House bill No. 5645, relating to the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at St. Louis; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. PERKINS. I present a petition of the Nicaragua Canal Convention of California, praying Congress to enact such legislation as shall procure the prompt construction of the Nicaragua Canal under the control of the Government. Inasmuch as the convention was composed of representatives from the various commercial, manufacturing, and agricultural organizations of the State, I move that the petition be printed, and that it lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PERKINS. I present a similar petition from the Humboldt Chamber of Commerce, of Eureka, Cal. I move that the petition lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. LODGE presented resolutions adopted by the senate and house of representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, relative to the extermination of the gypsy moth; which were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented resolutions adopted by sundry citizens of Boston and of New England, at a mass meeting held August 29, 1894, at Faneuil Hall, Boston, remonstrating against lynching, lawlessness, and mob violence in the United States; which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. PEPPER. I present the petition of J. E. Platts and 69 other citizens of the United States. The petitioners do not give their exact locality, but I see that the petition is upon a printed form, and I assume, therefore, that it has come in a regular way. The petition sets forth certain alleged offenses which the petitioners charge against the Attorney-General of the United States, and prays that some sort of judicial action may be taken in the premises. I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. DOLPH. I present a petition of citizens of Coburg, Oregon, praying that no extension of time be given to the bond-aided railroad companies for payment of the Government debt; that at the earliest moment the real-estate debt be foreclosed, and that the railroads be purchased and operated by the United States. I think that this matter is still pending before the Committee on Pacific Railroads, and I move that the petition be referred to that Committee.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PALMER. I present a resolution adopted at a meeting of Union No. 16, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, of Springfield, Ill., favoring the passage of House bill No. 7756, authorizing the appointment of a nonpartisan commission to collate information and to consider and recommend legislation to meet the problems presented by labor, agriculture, and capital. I move that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CULLOM. I present a resolution similar to the one just submitted by my colleague; which I move be also referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The motion was agreed to.

MARY MARTIN.

Mr. GALLINGER. I am directed by the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1219) granting a pension to Mary Martin, to report it favorably. As this report was mislaid near the close of the last session, and as it is the only private pension bill favorably acted upon by the committee which was not passed, I ask for its immediate consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read for information.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the act of June 27, 1890, the name of Mary Martin, widow of William Martin, late of Company 1, Fourth Regiment of Rhode Island Volunteers; Provided, That in the event the soldier returns this pension shall cease.

Mr. COCKRELL. What does the proviso mean?

Mr. GALLINGER. The facts show that the soldier made application for a pension in 1863. His application is on file in the Pension Office, but he has not been heard from since. He can not be found, and it is believed that he is dead. The evidence points to that fact. This is a House bill. I will say to the Senator from Missouri, and it is protected as well as can be done under the circumstances.

Mr. HARRIS. The bill proposes to pension the widow?

Mr. GALLINGER. It is a bill pensioning the widow.

Mr. HUNTON. I desire to ask if this bill has come from the Committee on Pensions of the Senate.

Mr. GALLINGER. It has come by a unanimous vote from the Committee on Pensions, having passed the House of Representatives.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

By unanimous consent, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. PALMER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2320) granting a pension to Mrs. Harriet L. Mayo, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. VOORHEES. I am directed by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (S. 55) to repeal so much of the act of July 14, 1890, as provides for the purchase of silver, to report it adversely, and ask its indefinite postponement, the subject having been disposed of.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be postponed indefinitely, in the absence of objection.

Mr. VOORHEES. I am also directed by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1) to repeal a part of an act approved July 14, 1890, entitled "An act directing the purchase of silver bullion and the issue of Treasury notes thereon, and for other purposes," to report it adversely, and to ask the same order, the subject having been disposed of.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be postponed indefinitely.

Mr. VOORHEES. I am further directed by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (S. 438) directing the discontinuance of the purchase of silver bullion, to report it adversely, asking the same order for the same reasons.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be postponed indefinitely.

Mr. VOORHEES. I report back, by authority of the Committee on Finance, a number of amendments offered and intended to be proposed to House bill 4864, the tariff bill, during the last session. The amendments are yet pending, and I ask that they may be indefinitely postponed, because the subject-matter has been disposed of.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendments will be indefinitely postponed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

The bill (S. 2332) to authorize banking on capital secured by a pledge of real-estate securities; to secure depositors against loss; to enlarge the volume of circulating money; to provide a flexible currency, and to establish safe and profitable depositories for the savings of the people, was read twice by its title, and ordered to lie on the table.

The bill (S. 2333) to provide coin for the payment of outstanding Government bonds was read twice by its title, and ordered to lie on the table.

BOUNTY ON SUGAR CROP OF 1894.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I submit a resolution which I ask may be read and lie upon the table for the present.

The resolution was read, and ordered to lie on the table and to be printed, as follows:

Whereas the sugar crop of 1894 in the United States was predicated upon the act of Congress approved October 1, 1890, granting a bounty of 14 cents per 100 cents per pound upon sugars produced and manufactured in the United States;

And whereas eight months of the calendar year of 1894 had expired before the repeal of the bounty law aforesaid;

And whereas at the time of said repeal the larger part of the sugar bounty for 1894 had already been earned by the planting and cultivation of the crops of cane, beets, sorghum, and maple sap from which sugar is manufactured, and by the expenditure of the money necessary to the successful prosecution of the industry for the year 1894; Therefore,

Resolved, That the Committee on Appropriations be, and is hereby, instructed to report an amendment to the appropriation deficiency appropriation bill to be passed in the present session, providing for the appropriation of a sum of money sufficient to pay to the sugar producers of the United States the bounty on the sugar crop of 1894, after the expiration of the act of 1890.

AMENDMENT OF THE RULES.

Mr. VEST. I submit a resolution and ask that it be read and then lie on the table. I give notice that I shall call it up to-morrow for the purpose of submitting some remarks on the resolution and asking the action of the Senate upon it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Amendment intended to be proposed to the rules of the Senate, namely: Add to Rule IX the following section:

Sec. 2. Whenever any bill, motion, or resolution is pending before the Senate as unfinished business, and the same shall have been debated on divers days, amounting in all to thirty, it shall be in order for any Senator to move that a time be fixed for the taking up of such bill, motion, or resolution; and such motion shall not be amendable or debatable, but shall be immediately put, and if adopted by a majority vote of all the members of the Senate, shall have effect as such bill, motion, or resolution, with all the amendments thereto which may have been proposed at the time of such motion, shall be had at the date fixed in such original motion without further debate or amendment, except by unanimous consent; and during the pendency of such motion to fix a date, and also at the time fixed by the Senate for voting upon such bill, motion, or resolution, no other business of any kind or character shall be entertained, except by unanimous consent; until such motion, bill, or resolution shall have been finally acted upon."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will lie on the table.

Mr. LODGE. I wish to offer a resolution.

Mr. SHERMAN. What disposition was made of the proposition just read?

Mr. CULLOM. It was laid on the table.

Mr. VEST. I asked that it might lie over until to-morrow, when I propose to speak upon the subject and request the action of the Senate on the resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It has been so ordered.

Mr. SHERMAN. All right.

AFFAIRS AT BLUEFIELDS.

Mr. LODGE submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the President be requested, if not incompatible with public interest, to send to the Senate any reports or correspondence relating to affairs at Bluefield in the State of West Virginia; and also to inform the Senate whether any American citizens have been arrested or the rights of any American citizens at Bluefield have been interfered with during the past two years by the Government of West Virginia.

HAWAIIAN AFFAIRS.

Mr. LODGE submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Navy be instructed to send to the Senate any reports or letters of Rear-Admiral J. G. Walker in reference to the Sandwich Islands.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 1839) to provide that United States railroad corporations shall, for the purpose of jurisdiction, be deemed citizens of the respective States into which their line of railway may extend; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE MYRON B. WRIGHT.

The message also conveyed to the Senate the announcement of the death of Hon. Myron B. Wright, late a Representative from the State of Pennsylvania, and communicated to the Senate the resolutions of the House thereon.

Mr. QUAY. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the resolutions which have just been received from the House of Representatives.

by permission of the Secretary of the Interior; and under this bill he will have the same right.

Mr. PICKLER. Does not this bill leave the matter optional with the Secretary?

Mr. MCRAE. It does, just as the present law does.

Mr. PICKLER. Does this bill agree with the present law?

Mr. MCRAE. So far as the bona fide settler is concerned it does substantially. But we do not give the manufacturer the right to cut timber for manufacturing purposes.

Mr. PICKLER. If the gentleman is satisfied he is correct in his construction I have no objection.

Mr. MCRAE. I am positive; by the proviso to the bill the matter is made as clear as the English language can make it.

Mr. LACEY. How long will these timber-cutting permits run?

Mr. MCRAE. I understand that none have been issued for some time; and none will run for more than a year from the date of issue. There are only about thirty in existence, and they will continue in force only from the date of issue, which is shown in the report. It was thought best not to interfere with the rights which have been thus acquired. Since this bill was introduced I understand that new permits have been issued. The particulars as to number, names, and locations can be easily obtained by reference to the report.

Mr. HARTMAN. I would like to offer an amendment which I think the gentleman from Arkansas will probably accept.

The SPEAKER. In the absence of objection the committee amendment which has been read will be considered as agreed to.

Mr. MCRAE. I have examined the amendment of the gentleman from Montana [Mr. HARTMAN], and I have no objection to it.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the amendment sent to the desk by the gentleman from Montana.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "minerals," in line 27, insert "and all persons engaged in the business of mining."

The SPEAKER. In the absence of objection this amendment will be considered as agreed to.

Mr. MCRAE. It is yielded as it was ordered accordingly.

Mr. MCRAE. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. BELL].

Mr. BELL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, if I remember rightly the act which this bill proposes to amend was passed because of the great difficulties arising in the Western States from a suspension of titles. During the latter part of Mr. Cleveland's former Administration there was a suspension of the issue of final patents to Government lands, the effect of which was to arrest improvements in Colorado in various other States. Then, furthermore, no one can cut timber in either of these States specified here because of the fact that every man does not own a sawmill. This act, as I understand it, was passed for the purpose of taking the right of the Government to interfere with titles after five years, and, in the second place, the provisions of the act relative to cutting timber, or allowing the defense that the timber was cut for the purpose of use in the State where it was cut, were enacted so that a sawmill man might cut timber for an entire community of ranchmen or miners. But when you strike out this provision of the law, as is now contemplated, every man must have his own sawmill or be able to cut his own lumber, or else under the provisions of this act it can not be cut at all.

As the law stands now, Mr. Speaker—and we have a case of that kind on the Colorado and Utah line to-day, wherein the line had been crossed by a mistake and the lumber cut and brought into Colorado for the purpose of building a great flume for mining purpose, the Government agents say to the parties that they are amenable to the statutes because the lumber was not cut in the State of Colorado, but was really cut across the line in Utah.

Now, this section of the law is to enable a sawmill man to cut lumber for the entire community, or to permit a sawmill man to cut lumber for the miners in a certain region; but the amendment of the law as proposed strikes out that provision, and, when thus stricken out, each man must have his own sawmill or he can not cut timber at all. The hardship under such circumstances is plain. As I have already stated, this section of the statute was provided by reason of the fact that under the former Administration of Mr. Cleveland nearly every entry in our country had been suspended and kept back four or five years. I remember personally my own experience. I had some 6,000 trees I had purchased to plant on the grant I bought two years before, and when the suspension was ordered I was unable to plant them and was obliged to buy another piece of ground on which to put the trees. Naturally, I was unwilling to develop or improve under such circumstances, and for this reason, among others, this remedial statute was provided.

I contend there is no good reason why it should be repealed. It should not be repealed, because the conditions still exist which necessitated the statute; and, the circumstances considered, it should be allowed to stand, at least for the present. Why should the Government suspend these patents after five years if they see proper to do so? The statute of limitations throughout the West is five years, and that is the reason probably why this law was enacted, so far as the limitation of time is concerned. It should not be repealed for the reasons I have stated; it should not be repealed unless it is desired to deprive the people of their right to have a sawmill in the community cutting timber for all the people there. For one, I repeat there is no good reason for its repeal; it ought to stand. I hope that every member on this floor interested in the development of the West will strenuously oppose the passage of this repealing act.

Mr. MCRAE. Mr. Speaker, I only desire to submit a word in response to the gentleman from Colorado, who has just taken his seat.

I did not suppose, sir, that any man in this House would advocate the policy of the Government furnishing free timber to the sawmill owners or manufacturers of lumber in any part of the country. I see no reason why such concerns in certain States, who engage in the milling business, should have free timber supplied by the Government more than other people engaged in a similar business in other parts of the country. Our forests are being destroyed, the lands are rapidly being denuded of timber at a rate that is alarming, even when they have to pay for them; and to now say that the Government should permit the people of Colorado and these other six or seven States to have the right to cut timber free of charge on all of this vast body of the public lands, worth anywhere from $5 to $25 an acre, is passing strange. I can not understand how any man can advocate it as just to the settlers. That any Representative should stand here and advocate such a policy seems to be so unreasonable that it hardly requires an answer. It is asking something for nothing. It is a privilege to one section not allowed in others.

All that this bill does, so far as the individual patents are concerned, is to leave the limitation of six years, and so far as the land grants are concerned it repeals all limitation and allows the Government to correct errors and expose fraud. It prohibits all further permits to take timber from the public domain except for the purposes set forth in the proviso to this bill; that is to say, exclusively for individual use, for firewood, fencing, building, or prospecting purposes. It seems to me that that must be the order ought to have, and that no fair-minded man ought to ask more. I want Congress to emphatically say to the Secretary of the Interior that he shall not hereafter issue a single permit to a man or corporation engaged in manufacturing lumber to cut timber from the public domain free of charge. There is proof already before the Committee of the Public Lands that such privilege in one case was worth as much as $40,000; and, in fact, an informed manufacturer has stated that they would pay that amount for the right which they have been exercising, but there was no authority to take pay. I see no reason why the Government, which should protect the interests of all the people alike, should give away this valuable property without any consideration, and, so far as I am concerned, I intend to protest against it.

I ask the previous question on the bill as amended.

Mr. BOATNER. Before the gentleman demands the previous question I should like to ask a question.

Mr. MCRAE. Certainly.

Mr. BOATNER. Do I understand the gentleman to state that the statute of limitation is to continue to run after the issuance of the patents?

Mr. MCRAE. Yes; with reference to the patents issued to individual settlers.

Mr. BOATNER. That is to say, the Government can not contest a patent except within five years after its issue?

Mr. MCRAE. In six years.

Mr. RAWLINS. I wish to ask the gentleman this question: In certain States there is no provision for the sale or other disposition of the timber land. That is the case in Utah—

Mr. MCRAE. No, that law is general, and applies everywhere.

Mr. RAWLINS. In the timber-land States, but that does not include the Territories.

Mr. MCRAE. I think it is general, and applies everywhere now.

Mr. RAWLINS. Not as the law now is, unless it is affected by this bill.

Mr. MCRAE. Yes, as it is now, without this. It was not originally so, but it was amended in the last Congress, so as to make it of general application.

Mr. COFFEEN of Wyoming. I wish a little time on this, and with the Speaker's permission I wish to ask the gentleman from Arkansas from what quarter is this bill urged?

Mr. MCRAE. It is urged because the Committee on Public Lands think it is a good one. I introduced it on my own responsibility, and the Committee on Public Lands and the Interior Department have indorsed it.

Mr. COFFEEN of Wyoming. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a little time on this.

Mr. MCRAE. How much time does the gentleman want?

Mr. COFFEEN of Wyoming. Three or four or five minutes.

Mr. McRAE. How much time have I?
The SPEAKER. The gentleman has twenty-two minutes.
Mr. McRAE. I will give the gentleman three minutes.
Mr. COFFEEN of Wyoming. Mr. Speaker, I wish to say in general terms that the operation of the timber laws as to the cutting of timber in the West was satisfactory until the passage of the last law—ought to be repealed. Prior to the passage of this law there was constant controversy arising over the stumpage, in the efforts of the Western settlers to get timber for the improvements of their land and claims, as required by law. The requirements of our land laws have compelled settlers to make buildings and improvements, to carry on the development of their claims before they could make proper proof upon the land. That being the case, and no proper provisions having been made for their obtaining timber, this very section 8 was enacted, together with the other provisions of the law, to enable the settlers of the West to obtain timber without violating the laws of the land.

Mr. BELL of Colorado. Strike out that provision and every man must have a sawmill to get the benefit of the act.

Mr. COFFEEN of Wyoming. Yes, the gentleman from Colorado is right. Strike this out and you go back to the difficulties from which we have endeavored to escape, and, indeed, have been escaping, by the law of 1891. Therefore, I hold that the repeal of this bill as now proposed will stop the beneficent results of the law we have had since 1891. In this law it is provided, as the gentleman says, that settlers in the West may obtain their timber free of charge. Yet they are compelled to develop and improve their lands, under the land laws, before they can make proof upon them, and if this bill now proposed shall pass there is left no convenient way by which settlers in the West can obtain permission to cut timber for the proper and legal development of their claims. Again, I wish to enforce and strengthen what has been said by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. BELL]. While it may seem that under this bill privileges are given to the settlers, yet, as a matter of fact, the method by which the settler can obtain lumber for his buildings and improvements requires the operation of sawmills, and it is an impossibility that every settler in the West shall own a sawmill or be able to control it for the manufacture of lumber. Therefore, the very wise provision in section 8 was enacted that it shall be a sufficient excuse for the cutting of timber in all cases for the settler to prove that the timber that timber is for domestic purposes and within the State; and this very provision will be stricken down if this section 8 is repealed, because that provision is only found in section 8, to which reference is made, and which it is here proposed to repeal.

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker, I repeat again that the bill gives to settlers the free use of wood and timber for firewood, for fencing, and for buildings, and it accords to them the right to sell, but not to ask anything more. Indeed, I know they do not. Now, just why the Congress of the United States should make these extensive free grants of timber to private individuals and corporations I am unable to understand. I find that in Wyoming, represented by the gentleman, permits have been issued under the act of March 8, 1891, to the following persons, for the number of acres stated:

	Acres
John R. Todd.....	1,930
N. J. James.....	2,560
A. M. Bunge.....	894
Frederic M. Needell.....	2,440
William E. Grimes and Nell Cunningham.....	1,920
Stephen N. Lovick.....	1,280

The timber on 10,000 acres of land in one State granted from December 5, 1893, to May 31, 1895.

It seems to me incredible that any gentleman should stand upon the floor of this House and insist that the Government of the United States owes to the owners of sawmills in the West all the logs they may see fit to cut for domestic use.

There is no reason in it, no justice in it, no fairness to the individual holder of timber, and no fairness to those who would protect the forests of our country from being denuded, and a great wrong upon the settlers who may in future want the lands for homes. We should stop it.

Mr. PICKLER. We have a law now that will cover all these things, and the only object about your bill is that the Government does not have time in the five years to look them up and investigate them.

Mr. McRAE. That is not the point now under discussion. Under this free permit system, whenever it is claimed that it is necessary for manufacturing purposes, the Department is required to issue these permits; and these I have named are for the State of Wyoming, represented by the gentleman who has just spoken. These individuals have been given thousands of acres of the most valuable timber land in the West against the rights of the people. Upon what principle can the sawmills demand that they shall have free all the logs they want to cut when they sell them in the State where the sawmill is situated?

Mr. PICKLER. Do not they have the permission of the Secretary of the Interior?

Mr. McRAE. Yes; and the power to grant this right we want to take away from him by this bill.

Mr. PICKLER. You said awhile ago that they had the same right.

Mr. McRAE. I said the settler. The difference between this proposition and the one the gentleman has in mind is that the present law now authorizes permits for manufacturing purposes.

Mr. PICKLER. Then the Secretary has given this permission, and you claim that they have abused it.

Mr. McRAE. You are mixing the two propositions.

Mr. BOATNOR. Is there any provision of law by which the Secretary of the Interior can sell this timber where it is necessary for the purpose of developing the country?

Mr. McRAE. No; but we have endeavored to grant him such power by bill H. R. 119.

Mr. HAUGEN. Why not apply the principle you have been speaking of to this bill?

Mr. McRAE. I have sought to pass that bill for the past fifteen months, and have not yet succeeded.

Mr. HAUGEN. Why not insert it in this bill?

Mr. McRAE. Because I do not want to mix the two. When we have taken these men and corporations the right to cut timber free then we can give to the manufacturers the right to cut timber at a reasonable stumpage value under proper regulations; but so long as you give a half dozen States the right (it is not given to your State) to cut timber free their representatives will stand here to oppose the passage of any bill that requires payment, as they have done since the beginning of this Congress.

Mr. BOATNOR. Do you mean to say that all this timber has been given to these sawmills free?

Mr. McRAE. It has; and it is estimated that it will amount to perhaps $300,000 a year.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. Three hundred thousand dollars a year!

Mr. COFFEEN of Wyoming. It is granted if it can be used for manufacturing purposes.

Mr. McRAE. Yes; to be sold in the State when cut.

Mr. COFFEEN of Wyoming. Will the gentleman permit this question? The sawmills in that State, against which you are making complaint, do they not limit by this law to furnish that lumber to the settlers who need it?

Mr. McRAE. They are limited in the sale of the lumber to the people of the State; but they may sell it to a merchant, to a banker, to a lawyer, to a doctor, or any resident if he wants to use the lumber in the State. Now, there is no reason in the world why the people of your State should have the timber of your State given away to the sawmills men. I do not believe the people in your State are the way.

Mr. COFFEEN of Wyoming. Yes, they do. How can the settler provide himself with lumber except through the sawmills?

Mr. McRAE. It could be done by cutting their logs for themselves and having them sawed.

Mr. COFFEEN of Wyoming. They will have no sawmills in the State then.

Mr. McRAE. Yes, they will. I represent one of the greatest sawmill districts in the United States, and I know something about sawmills; and I know that they can and will be run without free timber. I ask for the previous question on the engrossment, third reading, and passage of the bill.

The previous question was ordered, and under the operation thereof the bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and, being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. McRAE, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

EMMA A. RIPLEY.

Mr. McRAE. Mr. Speaker, I now call up the bill (S. 447) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to issue a duplicate of a certain land warrant to Emma A. Ripley.*

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to issue to Emma A. Ripley duplicate of one Portlanded land warrant issued in pursuance of the act of Congress approved April 11, 1861, numbered 40, for 40 acres, upon satisfactory proof of ownership and loss of same, and the execution of a bond, with good and sufficient sureties, in double the market value of the warrant so to be issued, to be approved by the Secretary of the Interior, conditioned to indemnify the United States against the prescription by an innocent holder of the alleged lost warrant; and that said duplicate shall have all the legal force and effect of the original.

Mr. PICKLER. Let us hear the report.

The report (by Mr. McRAE) was read, as follows:

The Committee on the Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (S. 447) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to issue a duplicate of a certain land warrant to Emma A. Ripley, have the honor to report thereon, with consideration and report it back with the recommendation that it do pass.

For the facts, the committee adopts the Senate report No. 211, Fifty-third Congress, first session, and the Department's correspondence.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Page 13, section 26. The last part of this section can be used as a whip over the Departments wherein the branch offices are located.

Page 14, section 29. Does this section require the Public Printer to purchase material such as the foremen of printing and binding make requisitions for? If so, it places his appropriation in their hands, and with the powers of condemnation of material sought to be given these same men it will be beyond his power to protect the public interests upon his own judgment. He will not let the printer's union control the printers.

Page 11, section 33 should be amended by striking out the words "Public Printer" and insert instead the words "Joint Committee on Printing"; and "Chief Clerk," in the same place, should be changed to "Chief of the Printing Office," and, in matters connected with the management of the Printing Office, and they should also be bonded for the duties charged upon them.

Page 18, section 35. The increase of pay to pressmen to 34 cents per hour will place them in compensation 10 cents per hour above other mechanics in the office. It is not justice. If the increase is desirable, it should be extended to all printers, compositors, binders, painters, carpenters, etc.

Page 21, section 51. It is not desirable to authorize the employment of apprentices in the office. It is not a favorable office wherein to learn trades. The work is so divided that apprentices can not work to advantage in learning themselves all-around mechanics. If it is desirable to teach trades, then the limit of twenty-five should not prevail.

Page 21, section 52. It is not desirable to sell plates as mentioned in this section. The demand under this section might be so large as to take up the entire working facilities of the foundry of the office and stop all other work.

Page 31, section 94, lines 20-21. Why should the Public Printer be made the vehicle to convey the money collected by another office to the Treasury?

Page 34, section 67. The Public Printer should not be directed to appoint anyone upon the requisition of another unless, in his judgment, such appointment should be made.

Page 62, lines 58-59, inclusive. This is a whip which can be used over the contractor for which should not be made a part of a statute.

Mr. COOMBS. Now, Mr. Speaker, I have gone over the provisions of the bill as referred to in this statement, and so far as the mechanical workings of the printing department are concerned I find these criticisms well justified. I do not pretend to pass upon the question of apprentices or the question of salaries; but I believe that this bill in its present shape will impede the workings of that department, tending to bring it back to where it was in the days when there was no contract and no criticism of its operations. It has been found good policy in private business and in municipal matters, as well as in the conduct of Government affairs, to have some head upon whom to place responsibility—somebody who can not shift responsibility from his own shoulders to those of another person who may be irresponsible. We want to hold the Public Printer to the strictest responsibility.

I claim that this bill is faulty in that respect; and close by saying what I said in the beginning, that so far as this bill applies to the distribution of documents and criticism of its operations, I believe, that the laws with relation to our public printing should be codified. But I believe that the proposed legislation now before us should be perfected before it passes into law. I understand the gentleman from Tennessee to agree with me that there are grave defects in this bill; but he says it can be perfected afterward. Sir, no time is so good for correcting errors as the present.

It is not good policy to enact laws that we know to be defective, that open doors to corruption, relying upon our ability to change them in the future.

I wish also most pointedly to call the attention of the House to the fact that the provisions of the bill whereby a committee of Congress becomes an executive branch of the Government is unprecedented, and is dangerous ground for us to venture upon.

I regret that the short time allowed me has not permitted me to go into details, but trust that the House will reject it.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. WARNER. Mr. Speaker, if there is one other man in this House who approaches, in his anxiety to see this bill pass, the anxiety exhibited by the chairman of the Committee on Printing, that other man is myself. But, sir, I am not quite so carried away, as I fear is the gentleman from Tennessee, with the merits of this bill as to be unable to see what seem to me very serious defects in the measure.

On the 3d day of August last, before any conference report had been made, it was proposed to concur in the amendments of the Senate on the ground that they were immaterial. The House refused to concur; and upon the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee the bill was sent to conference. Now the conference committee comes in with its report, which, as explained by the chairman of the committee yesterday, makes very material concessions to the position of the House.

In other words, we all now agree that a large part of the amendments which were proposed to pass upon last August, as immaterial were of the greatest importance and ought not to have been in the bill, our own committee having forced from the Senate a recession upon those matters. Now we are asked to concur in this conference report on the ground that there are left no amendments of the Senate which are of sufficient materiality for this House to insist on opposing them.

I propose, sir, to take up very briefly a few of the principal amendments which are still pending.

The conference committee proposes, in the first place, that we withdraw our opposition to Senate amendment No. 3, on page 3 of the bill. That amendment provides that contractors for supplies of the Government Printing Office shall give bonds in such sum as may be fixed by and to the approval of the Joint Committee on Printing. In other words, it practically puts every contractor for supplies to the Public Printing Office in the hands of the Joint Committee on Printing, which may impose upon him such terms, easy or hard, as it may see fit. This provision constitutes the Joint Committee on Printing an arbiter in regard to matters involving millions on millions of dollars annually. It gives the joint committee control over the contractors who supply the office and the office which is thus supplied.

On page 4 there is another amendment of the Senate which it is proposed we now concur in—a provision that the decision of the Joint Committee on Printing shall be final as to the United States in any controversy between a contractor and the Public Printing Office as to the quality of the paper furnished. The amendment does not provide that the decision of the joint committee shall be final as to the contractor, but that if the joint committee should decide against the United States, the Government shall have no further recourse.

In other words, the provision in question does have and can have but one possible effect. While it still leaves the contractor free to break the decision of the joint committee, repudiate it altogether and go before the Court of Claims, it prevents the Government of the United States from ever insisting against the contractor that the decision of the joint committee was an injury to the Government and favorable only to the contractor. It is a provision which can help out the contractor, which is intended apparently to do so, and bars the United States. Such is the virulent power possessed to be put in the hands of the Joint Committee on Printing.

Again, Mr. Speaker, on pages 8 and 9 of this bill it is proposed that we shall recede from the disagreement to a certain Senate amendment in the following words:

Sec. (9) 21. The chief clerk, the foreman of printing, and a person designated by the Joint Committee on Printing shall constitute a board to examine and report in writing on all paper delivered under contract or by purchase or otherwise at the Government Printing Office. The chief clerk, foreman of binding, and a person designated by the Joint Committee on Printing shall constitute a board to examine and report in writing on all material except paper for use of the bindery. The chief clerk, the foreman of printing, and a person designated by the Joint Committee on Printing shall constitute a board of condemnation, who, upon the call of the Public Printer, shall determine the condition of presses and other machinery and material used in the Government Printing Office, and make a view of condemnation.

In that case the amendment of the Senate, as will be seen, transfigures a petty board of condemnation, which the House provided, and which, upon the call of the Public Printer, was to determine the condition of old presses, machinery, and material used in the Government Printing Office. Instead, the Senate amendment changes this board, which, under the influence of the Joint Committee on Printing, for it is given the power to designate any of its members, to a petty board on all supplies for the Government Printing Office and for the Government bindery. In other words, by that Senate amendment—which it is proposed to leave in the bill—it is sought to give the joint committee practical control of all the purchases and deliveries by the contractors to this enormous office of all the material there used.

Further, on page 13 it is provided by a Senate amendment that the Public Printer, with the approval of the Joint Committee on Printing, may abolish any of certain offices whenever in his judgment public economy would be subserved thereby. In other words, the Public Printer can shut up a useless office and discharge superfluous hands only in case the Joint Committee on Printing shall consent. It puts the Joint Committee on Printing in a position where it can, if it chooses, dictate the continuance of useless offices and superfluous men, although the Public Printer may decide that they are not needed and are a useless expense to the Government.

In addition, on page 15 of the bill, a Senate amendment provides that all leases of offices, all provision for additional accommodations shall be subject to the approval of the Joint Committee on Printing. It makes no difference how good a bargain the Public Printer may make, or how fair it may be, nor to what extent he may have been able thereby to subserve economy in the work of his office, it is subject absolutely to the control of the Joint Committee on Printing. The joint committee, in other words, is clothed with all the enormous power and patronage necessarily involved in the question of hiring rooms and quarters for the operation of this enormous establishment.

Mr. WARNER. I am referring now to, section 36 on page 15 of the bill.

It is also provided on page 62, by a Senate amendment, which the gentleman proposes that we shall allow, that, notwithstanding the Public Printer and the Secretary of the Interior may advise that the work now done by contractors outside of the office may be more economically done in the Government Printing Office, they shall not be allowed to bring this about except with the approval of the Joint Committee on Printing. In other words, that committee is put in a position where it can act as a life-preserver for the contractors, from whom in the interest of economy the Secretary of the Interior and the Public Printer to it. And in addition to that I would tell him to go before the nearest grand jury or United States court and have the railroad company indicted.

Mr. COX. Then the gentleman's idea is this: The shipper has put his freight on the train, the railroad company has charged him too much, and he has protested. Now, in such a case, he must go before the Interstate Commerce Commission to have it settled whether the charge was right or wrong?

Mr. PATTERSON. Will the gentleman state his point again? Mr. COX. I will. The shipper has put his freight on the train, the railroad company has charged him too much, as he thinks, and he protests. Now, under this bill, what is he going to do?

Mr. PATTERSON. I have told the gentleman.

A MEMBER. How is he going to get his money back? Mr. COX. Yes, what is his practical remedy? The idea of my colleague, as I understand, is that these shippers (and there are vast numbers of shippers in small amounts), after they have protested against the overcharges of the railroad company, must file their claim before the railroad commission. Do I correctly understand my colleague?

A MEMBER. They can go to court.

Mr. COX. Oh, no; it would be no remedy for one of these small shippers to go to the Federal court to recover the amount he had been overcharged. The expense of such a proceeding would amount to more than the freight. Now I want to ask my colleague this question in order to get right down to the bottom of this matter: A shipper puts his freight on a train and the company charges him too much. I want to know how the small shipper under this bill is to get back the extortionate rates he has paid. That is the whole question.

Mr. PATTERSON. I will answer my friend by saying that there are two or three remedies. In the first place, the shipper may go before the Interstate Commerce Commission and ask the Commission to deal with the derelict railroad company. In the second place, he may go before the grand jury of any Federal court and obtain an indictment against the railroad company. Then, again, he is authorized in this bill to bring a civil action on the case for all the damage he has sustained. Those are the three remedies.

A MEMBER. There could be no other remedy.

Mr. COX. None except one, which would be to prevent the railroad company from charging that extortionate rate.

Now, if my colleague will allow me to add a word further, I will not interrupt him again. He knows, and I know, and it is well known all over the United States, that these small shippers are the men who suffer from these overcharges of the railroad companies. Now, the only remedy left to such a shipper under this bill is either to go to the Interstate Commerce Commission or to seek relief in the Federal court, and the latter course would involve an expense exceeding the amount of the extortionate charges. Practically the shipper is left at the mercy of the railroad companies.

Mr. BRYAN. Will the gentleman [Mr. PATTERSON] allow me an inquiry?

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. BRYAN. By giving in this bill a right of appeal to the courts we virtually say that pooling shall be allowed on such terms as the court shall decide.

Mr. PATTERSON. No, I do not think that is exactly the right construction.

Mr. BRYAN. Is not that the substance or effect?

Mr. PATTERSON. No, that is not the provision, though such may be the ultimate effect.

Mr. BRYAN. Well, is it not true that when an appeal is taken from the Interstate Commerce Commission to the court the Commission comes in as a party and must represent the public in that proceeding?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes; it represents the public side of the question.

Mr. BRYAN. So that on one side you have the railroad company, an interested party, and on the other a public body, simply acting officially?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. BRYAN. Is not then a proceeding so much in favor of the railroad company as to be almost ex parte?

Mr. PATTERSON. I think not.

Mr. COX. Of course it is.

Mr. PATTERSON. I think not. I think the public can well rely on the Commission to protect its interest. It was created for that purpose and I have no doubt it will do its duty.

RECORD OFFICE AT THE CAPITOL.

An office for the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD has been fitted up in Statuary Hall, where a clerk is in constant attendance during the sessions of Congress to receive subscriptions, copy, etc., and where extra copies of the RECORD, Congressional Directory, and information in regard to the cost of printing speeches in pamphlet form may be obtained.

On motion of Mr. HAWLEY, it was Ordered, That the papers on file in the office of the Secretary of the Senate in the case of Walter Santons, introduced in the Fifty-first Congress, be withdrawn from said files, under the rules of the Senate.

ANTONIO MAXIMO MORA.

Mr. DOLPH. I submit a resolution calling for the continued correspondence in the Mora case, for which I ask immediate consideration. We have a part of the correspondence before the Committee on Foreign Relations. It is a matter referred to in the President's message.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the President be requested, if not in his opinion incompatible with public interest, to furnish the Senate with copies of the correspondence between the Government of the United States and the Government of Spain since the date of his last message to the Senate (June 29, 1894) in regard to the payment of the indemnity which the Spanish Government in the year 1886 agreed to pay in settlement of the claim of Antonio Maximo Mora, a naturalized citizen of the United States.

INDUSTRIAL TROUBLES IN CHICAGO, ILL.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the resolution of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN], coming over from a previous day.

Mr. BERRY. I have just received a note from the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN] stating that it is impossible for him to be here this morning, and asking that the resolution be passed over without losing its right, to be laid before the Senate on some future occasion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none; and it will be so ordered.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HOAR. I move to take up order of business 662, House bill 7095. I am authorized by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GIBSON] to call up the bill at any time. It is a bill which has passed the other House and is unanimously reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia.

THE PRESIDENT OFFICER. If there be no objection, the amendment reported by the Committee on Finance will be read for information. The Chair hears no objection, and the amendment will be read.

The Secretary read the amendment reported by the Committee on Finance, which was to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill and insert:

That from and after the passage of this act there shall be levied, collected, and paid on all sugars and on all tank bottoms, sirups of cane juice or of beet juice, molasses, concentrated molasses, concrete and concentrated molasses a duty of twenty cents per gallon.

That there shall be levied, collected, and paid on molasses testing above 40° and not above 50° hydroscope a duty of 2 cents per gallon; if testing above 50° hydroscope a duty of 2 cents per gallon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Delaware that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill which has been read.

Mr. HARRIS. And the pending question on the bill will be upon agreeing to the amendment reported by the Committee on Finance.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The first question is on proceeding to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. HARRIS. Of course; but I say if the bill is taken up the pending question will then be on the substitute reported by the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Upon the question to proceed to the consideration of the bill, the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY] calls for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. QUAY. As corollary to the remark of the Senator from Tennessee, I presume he does not intend to suggest that the amendment which I submitted before the recent adjournment, and which is upon the table, will be presented for action by the Senate.

Mr. HARRIS. Of course, Mr. President, it is not in order to debate this question, but I simply stated that the first question would be upon the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. QUAY. With the opportunity to move amendments to that amendment.

Mr. ALDRICH. The pending question may be something else should the bill be taken up.

Mr. HARRIS. Very well. I said—

Mr. ALDRICH. I object to further discussion.

Mr. HARRIS. I merely stated that if the bill shall be taken up for consideration, that will be the pending question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is objection to further discussion, which has been proceeding by unanimous consent. The Secretary will call the roll on the motion of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY].

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CAMERON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER].

Mr. CAREY (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. MITCHELL]. If he were present he would vote "yea" and I should vote "nay."

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE].

Mr. DUBOIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. JONES of Arkansas (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] on this question. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. PATTON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GIBSON]. If he were present I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. McLAURIN. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON], but by arrangement made with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS] I transfer that pair to the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH], which allows the Senator from Idaho and myself to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. DUBOIS. I vote "nay."

Mr. MILLS. I am paired to-day with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WASHBURN]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. BLACKBURN. I am paired generally with the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON]. In his absence I transfer that pair to my colleague [Mr. LINDSAY], who is also absent, and I vote "yea."

Mr. PROCTOR. I am paired with the Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL]. I inquire if he has voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida has not voted, the Chair cannot inform you.

Mr. PROCTOR. Then I withhold my vote.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I announce my pair with the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICE].

Mr. DUBOIS. My colleague [Mr. SHOUR] is paired with the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE]. My colleague, if present, would vote "nay."

Mr. PERKINS. I desire to state that my colleague [Mr. WHITE] is absent, and is paired with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. SHOUR].

Mr. MORGAN (after having voted in the negative). Since giving my vote, a pair has been arranged between myself and the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. HAY], and I withdraw my vote.

Mr. FRYE (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN], and as I am not informed how he would vote on this question, if present, I withdraw my vote.

Mr. ALDRICH. I ask that the result of the vote may be announced.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will call the attention of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN] to the question whether his vote should be recorded.

Mr. BLACKBURN. My vote is recorded in the affirmative. I withdraw the announcement of the pair of my colleague [Mr. LINDSAY] with the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON], who has since come into the Chamber and voted.

Mr. MANDERSON (after having voted in the negative). I desire to say that when I voted I did not know that there had been a transfer of pairs between the Senator from Kentucky and myself.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I asked to make the transfer in the Senator's absence, my colleague also being absent, but when the Senator from Nebraska came in my vote stood as already recorded. I withdrew the announcement of the pair between that Senator and my colleague.

Mr. MANDERSON. Of course that permits both the Senator from Kentucky and me to vote.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Yes.

Mr. MILLS. Then I wish to transfer my pair with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WASHBURN] to the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LINDSAY]. I suppose that will be all right.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I shall be glad to have that done.

Mr. MILLS. I vote "yea."

So the motion was not agreed to.

Mr. HALE subsequently said: On the vote in the Senate to-day upon the motion of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] to take up the House bill relating to a duty upon sugar, I neglected to announce that in voting I transferred my pair with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAXSSETT] to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES]. It made no difference in the result, and I make the statement now in order that the two Senators named may stand as paired on the vote.

Mr. VEST. I move that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of the resolution I offered in regard to a change in the rules. I know the motion is not debatable, but I wish to say that I ask now to modify the resolution so as to strike out the word "and not later than the 15th instant," as this is the 12th.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that the resolution is on the Calendar.

Mr. VEST. Nobody ought to know that better than the Senator from Rhode Island, as he caused it to be put there.

Mr. ALDRICH. I supposed it was put there at my suggestion.

Mr. VEST. It was put there at the Senator's suggestion.

I want to modify the resolution so as to strike out the word "and not later than the 15th instant," as this is the 12th.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Missouri to proceed to the consideration of the resolution heretofore submitted by him, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. Vest on the 5th instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Rules be instructed to report at the earliest possible date, and to take that the President, an amendment to the Senate rules providing by proper limitations and restrictions for terminating debate and securing final action at a fixed time upon any motion, bill, or resolution which may be proposed in the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Missouri to proceed to the consideration of the resolution which has been read.

Mr. ALDRICH and Mr. VEST called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. If this motion is carried, I inquire if the effect of it will be to displace the Nicaraguan Canal bill?

Mr. ALDRICH. Yes. The PRESIDING OFFICER. That will be the effect of it. Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I am in favor of the resolution of the Senator from Missouri, but I am opposed to displacing the Nicaraguan Canal bill.

Mr. ALDRICH. Debate is out of order. Mr. VEST. I ask unanimous consent to make a single statement.

Mr. ALDRICH. I object to any debate. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island objects to debate. The Secretary will call the roll.

Mr. MANDERSON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. MANDERSON. This is not a bill upon the Calendar. Mr. VEST. It is a resolution upon the Calendar. Mr. MANDERSON. It is a simple resolution. I inquire whether the pending business, which is the Nicaraguan Canal bill, can be displaced to take up a simple Senate resolution which is on the Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that the resolution, when it went from the Senate after its previous consideration, took its place upon the Calendar, and would be considered in its order on the Calendar when reached; but under the rule a motion to proceed to the consideration of any question on the Calendar is in order.

Mr. HOAR. I call for the reading of the rule upon that subject.

Mr. VEST. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. VEST. If this motion should carry, could it not then be agreed that the Nicaraguan Canal bill should be proceeded with, and that resolution be laid aside until the discussion upon that bill is ended?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair can not state as to a matter of agreement, but only as to a fixed and determined rule of the Senate.

Mr. VEST. But that could be done by unanimous consent. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate can do anything by unanimous consent.

Mr. VEST. It was my intention, so far as I am concerned, to have the resolution laid aside until the Nicaraguan Canal bill is disposed of.

Mr. PALMER. I ask that the resolution may be again read. Mr. HARRIS. I ask unanimous consent to make a statement of about three words to the Senator from Missouri and to the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. HALE. What is the request? Mr. HARRIS. That I be permitted to make a statement of three or five words.

Mr. FRYE. There is no objection to three. [Laughter.] The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hears no objection, and the Senator from Tennessee is recognized.

Mr. HARRIS. The statement is that the Committee on Rules is already summoned to meet to-morrow morning at ten and a half o'clock for the purpose of considering the question which is involved in the resolution of the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. VEST. The question has been before that committee now for about eight months.

Mr. HARRIS. The resolution has not got before any other body than the Senate.

Mr. VEST. All the proposed amendments to the rules have been there.

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask that Rule IX be read.

Mr. HALE. I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the rule referred to by the Senator from Nebraska.

The Secretary read as follows:

RULE IX.

ORDER OF BUSINESS—continued.

Immediately after the consideration of a resolution objected to upon the Calendar is completed, and not later than 2 o'clock, if there shall be no special orders for that time the Calendar of General Orders shall be taken up and proceeded with in its order, beginning with the first subject on the Calendar next after the last subject disposed of in proceeding with the Calendar; and in such case the following motions shall be in order at any time as prescribed motions, save as against a motion to amend, or to proceed to the consideration of executive business, or questions of privilege, to-wit:

First. A motion to proceed to the consideration of an appropriation or revenue bill.

Second. A motion to proceed to the consideration of any other bill on the Calendar, which motion shall not be open to amendment.

Mr. MANDERSON. "Any other bill." I do not care about the rule being read further. It seems to me the second subdivision of the rule disposes of this question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that the word "bill" has always been considered to mean joint resolutions or other resolutions which go to the Calendar. The Chair will therefore rule that the motion of the Senator from Missouri is in order.

Mr. HALE. Now, Mr. President, I call for the regular order of business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order of business is the calling of the roll.

Mr. HALE. Let us have it.

Mr. ALDRICH. I hope no appeal will be taken from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. VEST. I object to debate.

Mr. ALDRICH. I protest—

Mr. VEST. I object to debate, and call for the regular order.

The Senator has no right to make a statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll. The Secretary proceeded to call the roll, and Mr. ALDRICH responded to his name.

Mr. PALMER. I ask for the reading of the resolution.

Several SENATORS. Too late.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's request is too late, one Senator having answered to his name on the roll call.

Mr. PALMER. I will be remembered that I asked for the reading of the resolution sometime ago, but my request was overlooked.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will proceed with the calling of the roll.

The Secretary resumed the calling of the roll.

Mr. CAMERON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER].

Mr. CAREY (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. MITCHELL], and vote "yea." If he were present he would vote "yea," and I should vote "nay."

Mr. DUBOIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH], but transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON], and vote "nay."

Mr. MILLS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WASHBURN], but I transfer that pair to the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LINDSEY], and vote "yea."

Mr. HILL (when Mr. MURPHY's name was called). My colleague [Mr. MURPHY] is paired with the senior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER].

Mr. PATTON (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GIBSON].

Mr. DUBOIS (when Mr. SHOUP's name was called). My colleague [Mr. SHOUP] is absent on account of sickness in his family. He is paired with the senior Senator from California [Mr. WHITE]. My colleague, if present, would vote "nay."

The roll call was completed.

Mr. PASCO. I am requested to announce that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. CAMDEN] is necessarily absent from the Chamber. He is paired on this, as he was on the preceding vote, with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW].

Mr. CAREY. I announced that I was paired with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. MITCHELL]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN], and vote. I vote "nay." Mr. HUNTON. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. DANIEL] is absent from the city on account of business and has a regular pair with the Senator from Washington [Mr. SQUIRE].

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. WILSON] is absent on account of illness, and is paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON].

Mr. HARRIS. The Nicaraguan bill is the regular order. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The business before the Senate is the Nicaraguan Canal bill.

Mr. HARRIS. I call for the regular order. I rise for the purpose of saying that I voted against the motion of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] to proceed to the consideration of his resolution declaring in favor of certain amendments to the rules of the Senate, first because his resolution is wholly unnecessary, inasmuch as the Committee on Rules is already summoned to meet at 10.30 o'clock to-morrow morning for the purpose of considering the subject-matter of his resolution, and I could not quite see the necessity of the Senate passing a resolution upon the subject of the forty-fourth, and indeed less than twenty-four hours, before it will be taken up and fully and earnestly considered by the committee having charge of the same.

Inasmuch as my own position in respect to the matter has been somewhat misunderstood and misrepresented from time to time by the public press, I will add the statement that as a member of the Committee on Rules I shall favor an amendment to the rules. I am in favor of such an amendment as will give to the majority in the Senate, by a well-considered and carefully prepared rule, the power to close debate upon appropriation bills, the passage of which is absolutely necessary to prevent the stoppage of the wheels of the Government, and a similar rule as to revenue bills, upon which the means for the running of the Government depend. But I shall have to change radically my present opinion before I consent to any closure rule in respect to that class of legislation which may perhaps be properly characterized by calling it political legislation. However, I shall favor a proposition which puts it in the power of a majority of this body to close debate and force action upon revenue and appropriation bills. Beyond that I shall have to be satisfied and convinced against my present opinions before I shall go in that direction. This is all I desire to say.

Mr. MORGAN. I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is Senate bill 1481, and the pending question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. MANDERSON. Mr. President, while I rise upon this question, I do not desire to enter into debate concerning it. But in response to what has been said by my colleague upon the Committee on Rules, the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS], I wish to suggest that I think he will find it very difficult to discover in the annals of the Senate a single case where there has been delay in this body by surplusage of debate upon any revenue or appropriation bill. If closure should come it certainly is not needed for bills of that character. Superabundance of debate, waste of time by filibustering methods, or those which approach that, has never come upon appropriation and revenue bills, but upon bills which are of a general character to which there is strong minority opposition. I need not recall the history; it is too familiar to everyone who is at all informed as to the proceedings of this body.

For myself, as one member of the Committee on Rules, and as we seem to be making open confession of our faith here, I am not in favor at this time, and will not be, either in committee or on the floor of the Senate, of any closure rule under existing conditions.

I wish to say further, Mr. President, that I hope the decision of the Chair in permitting a vote to be taken which enabled a bill to be supplanted by a simple Senate resolution will not be considered as a precedent that shall be followed in this body. I did not appeal from the decision of the Chair because I felt assured that the proposition made by the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] would be rejected by a vote of this body.

Mr. HILL. Will the Senator from Nebraska allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. MANDERSON. Certainly.

Mr. HILL. I simply desire to ask in what manner a resolution which has been placed upon the Calendar of General Orders is to be brought up.

Mr. MANDERSON. It can be reached before 2 o'clock by a motion. Then it is in order. It can be reached in its regular course upon the Calendar. It can be reached by unanimous consent. There are many ways of reaching it.

Mr. HILL. It can be reached by unanimous consent, of course. I am aware that the Senate can do anything by unanimous consent. But is there no method of bringing up a resolution which has gone to the Calendar except by reaching it in its order on the Calendar?

Mr. MANDERSON. There is not after 2 o'clock, and there should not be. Why?

Mr. HOAR. It can be reached by passing over the subjects on the Calendar one by one.

Mr. MANDERSON. I will try to give the Senator from New York the reason for this rule. The rule is explicit. When 2 o'clock has been reached, after the morning business (which is preparatory and preliminary business to the proper business of legislation) is concluded, the Calendar is in order in the order in which bills and resolutions are placed thereon, but when the Senate has under consideration a bill it can be displaced after 2 o'clock only by a motion. I read from the rule.

A motion to proceed to the consideration of any other bill on the Calendar, which motion shall not be open to amendment.

The reason for it, which is very simple, as it seems to me, and which actuated the Committee on Rules and the Senate in using this language, was that bills and joint resolutions, which, of course, under our practice, are embodied in the general term "bills," are of the same making power of the Senate of the United States, and should not be displaced, having proceeded to that step in the formulation of a law by a simple resolution of the Senate.

Mr. HILL. Will the Senator from Nebraska allow me a moment further?

Mr. MANDERSON. Certainly.

Mr. HILL. If the Senate has taken up a resolution in its order on the Calendar and is engaged in discussing it, can not that be set aside by bringing up a bill?

Mr. MANDERSON. Certainly it can, because the resolution has been reached in its order upon the Calendar, and it can be displaced by a bill, and a bill which has been reached can be displaced by any other bill on motion. But a bill, that step in law-making having been reached, the bill can not be disposed of by a matter so comparatively insignificant as a simple Senate resolution.

I hope I have fully answered the Senator from New York, but I merely wish to add again for his delectation the rule. Rules must be construed strictly, and certainly should be construed by the presiding officer of the body according to and in the strictness of their language. "The rule reads:

A motion to proceed to the consideration of any other bill on the Calendar, which motion shall not be open to amendment.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, speaking to this question, I simply desire to say—

Mr. MORGAN. I wish to know what is the question before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order before the Senate is Senate bill 1481.

Mr. HILL. Upon the question of the Nicaraguan Canal bill I am availing myself of the rules of the Senate to discuss the question of an amendment of the rules.

Mr. MORGAN. Very good.

Mr. HILL. Such is the liberality, the looseness, and the grotesqueness of the present rules of the Senate.

Mr. President, I simply say that I think, under a liberal construction of the rules, the Presiding Officer of this body was right in holding that a resolution upon the Calendar can be taken up by a vote of the Senate and take the place of a bill. A resolution, sir, is sometimes just as important as a bill can be. It is not the immaterial and small matter which the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON] seems to think it is. A resolution sometimes involves the question of procedure under which the Senate can act, and in my humble judgment the importance of it is well illustrated by the very effort which has been made this morning, because in my opinion no bill or resolution is more important than the resolution which was presented here in the effort to secure an amendment of the rules whereby the Senate can transact business. An effort to modify the rules for the purpose of facilitating the transaction of business in this body is as important as any piece of legislation that can be presented here. It may be the wisest and best thing for this body to do is to direct its attention to an amendment of those rules. I think, under a liberal construction of the rules, a resolution can be taken up at any time, and I think the Chair was right. This is all I desire to say upon that particular point.

It has been suggested to me that several amendments to the rules of the Senate which I submitted have been pending some eight months. Some very good amendments to the rules, presented by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON's] himself, have been pending in this body for a long number of months unacted upon. I think they should be brought to the attention of the Senate and disposed of. One to which my attention has been called is a simple amendment to the rules, namely, that when a Senator rises in his place here and announces a pair, he shall be deemed to be present instead of being deemed to be absent. Yet it is utterly impossible to get the Senate to pass or consider that proposed rule.

Mr. MANDERSON. That is right. I am for that.

Mr. SICKLES. About sixty more than are provided for in this bill. That is my recollection.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I have a copy of the last bill here; but this provision is not in that bill.

Mr. CURTIS of New York. This operates as a reduction.

Mr. McMILLIN. Well, on that assurance I will limit my point of order to the words following the word "require," in line 7:

And said detachments shall not be included in the effective strength of the Army, nor counted as part of the enlisted force provided for by law, but shall be in addition thereto.

My reason for making the point of order against this clause is that it necessarily increases the expenditures of the Government, because it increases the number of persons employed in one way or another in the military establishment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understood the gentleman in charge of the bill to concede that this clause is a change of existing law. If that is the case, the Chair can see nothing in the exceptions specified in the rule to relieve the clause from the operation of the point of order. The Chair must therefore sustain the point.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I move that the committee rise and report the bill to the House with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

The Committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. TARNSEY reported that the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 8125) making appropriations for the support of the Military Academy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, and had directed him to report the same back with the recommendation that it pass without amendment.

Mr. OUTHWAITE. I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. OUTHWAITE, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. PEARSON, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled the bill (H. R. 2650) providing for the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents; when the Speaker signed the same.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. CHICKERING, by unanimous consent, obtained indefinite leave of absence, on account of sickness in his family.

And then, on motion of Mr. OUTHWAITE (at 4 o'clock and 33 minutes p. m.), the House adjourned.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, December 13, 1894.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. W. H. MILBURN, D. D.
MATTHEW C. BUTLER, a Senator from the State of South Carolina, appeared in his seat to-day.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 7273) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following bills and joint resolutions; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:
A bill (S. 2327) to amend the act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River above New Orleans," approved January 26, 1893;

A bill (H. R. 7796) to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to remit or mitigate fines, penalties, and forfeitures;

A joint resolution (H. Res. 231) extending time for report of Board of Engineers surveying canal routes from Lake Erie to the Ohio River; and

A joint resolution (H. Res. 297) to pay the officers and employees of the Senate and House of Representatives their respective salaries for the month of December, 1894, on the 20th day of said month.

INDIAN CONTRACT SCHOOLS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, calling attention to a provision in the last Indian appropriation act directing him to inquire into and investigate the propriety of discontinuing the Indian contract schools, inclosing a copy of the report of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs on the subject, and quoting his own views as set forth in his recent annual report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The communication will be referred, with the accompanying papers, to the Committee on Indian Affairs and printed.

Mr. PLATT. The chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs is not present, but this is a matter which is usually controlled by the Committee on Appropriations, and I am not sure but that the communication ought to go to that committee.

Mr. COCKRELL. The resolution requiring this report was put in the Indian appropriation act in the Senate, and it will necessarily have to be considered by the Committee on Appropriations, but I have no objection to the reference of the report to the Committee on Indian Affairs, in order to have their view for the benefit of the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair was in doubt as to the committee, but as the communication discusses a measure of general policy the Chair is of opinion that it ought to go to the Committee on Indian Affairs first.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I present a memorial to accompany the bill (S. 2390) to amend section 2306 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. As the paper refers to a public-land matter, I move that it be referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. SQUIRE. I submit an amendment intended to be proposed by me to the urgent deficiency appropriation bill. It is brief, and I will be pleased to have it read.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Amendment not submitted to be proposed by Mr. SQUIRE to the bill (H. R. 1815) making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes, viz:

On page 1, after line 10, insert the following:
"Sundry civil appropriation." That sum appropriated making an appropriation of $200,000 for surveys of public lands in the sundry civil appropriation act for the fiscal year 1895, approved August 1, 1894, be hereby amended by inserting after the word "lands" where it first occurs in the provision of said appropriation the following words:

"Federal lands." That in the States of Montana, Wyoming, Utah, Washington, Idaho, and Oregon there may be allowed, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, the survey of lands heavily timbered, not included or covered with a new timber reserve, at a rate not exceeding $25 per section line, for standard and meander lines, $25 for township and $50 for section lines."

Mr. SQUIRE. I will state briefly my reason for offering this proposed amendment. In the sundry civil appropriation act, as finally passed at the last session of the present Congress, there was an accidental omission. I am informed, after careful inquiry, that it was a clerical error, and it is that error which causes me to offer this amendment to correct the law in regard to the appropriation for the survey of the public lands. The omission is important because the public surveys in the States named in the proposed amendment have been suspended. No action has been taken by the surveyor-general as to letting contracts for surveys in the mountainous and timber regions because they can not induce sufficient business to justify the cost at the present prices.

The rates allowed under the law as it existed before the passage of the last act providing for surveys of public lands were exactly the same as those now proposed in my amendment.

STATE OF ILLINOIS, PUBLIC INSTRUCTION,
Springfield, November 7, 1894.

DEAR SIR: I have no doubt that a post-graduate university, such as is described in the Memorial you kindly sent me, would be the greatest step toward securing the passage of the bill now before Congress, and any assistance I may be able to render by conferring with Senators or Members of the House from Illinois will be cheerfully given.

Very truly, yours,
HENRY RAAB
(State Superintendent Public Instruction).
Hon. JOHN W. HOYT, Washington, D. C.

STATE OF KANSAS, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION,
Topeka, Kans., December 6, 1894.

DEAR SIR: Your card of recent date is before me, and in reply will say that the 13,000 teachers of Kansas heartily endorse the establishment of a post-graduate university. Personally, I have long felt that such an institution should be established. I trust that you will succeed at this session.

Respectfully,
H. N. GAINES
(State Superintendent Public Instruction).
Dr. JOHN W. HOYT, Washington, D. C.

STATE OF NEBRASKA,
DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION,
Lincoln, September 18, 1894.

DEAR SIR: It affords me pleasure to reply to your favor of the 10th inst., and to the establishment in the city of Washington of a great National University.

It may be assumed that in the Memorial, the receipt of which I have the honor to acknowledge, the letter was of a post-graduate university, the culminating and crowning educational institution of the nation.

Such an institution, to subserve its highest purpose, should be, must be, in physical situation, the center of information; its students making original research must be in the fields to be searched.

These conditions are present in the national capital in the form of museums, libraries, laboratories, art collections, in the form of departments and bureaus of the National Government; in the form of local institutions; in the form of learned associations; and these are side by side with the hundreds of libraries in many branches of the Government service.

While all this is true it comes near the location only of such an institution. We should have such an institution, because, in this way only can we meet the demands made upon our nation by learning, because it would afford an enormous incentive to research and consequent scholarship; because it would be a powerful factor in crystallizing, or better, organizing our many edicts, theories, and systems into one system; because it would offer to students at home and abroad an opportunity for the study of our governmental, our economic, and our social systems, and thus open the way for the correction of errors, as well as for the dissemination among the peoples of the earth of the excellencies that exist in a "government of the people, for the people, and by the people."

Yours, truly,
A. K. GOUDY
(Superintendent Public Instruction).
Hon. JOHN W. HOYT, Washington, D. C.

PROPOSED ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY.
Mr. BLACKBURN. I move that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet on Monday next.

Mr. MORGAN. I wish the Senator from Kentucky would withdraw the motion for an instant, until I make a request of the Senate.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I do so.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion is withdrawn.
Mr. MORGAN. Some of the friends of the Nicaraguan Canal bill will be compelled to leave next week. More particularly, one of the Senators from Michigan is obliged to leave the city next Thursday at the latest at 4 or 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and he is anxious to be here at the time a vote may be taken upon that bill. I see no reason at all why the vote might not be taken by unanimous consent on Thursday at 3 o'clock, and I ask the Senate to consent that the vote on the bill and all amendments may be taken on Thursday of next week at 3 o'clock.

Mr. McMILLAN. I thought the Senator from Alabama meant to designate Wednesday of next week. Thursday is to be taken up with another subject.

Mr. MORGAN. I will arrange it then for Wednesday, if I can.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Alabama asks the unanimous consent of the Senate that the bill known as the Nicaraguan Canal bill and all amendments thereto shall be voted upon, beginning at 3 o'clock on Wednesday next. Is there objection?

Mr. CAFFERY. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is objection.

Mr. MORGAN. I will call for the yeas and nays on the motion of Mr. MORGAN from Kentucky.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion of the Senator from Kentucky was withdrawn.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I had withdrawn my motion at the request of the Senator from Alabama. Objection having been made to that Senator's request, I now renew my motion.

Mr. MORGAN. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kentucky moved that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet on Monday next, upon which the Senator from Alabama demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BUTLER (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON], and therefore withhold my vote. If any Senator will indicate how he would vote, I shall be very glad to vote.

Mr. HALE. He would undoubtedly vote "yea."
Mr. BUTLER. However, I will withhold my vote for the present.

Mr. DUBOIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. McCLAIR (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON]. If he were present I should vote "nay."

Mr. MURPHY (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER].

Mr. ROACH (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS].

Mr. DUBOIS (when Mr. SHOT'S name was called). My colleague [Mr. SHOT] is absent on account of sickness in his family, and is paired with the senior Senator from California [Mr. WHITE].

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BUTLER. I am assured by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] that the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON] would vote "nay" if present, and I therefore record my vote "nay."

Mr. CAMDEN. If in order, I desire to state that I was absent from the Senate for a few hours yesterday and my pair was not announced on several votes which took place during my absence. I was paired with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PETTIGREW], who was absent from the city during the day.

Mr. DOLPH (after having voted in the negative). Has the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. COKE] voted?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. He has not voted.

Mr. DOLPH. I am paired with that Senator, and will therefore withdraw my vote.

Mr. HUNTON. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. DANIEL] is absent from the city, and is paired with the Senator from Washington [Mr. SEATTLE].

Mr. CAREY. I am paired with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. MICHENER].

The result was announced—yeas 22, nays 23, not voting, 40; as follows:

YEAS—22.

Allen,	Gallinger,	Mills,	Teller,

NATIONAL UNIVERSITY.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1708) to establish a national university.

Mr. VILAS. Mr. President, I desire to address a few observations to the Senate in reference to this bill, which I think can be easily submitted by 2 o'clock.

I regard it a privilege to contribute voice and vote to this measure. After more than a century of waiting there are embodied in it the patriotic dreams, the generous hopes of the noblest of them who laid the foundations of this nation. Regardless of all dividing opinions, on this project were united the chief spirits who gave form to the liberty and constitutional order of America. Washington and Franklin, Adams and Jefferson, Madison and Monroe, Wilson, Pickens, Arthur, Roosevelt, Cleveland, and many others, no voice dissenting, shared their vision and vision and affection in the conception of this institution as the greatest ornament of the Republic.

In the convention of 1862, when the Civil War was at its height, the grant of power, in explicit terms, to establish the university was omitted only because after debate it was found to be unnecessary and no word should be superfluous in that grandest monument written by him. By his last will and testament Washington bequeathed a sum for its foundation to be accumulated at interest, which if husbanded and compounded until to-day would have been near $5,000,000. Nor ever from the hour when he first meditated the noble project did his confidence fail that his countrymen would rise to its execution.

Sir, I think we may share that generous ardor, the thrill of his inspiration touch us, as we shall join hands to upraise the structure which so moved his heart and the spirit of the fathers.

The bill before me, and especially satisfactory, because it carries the aims and purposes peculiarly befitting the place of such an institution in our Federal system. Three leading objects ought to govern its work. First and foremost, to advance by research and discovery the sum of human learning. Next, to gather in store and assure the safe preservation of every part and circumstance of it. And thirdly, to teach so as to lead the mind to the highest reaches of its power.

The university of the United States has no place to occupy as a competitor in the instruction of youth. It ought to enter no field held by the educational systems of the States or institutions of private benevolence, which ought to be, and are or will be, amply equipped and competent for such uses. But beyond and above these, standing upon and supported by them, the Federal establishment should rise for advancement and accumulation of learning—the crown, the head, the center, the illuminating sun of all.

In the service of society the prime value and usefulness of its educational agencies already on foot—the common schools, academies, colleges, and universities—are tuition, to impart knowledge to and train the minds of successive generations of youth in preparation for the tasks and duties of life in every art and vocation. But there is a higher range of perfection in scholarship which few are given the ability to grasp, and fewer yet are willing to consecrate their lives to acquire, with the common or too frequent doom of accompanying poverty. Yet these are especially the men whom the nation ought to reach out to raise up to the highest intellectual strength. Not in mere benefaction to them; that is but an incidental benefit in the pursuit of the aims of such a university. The greater end is to establish a pioneer corps to push the way of knowledge, and a garrison for its storehouse, as well as to provide constant recruitment of both these forces.

For, as I said, the supreme purpose of a national university ought to be the discovery, deduction, and acquisition of truth lying beyond and outside the confines of the known; the ambition of inquiry, insatiable curiosity, its ruling passion. The stock of learning grows, like the oak, in successive layers, slowly gathered from the elements of nature; and the power of the human mind finds increase only as it gathers more and more the secrets of her laws.

What is it, sir, that has brought to us the marvelous comforts and delights of our civilization of which we daily boast? Surely no one will contest the answer. Scientific knowledge expanding and applied to the air and earth and sea.

I doubt if any instructed man will say that the human mind holds greater faculties now than in ages past. In what were the native powers of the Chaldean sages, the wise men of the East, the philosophers of classic days, the subtle brains of the Middle Ages, inferior to our modern thinkers? Is not the only advantage of the latter in the since-discovered wealth of facts and deductions showing so much of the composition, nature, and operative laws of the earth, the heavens, the rocks, the elements, among? The measure of our modern superiority is not vertical, but lateral. We climb no higher peaks, although vastly more in number, as our modern thought has swept far wider ranges. Had the great men of ancient Rome enjoyed the sciences and liberty of to-day what might have been our state and condition? Projecting from the base of our attainments, who can picture or limit the marvels that await the generations to succeed us? Where, sir, should we rest and end until man's knowledge and nature's laws are coextensive?

Sir, in better hands this argument might be amplified, I think, with attractive force. I will do no more than to assert the wisdom, as it seems to me, of making this a national purpose incorporate in a national university. Let it be the vanguard, the forlorn hope of science, abundantly equipped to lead the quest for knowledge, with a power never before gathered to such an end. The United States of America in Congress assembled, all the power of man, can establish no nobler project; nay, nor one which, in the shrewd wit of a good bargain, will return greater dividends, reckoning them only in the dollars of wealth to be so distributed to the nation.

Happily the site proposed in this bill, and at our service again, is the very one chosen by Washington himself for the seat of this institution. Adorned and beautified as this city already is, full of fortunes of interest and national pride, and still more as it shall be, not many years will pass before its most cherished object and the warmest boast of the pride of Americans would be the university of the United States. I trust, sir, that we may share the honor of decreeing its establishment.

I shall not now occupy more time. There may be points of discussion which will elicit further debate in the future, although I have no desire to prolong the consideration of the measure. I trust the Senate will not fail to pursue its consideration to an end.

During the delivery of Mr. VILAS's remarks—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, it is the duty of the Chair to lay before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 1481) to amend an act entitled "An act to incorporate the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua," approved February 20, 1889.

Mr. MORGAN. Without displacing the unfinished business, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator who is now occupying the floor may be allowed to proceed with his remarks.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request?

Mr. MILLS. What is the request?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That the Senator from Wisconsin be permitted to conclude his remarks upon the university bill.

Mr. HALE. Then the Nicaragua bill will come up and occupy the rest of the day?

Mr. MORGAN. I stated that the request was to be without prejudice to that bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The request is that the unfinished business be passed over informally in order that the Senator from Wisconsin may conclude his remarks.

Mr. HALE. So that the university bill, if it comes up again, must come up by vote of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The university bill will necessarily go to the Calendar when the Senate resumes the consideration of the Nicaraguan Canal bill. The Chair hears no objection, and the Senator from Wisconsin will proceed.

After the conclusion of Mr. VILAS's remarks.

Mr. HUNTON said: By the consent of the Senator from Alabama I have the floor to give notice that to-morrow, after the routine business is completed, I shall move to take up the university bill during the morning hour.

MARITIME CANAL COMPANY OF NICARAGUA.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The unfinished business is before the Senate.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1481) to amend an act entitled "An act to incorporate the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua," approved February 20, 1889, the pending question being on the amendment reported by the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, when was discussing this subject yesterday I had the honor to receive from the present occupant of the chair [Mr. HARRIS] a suggestion on the subject of the constitutionality of the Nicaraguan Canal bill, and I then said that I hoped to be able to lay before the Senate an opinion on this subject drawn by a very much able man than I am, one of the ablest of the jurists of the United States, Chief Justice Charles P. Daly, of New York. I will read that as my argument upon this proposition, in addition to what I had the honor of saying yesterday upon the general topic of the power of the United States, in virtue of its national sovereignty and of the assemblage of all the great powers within its constitutional organism and its autonomy, which characterize the great governments of the world. I propose to read the argument of Chief Justice Daly upon the legal adjudications which have taken place in the United States touching the proper significance of the special power under which I said that this bill had been drawn for regulating commerce with foreign nations. Says Mr. Chief Justice Daly:

The right of Congress to create such a corporation is founded upon the clause in the Constitution, Article I, section 8, giving Congress the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several States. This clause was interpreted by Chief Justice Marshall in Gibbons vs. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, who says: "That it means commercial intercourse between nations and parts of nations, in all its branches, and that the words used in the Constitution have comprehended every species of commercial intercourse between the United States and foreign countries. The power hereby given, like all others vested in Congress, is complete in itself; that it may be exercised to its utmost extent, and acknowledges no limitations other than are prescribed in the Constitution." Says Mr. Chief Justice Daly: "The power conferred by this clause is plenary as to these objects."

This construction and interpretation has been approved and adhered to in the subsequent cases in the United States Supreme Court, and in the courts of the several States in which the question has arisen. (See United States vs. Marshall, 5 How. 365; State of Pennsylvania vs. Whiting and Belmont Bridge Company, 10 How. 41; United States vs. Coombs, 12 Peters, 28; United States vs. Holliday, 3 Wall. 47; U.S. v. Gilman vs. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 41; U.S. v. Paul vs. Virginia, 8 Wall. 182; 185; South Carolina vs. Georgia, 13 Wall. 41; Mississippi River Bridge Company, 102 U.S. 24; Chicago Bridge Company, 13 Wall. 156; Peoples' Brooks & Demis, 48 Wall. 134.)

And that this includes commerce carried on by corporations as well as individuals is evident in Paul vs. Virginia, 8 Wall. 182, in which Justice Field says: "At the time of the formation of the Constitution a large part of the commerce of the world was carried on by corporations. The East India Company may be named among the many corporations then in existence for our good to reduce the rates of canal tolls one-half below that of the Suez Canal in the passage of vessels back and forth from the eastern to the western coast of America," when they come to us and say "We delight in the thought of having a country in the West which we can get to without being compelled to traverse the continent on railroad lines or by doubling Cape Horn, and we have desires and ambitions, glorious expectations in regard to the future of this magnificent country, wealth of commodities, which we desire shall be realized, and you can do it simply giving us the opportunity to take these bonds at 3 per cent, and when we have done so it is capable of demonstration by the example of its twin sister, the Suez Canal, that out of 9,000,000 of tonnage—when you are entitled to 15,000,000 of tonnage per annum through the canal—you will make $5,500,000 in gold for the people of the United States, to be paid into the Treasury, and the people of the United States will get their canal tolls at one-half the price of the Suez rates."

When the people petition us to employ their credit, which they sustain by taxation, for their advantage and upon security that is perfectly safe, we should grant their requests with alacrity. When they show that in the absence of such relief they suffer, almost beyond endurance, from the grinding of monopoly, it becomes us to give respectful attention to their demands.

The people are willing that we should use their credit when it is for something to their advantage, and not use it merely for the purpose of buying up institutions that live by the interest and usury which they exact from the people. When we come to an enterprise like this, where the people have a chance to participate in the profits and enjoy the reductions of transportation rates that it will bring about, we do good to the people by the use of their credit, and they never object to it. On the contrary they are in favor of it.

It has been said, look at what the Government has done for the Union and Central Pacific railroads in the guarantee of the bonds and in the grants of land, and see how it has operated only to enrich a few men, and to enrich them enormously. I grant all that, and if we dared to shrink from the contemplation of that picture we would do it, but the picture and the reality are upon us and we have to meet them. But how much stock did the Government of the United States have in those railroads?

Sir, if the stock in those railroads had been held by the Government of the United States, and had the cautionary guards around its management that are provided in the bill, there would have been no Credit Mobilier, and there could not have been. If in those railroads the Government owned all or a large part of the stock and derived the income from the roads instead of its going to make multi-millionaires of men who were beggars in their youth, we should now have a Treasury replete with the income from those roads, and a people satisfied with the reduction of the rates of charges on those roads which the Government could have well afforded.

Those enterprises, however, are inside of the country and are amenable to some objections that do not exist as to a corporation or project that is out of it. I shall not stop to discuss those differences, because they have no bearing upon the question that I am now endeavoring to discuss. What I mean to say is that we have a credit established through the sacrifice, yes, the heroic courage and patriotism of the American people, which is to-day the most valuable asset in the world, and to take it off of the people, the advantage of the people consistently with constitutional rights and our constitutional duty, it is, to say the least of it, our privilege to do so.

No man can challenge us when we use the public credit for the purpose of carrying into effect this grand and indispensable improvement which is to connect our coast lines; which is to give us military and moral control over all these Americas; which is to prevent us from now undergoing the necessity of duplicating our fleet as to meet the power of the semicivilized countries of Japan and China; which is to add new life to that splendid domain, the Pacific Coast; which is to draw these States to us by closer bonds of friendship, alliance, interest, and sympathy than we have now; or can ever get when we are dissevered from them as we are; which is to glorify the country of which we are so proud by carrying into effect those conceptions and expectations that Columbus himself indulged and which come down through Humboldt and Maury and all the other scientists, explorers, and engineers of the United States and of the world.

The people will thank us if we use a little of the means that they place under our control to accomplish that for the Government and the people of the United States and the Continent of North America and South and Central America which can not be accomplished otherwise than by building this canal and for which the Creator of the world has placed fountains of water on the crest of the Andes to supply the power to lift the ships and to transport them from ocean to ocean, almost without charge, and with very little delay, so that our country shall be on the highway of that belt around the earth into which all the zones of the earth and all the seasons of the year will pour their amplest floods of production and transportation.

So, Mr. President, so far as I am concerned, I will now leave the matter in the hands of the Senate, unless it becomes necessary for me to answer some objection which may be made, and in that case I shall hope for better assistance from my colleagues upon the committee than I shall be able to render by any means. Inasmuch as an objection is made to fixing a time for a vote on the bill, I will ask a vote of the Senate now.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I desire to submit some remarks to the Senate upon the pending bill and shall occupy perhaps thirty or forty minutes. If Senators do not desire to remain here that long and prefer that the Senate shall adjourn or go into executive session, of course I am willing to acquiesce. But unless there is a desire of that kind I will proceed at this time.

Mr. MORGAN. Will the Senator from Kansas kindly yield to me to have read a paper which has just come to my desk?

Mr. PEPPER. Certainly.

Mr. MORGAN. It is a report from Victor Viquien, consul-general of the United States at Panama, on the subject of freights on the Panama Canal. I suppose the Senator from Kansas would like to hear the paper read before he proceeds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read as indicated.

The Secretary read as follows:

Under date of June 1, 1894, Victor Viquien, esq., consul-general of the United States at Panama, transmits to the Department a report upon steamship and railroad lines entering at the isthmus of Panama. With reference to the Panama Railroad, whose termini are Colon, on the Atlantic side, and Panama, on the Pacific, the length of it is 50 miles, he states that there are seven different classes of freight, the rates of which are as follows:

- "Class one, 40 cents per cubic foot.
- "Class two, 12 cents per pound.
- "Class three, eight-tenths of a cent per pound.
- "Class four, six-tenths of a cent per pound.
- "Class five, four-tenths of a cent per pound.
- "Class six, two-tenths of a cent per pound.
- "Class seven, nominal.

"The payment of all dues must be in United States gold coin.

"The freight transported by the Panama Railroad during the year 1893 amounted to 290,628 tons. It has in better years carried as much as 500,000 tons. The number of passengers carried by the line during the same year was 42,018. The line, for the first time in its history, failed to make money in 1893. It lost $18,000, as stated in the annual report of the Panama Railroad Company for the year 1893, and this was due chiefly to difficulties with the Pacific Mail Steamship Company."

In Consular Reports No. 15, February, 1892, page 57, there is a report by Consul Viquien upon the Adams Express Road, in which the classification of freight is given. The rates are the same as stated above, except that in the seventh class are included certain articles and rates not specified in the first six classes, and under this head the rates are given for a variety of articles.

Mr. DOLPH. Will the Senator from Kansas yield to me to submit a report from a committee?

Mr. PEPPER. Certainly.

AMERICAN REGISTERS FOR VESSELS LINDA AND ARCHER.

Mr. DOLPH. I am directed by the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2358) to provide American registers for the vessels Linda and Archer, to report to it without amendment and submit a report thereon. I make this report by the written direction of all the members of the committee now in the city. I ask for the present consideration of the bill, which consists of but five lines.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HAWLEY. Let the bill be read.

Mr. DOLPH. Yes; let it be read.

Mr. PEPPER. I do not wish to yield for the purpose of having the bill considered. I merely yielded so as to afford the Senator from Oregon the opportunity to submit the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is objection to the present consideration of the bill, and it will be placed on the Calendar.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Will the Senator from Kansas yield to me to make a motion, the nature of which he knows?

Mr. PEPPER. Certainly.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I move that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet on Monday next.

Mr. VEST. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

BRIDGE ACROSS CONTENTINEA CREEK, NORTH CAROLINA.

Mr. RANSOM. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate bill 2416, which is a bridge bill. It will only take a minute to pass it. It is reported unanimously from the Committee on Commerce.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2416) to amend section 8 of the act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Contentine Creek, at Grifton, Lenoir County, N. C., and to establish it as a post-road," approved August 23, 1894.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NEWARK BAY BRIDGE.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 7839) to bridge the Newark Bay.

Mr. HUNTON. I desire to call the attention of the Senator from New Jersey to the fact that the bill (S. 1708) to establish a national university, came over from the morning hour of the last day the Senate was in session.

Mr. MCPHERSON. The bill I desire to have considered will not lead to debate. If it gives rise to any debate, I shall withdraw my request for its consideration.

Mr. HUNTON. All right.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7839) to bridge the Newark Bay; which was reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments, in section 1, line 7, after the words "New Jersey," to strike out "now or hereafter to be granted; and in line 8, after the word "they," to strike out "or either of them;" so as to read:

COMMANDER DENNIS W. MULLANE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BLACKBURN in the chair) laid before the Senate the request of the House of Representatives to furnish the House with a duplicate copy of the joint resolution (S. NATIONAL UNIVERSITY.

Mr. HUNTON. I ask for the consideration at this time of the bill (S. 1708) to establish a national university, which came over from the morning hour of the last legislative session.

Mr. HALE. Let me ask what is before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia has asked to take up a bill which came over from the morning hour of Thursday last, the title of which has been stated.

Mr. HALE. If that is the university bill, it does not come up unless by a vote of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands the bill was not to come up except upon the request of the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. HALE. There was no agreement that the bill should come up by request; it went to the Calendar, and can only come up by motion, to be decided by the Senate, whether it will take the bill up or not.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed by the Secretary that the bill is properly on the Calendar, as stated by the Senator from Maine.

Mr. HALE. Therefore the Senator from Virginia should make a motion, if he desires the bill to be taken up.

Mr. HUNTON. If that is necessary, I move that the bill be taken up for consideration.

Mr. HALE. Now, let me ask the Senator whether he makes the motion with any expectation of pushing the bill to its passage in the morning hour this morning?

Mr. HUNTON. No; I do not.

Mr. HALE. But only for the purpose of enabling the Senator from South Dakota to make a speech?

Mr. HUNTON. That is all. I do not expect any other Senator to address the Senate upon the subject to-day, unless some Senator wishes to address the Senate in opposition to the bill.

Mr. HALE. So that nothing further than debate will take place?

Mr. HUNTON. Nothing but debate.

Mr. HALE. Then I do not object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Virginia that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1708) to establish a national university.

Mr. KYLE. Mr. President, the question has arisen thousands of times in many minds why we have no great national university under the support and care of the General Government. The failure to establish such an institution can not be laid to poverty, for we are one of the richest nations of the earth. We can not say that the people do not want it, for it has been the dream of scholars and statesmen for a hundred years. We can explain our failure to provide it only by the fact that our minds have been wrapped up in the material welfare of a new and rapidly growing nation. A nation is a human family upon a larger scale, and it must necessarily struggle first with the problem of subsistence and development of the material home, leaving the questions of culture and higher education for later years.

But while we can say with pride that the United States stand

It was not deemed important in submitting our first report, nor is it necessary in this, to mark the details of what the institution should be. It may be proper, however, to state in general terms—

1. That it should be broad enough to embrace every department of science, literature, and the arts, and every real profession.

2. That it should be high enough to supplement the highest existing institutions of the country, and to embrace within its field of instruction the utmost limits of human knowledge.

3. That in the interest of truth and justice, it should guarantee equal privileges to all duly qualified applicants for admission to the courses of instruction, and equal rights, as well as the largest freedom, to all earnest investigators, whether natives or foreigners, in the pursuit of acknowledged science.

4. That it should be so constituted and established as to command the hearty support of the American people, regardless of section, party, or creed.

5. That its material resources should be vast enough to enable it not only to furnish, and that either freely or at nominal cost, the best instruction the country can also to provide the best-known facilities for the work of scientific investigation, together with endowed fellowships and honorary investments, open respectively to the most meritorious graduates and to such investigators, whether natives or foreigners, having candidates thereof, shall have distinguished themselves most in the advancement of knowledge.

6. That it should be so coordinated in plan with the other institutions of the country as not only to conflict with them, but on the contrary to become at once a potent agency for their improvement and the means of creating a complete, harmonious, and efficient system of American education.

7. The idea of a national university, then, is as old as the nation; has had the fullest sanction of the wisest and best men of succeeding generations, and is in perfect harmony with the policy and practice of the Government.

There can certainly be no valid objection to establishing a national university. The only real difficulty that confronts us is that of providing funds. But a little generosity and foresight will enable us to see that one-third the proceeds derived from the sale of our public lands could not be used to a better purpose. Our whole public school system is supported in part by a generous donation of public lands. To support a national university by this method will be right in line with policy. From the Government reports we discover that the lands available for settlement are rapidly going, and that the fund derived from their sale is rapidly diminishing. In 1892 the sum total received from sale of these lands was $4,387,670.27; in 1893, $4,191,465.29, and in 1894, $2,674,285.79.

One-third of the sum for 1894 amounts to $891,428. This sum decreasing at the same rate would amount to— for 1895, about $650,000; for 1896, $450,000; for 1897, $250,000; for 1898, $150,000; and for 1899, $50,000, for a total of about $2,491,428.

This, as all know, is far from extravagance. It is a very small endowment. But with additional appropriations from time to time, and with large bequests from private fortunes, which can surely be counted upon, and with the score of bureaux, art collections, laboratories, departments of governments, collegiate institutions already established here and which would be accessible to the student, an ample endowment and equipment would soon be realized.

Such an institution, Mr. President, would be an honor to our country, and it seems strange that we should differ among ourselves in the face of so great educational possibilities. With patriotic pride the five hundred young men who now go abroad annually for these advantages would turn their steps to Washington. In this city would be congregated the greatest scientists and philosophers of the world. In a generation we should have in this country hundreds of specialists where now we have but few, and our country would contribute her share to the advanced thought of the age.

The structure of our educational system, Mr. President, is to-day incomplete. We have built well from the kindergarten to the State university; but the capstone—the national university—is yet needed to complete the structure. Let us do honor to the nation and to ourselves by finishing the work inaugurated one hundred years ago.

Mr. BLANCHARD rose.

Mr. PRUDEN. I desire to give notice that to-morrow morning, after the routine morning business, I shall call up the bill, which has been before the Senate, to establish a national university.

SULPHUR RIVER BRIDGE IN ARKANSAS OR TEXAS.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 2362) to amend the act entitled "An act authorizing the Texarkana and Fort Smith Railway Company to bridge the Sulphur River in the State of Arkansas or in the State of Texas," approved April 21, 1894.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LITTLE RIVER BRIDGE IN ARKANSAS.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 2363) to amend the act entitled "An act authorizing the Texarkana and Fort Smith Railway Company to bridge Little River in the State of Arkansas," approved April 21, 1894.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BALTIMORE CENTENNIAL EXPOSITION.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask unanimous consent to the consideration of the bill (S. 2343) in aid of the proposed to be held under the auspices of the Baltimore Centennial Association, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. The preamble recites that the Baltimore Centennial Association, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Maryland, for the purpose of commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the incorporation of the city of Baltimore, will hold during the year 1897, in Baltimore, Md., an exposition showing the resources, development, and progress of the United States of America, and particularly of the Southern States, embracing the arts, industries, manufactures, and the products of the soil, mine, and sea, and it is desired to make the exposition of a national and international character, so that all the nations of the world may participate.

The bill provides that all articles which shall be imported from foreign countries for the sole purpose of exhibition at the exposition, upon which there shall be a tariff or customs duty, shall be admitted free of payment of duty, customs fees, or charges, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe.

Section 2 provides that it shall be lawful at any time during the exposition to sell for delivery during or at the close of the exposition any of the goods or property imported for and actually on exhibition in the exposition buildings or on its grounds, subject to such regulations for the security of the revenue, and for the collection of the import duties, as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe. But no such sales shall be made during the progress of the exposition without the consent of the director-general of the exposition, and all such articles when sold or withdrawn for consumption in the United States shall be subject to the duty, if any, imposed upon such articles by the revenue laws in force at the date of the importation, and all penalties prescribed by law shall be applied and enforced against such articles and against the persons who may be guilty of any illegal sale or withdrawal.

Section 3 extends all of the provisions of the joint resolution authorizing foreign exhibitors at the World's Columbian Exposition to bring to this country foreign laborers from their respective countries for the purpose of preparing for and making their exhibits, approved August 5, 1892, to, and makes them applicable to, the Baltimore Exposition to the same extent as if the Baltimore Exposition was therein specifically named.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

WILLIAM F. BUCKMASTER.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 234) for the relief of William P. Buckmaster. The bill was reported favorably by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER] from the Committee on Claims. A similar bill has already been favorably considered by the Senate.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, in line 8, after the word "cents," to strike out "with interest thereon at the rate of 5 per cent from and after the 23d day of December, 1865;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby, authorized and directed to pay to William P. Buckmaster, surviving partner in the firm of Murphy & Co. of New York City, the sum of $2,286.41, the same being a balance due for labor and material furnished by James Murphy & Co. in the construction of machinery for the double ender vessel Oregon in 1862 and 1863, as per report of a board of officers organized by the Secretary of the Navy in pursuance of a resolution of the United States Senate adopted March 19, 1865.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had, on the 13th instant, approved and signed the following acts:

An act (S. 2318) for the relief of B. F. Beatty;

An act (S. 634) to provide for the better organization and satisfaction of outstanding military bounty land warrants and certificates of location of bounty land, and to amend an act approved June 2, 1888, and coinage were free, would furnish circulation and deprive them of their subsidy. That is the object. They want silver demonetized to get it out of the way; they want their subsidies so that they can get those bounties. They want silver out of the way and greenbacks out of the way, so they can get $500,000,000 of indebtedness which they can use to obtain subsidies.

The banking fraternity is ever present. They have active agents in every town and village. There are three thousand, seven hundred of these banks, I believe. They can control all your conventions. It is idle to say that six or seven banks can not get delegates to a convention, whether it be Republican, Democratic, or Populist, it makes no difference what. They will be there, and they will take such action as will defeat the party or give them control of it. They can defeat the Democratic and Republican parties, select a well-tried and true friend of the banks, whom they can trust under all circumstances; they nominate him and then insert in the platform ambiguous language to prevent the people voting upon this plain question of whether the banks shall own the country or whether the people shall be free. That is the issue before the country.

So long as you pay subsidies to the banks, so long as you pass legislation from which they can make from $1,800 to $3,600 a year out of the investment of $100,000 and have their money besides, so long as you hold out the inducements to them by your legislation, you will find them everywhere to prevent legislation adverse to their rule. This is a bank-governed country. Your conventions and your Congress are influenced by this powerful agent, the banks. The press is under obligations to the banks. Many of them are stock companies, and their stock is placed with the banks. The stock of that great disseminator of information, the Western Union Telegraph Company, has money value, and is held in the banks as collateral security on margins, and voted by the banks.

Every scheme presented by this Administration, by the last Administration, and by all Administrations which we have had for the last twenty years, has been to aggrandize the banks, to secure bank subsidies. The people are prostrate before the banks.

You put out $15,000,000 per annum of interest when you put out $500,000,000 of bonds, and it is suggested to charge only one-fourth of 1 per cent interest on it. They want to increase the subsidy to the banks. Under any bill offered or suggested the banks would get at least $100,000,000 annually from the $15,000,000 interest on $500,000,000 3 percent bonds. Ten millions a year would be sufficient corruption fund, besides making banking profitable. So long as you subsidize the banks through your legislation, so long they will be at your conventions, so long will they use the press to dominate public opinion.

Under the condition of the country after twenty years of bank rule. We have had thirty years of peace and abundant harvests. No man can point out whence the calamities which now afflict the country have come, other than from banks. What has been adverse to the prosperity of the country but financial legislation, causing a scarcity of money? The banks by making you demonetize silver—and they made you do it—by that doubled the value of money in which they deal, and doubled the obligation of every poor debtor who is struggling to make a home.

The banks have now become defiant. They moved cautiously until the spring of 1893, and then they brought on a panic, and they have kept it on to force legislation. By that means they secured the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman Act, and by continuing that panic they expect to get this subsidy and get those bonds, retire your legal tenders, and place the whole country at their feet. That is why this panic is kept up. There was no necessity for any panic in this country. Our laws were the same as in England and Germany. They and we had the option to pay our obligations in either gold or silver, and in this country there was something more.

In the Sherman Act it was made the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to coin silver and to redeem the Treasury notes issued under it. In disregard of that duty the Harrison Administration refused to coin silver and promised to pay gold, and Cleveland's Administration continued the same policy of paying gold, and then proclaimed that bankruptcy was coming. The whole bank-and-money system declared that it was at hand when they commenced pulling out the gold. France and Germany stood without being disturbed at all. They said, "We have the right to pay in either silver or gold, and we will protect the interests of the Government," and they do that to this day; but, instead of our doing likewise, it was said to be necessary for our credit that gold should be paid out and taken away; that it was necessary for our credit that we should pay more gold and have it taken away, and now it is necessary for our credit that we shall destroy the legal tenders of every description and give bankers a subsidy for every dollar of money the people have and which the banks circulate on the credit of the Government. Has the credit of the Government been benefited?

The same men now point to the $1,100,000,000 of circulation in the country, consisting of greenbacks, Treasury notes, bank notes, and silver certificates, all to be redeemed in gold. It is necessary in order to do that to do what? To buy gold and increase the interest-bearing debt $500,000,000. If any of these plans be carried into effect upon the policy that you buy gold at any price to maintain the gold standard, you will give a subsidy to the banks for issuing money, and then the people are at the mercy of the banks, all their rights and privileges are gone, for bank rule has brought this country to its present distress, and bonds mean money for the banks and poverty and want for the people.

Every Administration has been in harmony with the banks. For twenty years we have had bank rule in the Treasury Department, and we have had bank construction and bank control in the two Houses of Congress, by which we have been sent to the gold standard. Now it is proposed that we shall go to the bank standard and pay the banks for every dollar of money we are permitted to issue. Before the people shall have any money we must give the banks the privilege of expanding and contracting the currency as shall best suit the ends of the rings of speculators who surround the banks.

The gold of the world is hoarded for war or used for speculation, and none can be had unless our masters are willing to let us have it. We have $90,000,000,000 of indebtedness resting upon this country, public and private, with no means of getting money to pay it, unless we pay tribute to the banks in the way of a subsidy. That is what each Administration bill proposes. We must pay in gold; we must continue to sell our products lower and lower; we must continue to carry out the schemes of those who are plotting against free institutions. The goldites of Europe tell us frankly that gold contraction will stifle democracy and the government of the people and secure the rule of concentrated capital. Their plan is to rule this world by concentrated capital. In order to crush the spirit of liberty they deprive the people of money. They know full well that if you take the money from the people they soon become weak, miserable, cowardly, and submissive. That is the way to blot out human liberty; and in this question between the rights of the people and the banks civilization itself is involved.

So far as any money scheme is concerned which shall aggrandize the banks, I am opposed to it. I am in favor of the money of the Government, and if that is not good enough with the security of the Government, issue bonds and put those bonds into the Treasury, but do not give them out to others to draw interest on them from the Government. The national bank notes are Government money upon which we pay interest to the banks, for whose redemption we are responsible; and if this paper is issued upon the credit of the Government and bonds are necessary, let the Government own the bonds and cease to give the money to the speculators who have brought distress to every household in the land.

Twenty years of bank rule has produced a condition of distress in this country the like of which has never been witnessed since the discovery of America. No wars, no famine, have produced such distress as now prevails in this land.

Then it is said that you must have a larger army to suppress anarchy. This country for a hundred years was a sanitarium for the cure of the worst anarchist. Residence in this country was supposed to cure the worst anarchist. Anarchy is the progeny of oppression and hard times. If you bring about oppression and hard times in this country, you will make the people discontented and you will create the necessity for standing armies to keep the peace. That is what our enemies want. Banks want a strong government to protect them in their heartless rule.

The banks know that extortion and oppression lessen military rule. They know that the iron hand of despotism also curtails the extortion of the people in submission, but they will not cease their oppression. I undertake to say that there is no interest except the bank interest against the remonetization of silver. The arguments against returning to the money of the Constitution amount to nothing. We have answered them time and time again. Nobody can show that we will be injured by opening our mints to silver; nobody can show that we will be injured by gold going to a premium, but we can point you to prosperity wherever such conditions exist.

I merely wish to say that although I may be in the minority, although I may stand alone, I shall stand for the right of the people to have the money of the Constitution restored, to have the Government taken from the banks and restored to the people, that they may again have prosperity, as they had once, years during the better days of the Republic. I shall continue to stand for the return of those conditions, and those conditions are the same as I have promised; it is either the banks or the people; that is the issue.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a memorial of the Legislature of the State of Maine, which was read and referred to the Committee on Commerce, as follows:

STATE OF MAINE.

Memorial to Congress relating to free-ship bill, so called.

The State of Maine has long been the largest builder of sailing ships of any State in the Union. For over a century and a half ship building and ship owning and the trades dependent on them have been an important industry and have added to the population of our coast. In fifty of our towns these are the principal trades known to our people. The prosperity of a population of 200,000 people within our borders is inseparably connected with American shipbuilding, the building, the owning, and the sailing of ships.

To the agitation of measures pending in Congress, which our people believe encompass the destruction of this industry, older than our State or nation, projected almost from the nation's birth by the laws which it is now proposed to repeal, our State can not remain a silent witness.

If our registry laws have been enacted to increase our tonnage engaged in the foreign trade, which is now protected from foreign competition, yet in domestic tonnage, where they give full protection, we have built up a fleet larger than any other nation.

For our own State these laws have done more; they have enabled our shipbuilders to meet the change from wood to steel, and to establish within our borders extensive timber yards, which have been the mainstay of our merchant marine unsurpassed by any similar vessels in the world.

We ask our countrymen to recall the fact that under these laws in the crises of three great wars, Maine has been enabled, far out of proportion to her numerical strength, to contribute to the national glory and success upon the seas, and to take warning that a repeal of these laws, while it means ruin to so many of our people, will be a deadly blow to the national security and national defense. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the name of our State, united in common defense, with-out regard to party, we protest against any change in these laws, and that a copy of this resolve be sent to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the President of the Senate, and the State's delegation in Congress.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, January 11, 1895.

Read and passed finally.

LEWELLYN POWERS, Speaker.

IN SENATE, January 11, 1895.

Read and passed finally.

GEORGE M. SEIDERS, President.

JANUARY 11, 1895.

Approved.

HENRY B. CLEAVES, Governor.

Mr. WILSON presented resolutions adopted by the Baconian Scientific Club of the State University of Iowa, of Iowa City, Iowa, favoring the passage of House bill No. 119, providing for the protection of the forest lands of the United States; which were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. PEPPER presented the memorial of M. V. Decker and sundry other citizens of Lincoln, Ohio, remonstrating against the issue of bonds by the Government, and praying for the enactment of a free-coinage bill, at the ratio of 16 to 1, with the issued other legal-tender money by the Government, that the aggregate circulation of gold, silver, and paper, may be not to exceed $30 to the head of population; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. ALLISON. I present a petition in behalf of the Sac and Fox Indians of Mississippi, residing in the State of Iowa, praying for the enactment of such legislation as will secure to those Indians the adjustment of their claims for their proportionate shares of the annuities and other moneys inuring to the Sac and Fox Indians of the Mississippi under their treaties. Mr. HAWLEY. I present the annual report of the National Academy of Sciences, which is required by the charter of that institution. I have done so for many years, and I have been in the habit of presenting a resolution for the printing of the report, but that is now provided for in the new law concerning printing, which was, I understand, signed by the President on Saturday. So this report takes its usual course and goes to the Printer, I suppose.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be received. Shall it be referred to the Committee on Printing or ordered printed?

Mr. HAWLEY. I think it is not necessary to make the usual reference to the Committee on Printing, because the new law concerning public printing distinctly provides for this document, among others.

I. H. HATHAWAY & CO.

Mr. COCKRELL. If the morning business is through I ask the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The morning business is concluded, and the Calendar under Rule VIII is in order.

Mr. QUAY. I desire to call up the bill (H. R. 8075) for the relief of I. H. Hathaway & Co., of which I gave notice Saturday. It now lies upon the table, having been received from the other House.

Mr. COCKRELL. I understand that a similar bill has already passed the Senate, and that it will lead to no discussion.

Mr. QUAY. In the last Congress a similar bill passed the other House, and it passed this branch the last day of the session, but failed to receive the signature of the President. I am informed, because he could not examine the papers in time. The bill is brief. I send the report of the House Committee to the desk, which may be read if necessary.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Pennsylvania asks for the present consideration of the bill indicated by him.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to instruct Thomas H. Hathaway & Co., in payment of contract work done at the mouth of the St. Johns River, Florida, the original check having been lost in transmission through the United States mails between St. Augustine, Fla., and Philadelphia, Pa.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8148) making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The pending question is upon the appeal of the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] from the decision of the Chair, on which the Senator from Nevada [Mr. STEWART] is entitled to the floor.

[Mr. STEWART resumed and concluded the speech begun by him on Saturday. The entire speech appears elsewhere in to-day's RECORD.]

Mr. GORMAN addressed the Senate. After having spoken for some time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUSTON in the chair). The hour of 3 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which is the bill (S. 1431) to amend the act entitled "An act to incorporate the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua," approved February 20, 1889.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask that the unfinished business may be laid aside temporarily, retaining its place, and that we may proceed with the bill which has been pending.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it will be so ordered. The Senator from Maryland is entitled to the floor.

[Mr. GORMAN resumed and concluded his speech, which will be published hereafter.]

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, I do not desire to enter into any lengthy discussion of the questions involved in the debate, and especially of those brought into it by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN]. We have departed somewhat from the question immediately pending; the appropriation proposed to be made for the collection of the income tax; but at last we have in a public way in the Senate Chamber disclosed to us what most have known to be the condition and situation of our country. The Senate and the country owe a debt to the Senator from Maryland for truthfully portraying our situation. He occupied but a moment in the discussion or suggestion of any question relating to the currency. He has shown us truthfully that the pressing question before us now is, "What shall we do to carry on the necessary operations of the Government?" He has shown us truthfully that it is not within the power of the two Houses of Congress to reduce materially the appropriations for the purpose of carrying on the Government.

Although we are about to make the appropriations for the next fiscal year and have not yet passed a single appropriation bill through both Houses of Congress except the Military Academy bill, bonds bill, and tells us truthfully, that whatever we may do to carry on the year, but a small diminution of the amounts appropriated from year to year to carry on the Government. He has shown us that in 1894 there was a deficit in our revenues amounting, in round numbers, to $70,000,000 in the execution of the appropriations which were made the year before. He has shown us that the appropriations for the current year are but a few million dollars less than they were last year.

He has shown us from the report of the Secretary of the Treasury, that from the 1st day of July, 1894, to the 12th day of January current, the expenditures have increased $34,000,000 over the revenues; and with all his experience in these affairs of our country he predicts that this deficiency will be increased between now and the 1st of July. He tells us, beyond that, that in the year 1896 our revenues will be largely less than our expenditures for that year. Yet the best commendation the Senator from Maryland can give on the 14th of January, nearly two months before the expiration of the present Congress, is that these are to be relegated as respects the deficiencies in our revenue and the means of carrying on the Government to a House of Representatives and a Senate which under existing law can not convene until December, 1895.

Mr. President, after listening, as I have listened, with deep in-

No. 25.

I present a petition very numerous signed by citizens of St. Louis and elsewhere in Missouri favoring the passage of House bill 5246, known as the Stone immigration bill, praying that anarchists, mafias, or members of any other society whose principles are inimical to our Government, be added to the excluded classes, and that a nonpartisan commission be appointed to investigate the evils of immigration, etc. I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. VOORHEES. I am authorized by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1667) to provide for coinage at the branch mint at Denver, Colo., to report it without amendment. I ask that the bill, together with the communication from the Treasury Department, be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be placed on the Calendar, and the order to print in the RECORD will be made in the absence of objection.

The bill and accompanying paper are as follows:

A bill to provide for coinage at the branch mint at Denver, Colo.

Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter there shall be carried on at the branch mint of the United States at Denver, in the State of Colorado, the coinage of gold and silver.

SEC. 2. That the provisions of sections 3496 and 3497 of the Revised Statutes of the United States are hereby made applicable to the mint of the United States at Denver, Colo., and that so much of sections 3558, 3559, 3560, and 3561 of the Revised Statutes of the United States as relates to the mint at Denver, Colo., are hereby repealed; and that the compensation of the officers of said mint shall be the same as those of the mint at Carson City, Nev.

SEC. 3. That all laws and parts of laws in force in relation to the mints of the United States, and for the government of the officers and persons employed therein, shall be applicable to the mint at Denver.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE SECRETAR

Washington, D. C., December 2, 1897

SIR: I have the honor to submit the following statement in regard to the establishment of a mint of the United States at Denver, Colo., as contemplated by Senate bill No. 1667, transmitted to the Department in your letter under date of July 27, 1894.

The following tabular statement exhibits the production of gold in Colorado and the adjacent States for the calendar years 1892-94, and also the estimated production for the calendar year 1895:

States.	1892.	1893.	1894.
Colorado.	$5,300,000	$7,527,000	$11,357,000
South Dakota.	3,700,000	4,000,000	4,500,000
Arizona.	1,600,000	1,184,000	1,600,000
New Mexico.	800,000	853,000	1,200,000
Utah.	600,000	750,000	1,000,000
Idaho.	1,731,000	1,047,000	2,200,000
Montana.	2,800,000	3,370,000	4,500,000
Total.	16,292,000	19,708,500	28,077,000

It is not probable that any gold would be sent to Denver outside of that produced in States above mentioned, and I should estimate that about one-half of the gold produced in these would be sent to Denver for coinage in case of the establishment of a mint at that point.

The gold bullion deposited at the assay offices at Boise City and Helena could be sent to Denver at cheaper rates for transportation than to the mint at Philadelphia, to which the same is now sent.

In case of the establishment of a coinage mint at Denver, the depositors of gold bullion would be paid in coin or in the bars, as they might prefer, and there is no doubt but that it would have a tendency to increase the circulation of gold coin in Colorado and the adjacent States and Territories. So long as silver is not coined by the Government there would be little if any, of that metal deposited at the Denver mint, but if the coinage of silver should ever be resumed to any large extent by the Government, there is no question but that silver bullion would go to Denver.

The present mint building at Denver was purchased by the government in 1862; it is in need of constant repairs, is unsafe. It is not suitable for either the operations of the mint or the assay office. The lot upon which the building stands is in the business part of the city and could no doubt be sold upon advantageous terms and a site purchased in a section of the city where land is not so valuable and equally as well suited for the construction of a building for these operations of either a mint or assay office, which the present building is not adapted to.

The present indications are that the amount of gold bullion deposited at the Denver mint for the current fiscal year will be at least $600,000, and the cost of the little doubt but that it will continue to increase for a series of years to come.

Respectfully, yours,

vessels an appendix, stating separately, for use in foreign ports, the measurement of spaces and gross and net tonnage, according to the rules in force in the foreign nation for which the vessel may clear.

Mr. SHERMAN. I inquire whether the usual provisions in regard to the freedom of importation of goods for this exposition have been inserted in the joint resolution? If not, they should be, because without those provisions all the other provisions contained in the joint resolution will be of no effect.

Mr. WALSH. I think that was provided for in the original act making an appropriation of $200,000 for the exposition.

Mr. SHERMAN. If that has been done, it is all right.

Mr. WALSH. I have just sent for a copy of the original law. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed by the Secretary that the provisions suggested by the Senator from Ohio were made at a former session.

Mr. WALSH. That is the way I understand it.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 1683) to authorize the Secretary of War to issue four condemned iron guns and projectiles to the officer in charge of the Government lot in Oakwood Cemetery, near Chicago, Ill.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills: in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 3724) for the relief of Dennis McIntyre; and

A bill (H. R. 7474) authorizing Lieutenant-Colonel Forwood and Dr. George H. Penrose to accept certain testimonials from the Argentine Government.

HENRY C. LA POINT.

Mr. DUBOIS. I ask that the Committee on Military Affairs be discharged from further consideration of the bill (S. 90) for the relief of Henry C. La Point, late a first lieutenant in the Second United States Cavalry, and that the bill and accompanying papers be withdrawn from the files of the Senate. It is a bill which was introduced by myself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GALLINGER in the chair). If there be no objection, the committee will be discharged and the bill and accompanying papers withdrawn, as requested.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 3724) for the relief of Dennis McIntyre was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

The bill (H. R. 7474) authorizing Lieutenant-Colonel Forwood and Dr. George H. Penrose to accept certain testimonials from the Argentine Government was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8148) making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, and for other purposes.

a party who brought suit a few days ago rights which he did not have when the suit was commenced?

Mr. HILL. That will be the effect of the amendment. I am frank to say that will be its effect. In case it shall be held by the court that that statute is an objection to the suit, it will be so held. I think counsel will argue that a statute which prevents the bringing of an equitable suit to restrain the payment of an unconstitutional tax is void; but I am one of those who believe it is at least a very serious question whether Congress can pass a statute, and then can say in another statute that no litigant shall have the right to prevent the collection of that tax by the well-known ordinary equitable remedies which exist in our courts.

Mr. President, as I was saying when I was interrupted, the Government has already raised the question. Senators have read the argument in the morning papers.

Mr. ALLEN. I wish to put one question to the Senator.

Mr. HILL. Wait until I answer this. The Senator will have ample opportunity.

Mr. ALLEN. Very well.

Mr. HILL. Senators are aware that the Attorney-General's Department already raises the point that this equitable action to restrain the collection of this tax upon the ground of its unconstitutionality can not be maintained because of this very statute. Supposing the Government succeeds in that technical point. The object of this amendment, the object which I supposed we all sought, was to have a speedy, fair and judicial settlement of this question. Is there a lawyer here who says that the questions involved are not serious? I think no one will claim to the contrary. These questions are not only serious upon the point of the unconstitutionality of the statute, but serious as to its details. There are Senators sitting around this circle who have written elaborate opinions upon the question as to what constitutes a direct tax. Senators have not forgotten the fact that upon the great question of the cotton tax the court was equally divided. Then, can we shut our eyes to the point that this is not a most serious question?

What is a direct tax? Have we not in this very law we passed authorized the collection of a tax for rents of land? Have we not authorized a tax upon the products of land? Have we not authorized provisions in the law which involve substantially the very question raised in the cotton-tax case, upon which the court was equally divided? Can we shut our eyes to the fact that the legal profession throughout the country regards this question as the most serious in their character? Is there a litigation pending in this city or anywhere else, which has been brought in good faith to raise the question in the courts, will it benefit us, will it make this law more popular, will it add to its efficiency, will it give our side, the Democratic side, a better standing before the people who have that suit tumbled out of court upon this miserable technicality? I think not. I think it best we should have this question disposed of as speedily as possible.

Mr. President, I do not think it is any objection to this amendment if it only reaches one case. There have been one or two other suits brought. One of them was brought by one of the ablest firms of lawyers in the city of New York, Messrs. Clarence A. Seward and others. I notice in the newspapers that they have brought suit to test this question. They can avail themselves of this statute if it shall be passed. If there be but one, and that suit here in the District of Columbia, where the parties are, who they can expedite it immediately to the Supreme Court, is there any harm done? I fail to see any. I can not see what possible objection there can be to it.

I am not disposed to say that the construction given by the Senator from Missouri and the Senator from California that the amendment applies only to pending litigation is not the correct one. If that is so, and anybody objects to it upon that ground, the Senator from Missouri suggested an amendment which would cover any action which could be brought; but I am inclined to think from the criticism which has been made that it is better to leave the amendment as it is; that it is better to recognize the fact that the question can be disposed of in one suit, and let the rest of the tax go on. The only point is that the suit can be expedited. If you tumble them out of court upon the technical point which is raised, that a suit can not be brought to restrain the collection of taxes, you will have lost three or four months' time. My object is to give whoever has brought an action the right to proceed with it and get a decision upon the point.

The Senator says it is a reflection upon our legislation to provide a way by which it can be reviewed. I think not. The statutes are full of provisions whereby a citizen may institute suit to determine the illegality of actions under them, in substance providing for the determination of the constitutionality of the statute itself. I do not believe that we have a right to hedge ourselves in by any statute which substantially deprives a litigant of his usual common law right of determining the question of the constitutionality of a statute. But what is the use of putting these hindrances in the way? What is the use of placing obstacles there? What good does it do? This question is going to be decided sooner or later.

Why annoy the people with these matters? Let them have free access to the courts.

Mr. President, as I said the other day, the objection then made was that everybody was going to bring suit. To-day the objection is narrowed down to a statement that there is a suit pending here, and the amendment, if adopted, will help that suit out. That may be one of the merits of the amendment. I do not see what is to be gained by voting down the amendment from a party point of view, a patriotic point of view, or any other point of view. I conceive the ordinary rule to be that we should avoid special legislation. But that this is an extraordinary situation no one can be so blind that he can not see it. This tax presents a most interesting legal and constitutional question. The features of the act also present these questions. They have been argued and they are being argued by the bar all over the country. I think the wisest course for us to pursue is to provide some simple remedy whereby the constitutionality of the law may be tested in the courts.

If the amendment in some of its details is defective, if other Senators are opposed to having any provision for contesting the constitutionality of the tax, and think the party must be remanded to the necessity of paying the tax, then bringing suit afterwards, and then, after a judgment is obtained, having to come to Congress to get an appropriation to pay it back, I do not concur in any such view. There is no good to be subserved by putting a citizen to all this trouble to obtain his rights.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. May I ask the Senator from New York a question?

Mr. HILL. Certainly.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I am with the Senator from New York, as he already knows.

Mr. HILL. In spite of my argument.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I wish to make a suggestion to the Senator. Suppose the amendment is not adopted and the collection of the tax is proceeded with all over the country; no suit can then be brought, as I suppose is generally conceded, until the tax is collected and paid into the Treasury.

Mr. HILL. I think there is some doubt whether suit can be brought then.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Suppose the amendment is not adopted and the tax is collected, will not the effect be to enable the rich men of the country, who are able to employ lawyers to go into court and test the matter, and recover the money, while the great majority of the taxpayers, whose incomes are small and whose taxes are small, will not be able to go into court, and they will thus be placed at a disadvantage in comparison with men who are able to employ lawyers to go into court and recover the money?

Mr. HILL. The Senator from Oregon has hit the nail exactly on the head. If these litigants in the District of Columbia are willing, while it is for their own personal benefit, to employ at their own expense able counsel and substantially have the question settled for the taxpayers of the whole country, why should they not have the opportunity?

Mr. WHITE. I desire to ask the Senator from New York whether he knows of any principle which justifies the passage of a law by Congress giving the payer of an income tax a right which other taxpayers do not possess? Why should such a discrimination be made?

Mr. HILL. I need not repeat what I have said here, because the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COKKELL] is anxious to get a vote upon the bill, as I see from his looks and his manner. But I simply say our internal-revenue tax laws have been upon the statute books a great many years, and every constitutional question about them is pretty nearly well settled. So of our tariff taxes, in the main.

We do not need as to those laws any such exceptional legislation as this; for I admit it is exceptional. But I do submit that under the circumstances which surround the imposition of these taxes, the doubtful questions that arise not only in regard to the main question, but upon the details of the law, should be judicially determined. For instance, even if it is not a direct tax, and if it is held to be an excise tax, I doubt, in view of the constitutional provision that taxation must be uniform, if the constitutional power of Congress to provide that a family shall be entitled to only one exemption. I doubt the constitutionality of the provision of the statute which says that a man is entitled to that exemption, but that if he be married and his wife have a separate estate, as she is allowed to have under the laws of nearly all the States in our Union, she is not entitled also to the same exemption. Yet the law is called uniform. I do not believe in any such discrimination.

Sir, it is not uniform or just in some of the numerous questions that I have. I have simply stated some of the numerous questions that are involved in the case. I do not believe Congress has a right to compel a man to pay an income tax upon the interest of State or municipal bonds. I believe that the municipality and the State government have a right to issue bonds, and that the National Government can not reduce the value of those bonds or affect them by taxing them. That is a most serious question involved in the enforcement of the law. The income-tax law contains provisions of doubtful legality, doubtful constitutionality, doubtful propriety. But we have discussed all those subjects before, and I am not going to discuss them again.

I do not speak of the question of propriety; that has been determined. We have launched our ship and it must sail. I merely wish now to provide against the breakers that it must meet. I desire that as little annoyance be given the people in its enforcement as possible. I think that if one litigation, instituted in good faith, will determine the question, the sooner it is done the better. If the gentlemen who disagree with me are right in their contention, then we will soon realize the advantage of this magnificent and beneficent tax. If, on the contrary, it should turn out that I am right in my views, then we can soon provide some other means of revenue to take its place. It will save litigation; it will save annoyance; it will save trouble, and I say it is better not only for the party to which I belong, but better for the people of the whole country.

Mr. PALMER and Mr. COCKRELL addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Illinois [Mr. PALMER].

Mr. PALMER. Does the Senator from Missouri desire to make a request of me?

Mr. COCKRELL. I desire to move to lay on the table the appeal from the decision of the Chair, unless the Senator from Illinois wishes to discuss the appeal.

Mr. PALMER. No; I do not desire to discuss that question.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move to lay on the table the appeal from the decision of the Chair on the question of order.

Mr. HILL. What is the object of that motion? What is the effect of it?

Mr. COCKRELL. We can take a vote on the amendment if the Senator is willing.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is moved that the appeal from the decision of the Chair be laid on the table.

Mr. HILL. On that I wish to have the yeas and nays.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Chair to state the parliamentary situation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state it. The Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] offered an amendment to the pending bill. The Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] made the point of order against the amendment, which was sustained by the then occupant of the Chair, the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER], from which decision the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] appealed. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] moves to lay the appeal on the table. On that the Senator from New York demands the yeas and nays. Is the demand seconded?

Mr. QUAY. Mr. President—

Mr. COCKRELL. I wish to make a statement. This morning the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] asked to withdraw the point of order and let the whole thing fall, so that we could take a vote directly upon the amendment. The Senator from New York objected. If the Senator from New York will now consent that the Senator from Alabama may withdraw his point of order, I am perfectly willing that the Senate shall take a vote directly upon the amendment.

Mr. HILL. I merely objected to the withdrawal of the point of order because it was so very clear that the point of order was not well taken, and I produced the precedents to show it, that I thought it unfair to the then presiding officer of the Senate, who was here this morning, that the question should be thus disposed of. I do not care what about it, sir. The question ought to be settled by some proper decision. Otherwise, when it arises again it never will be known which is the proper way to decide it. But I am willing to expedite the matter. I do not want to stand here in the attitude of desiring to prevent a fair vote upon the question; and unless some other Senator objects, if the Senator desires to withdraw the motion to lay the appeal on the table I have no objection.

Mr. QUAY. I shall object, Mr. President. I think it is important that a vote be had both on the amendment and the appeal.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will remind Senators that debate is not in order.

Mr. QUAY. If the Senator from Missouri can suggest any method of arriving at that conclusion I will withdraw my objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair must remind Senators that debate is not in order.

Mr. COCKRELL. We certainly can vote if we stop discussion.

Mr. QUAY. I desire a vote on the amendment, the Senator will understand, as well as upon the appeal.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Missouri to lay the appeal on the table.

Mr. COCKRELL. I will withdraw the motion for the purpose of hearing what the Senator from Pennsylvania has to say.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is withdrawn temporarily.

Mr. QUAY. It seems to me that if the decision of the Chair is sustained and afterwards the amendment is reoffered and the Senator from Missouri does not raise the point of order upon it, we might reach a conclusive vote upon both questions.

Mr. COCKRELL. If the Senate will, without further discussion, take a vote upon the appeal, I am perfectly willing that that course shall be pursued.

Mr. VOORHEES (to Mr. COCKRELL). Otherwise you will insist on the motion.

Mr. QUAY. Then we are to have a vote on both questions?

Mr. GRAY. No; you do not have a vote on both questions if the appeal is not sustained.

Mr. QUAY. Yes; I will reoffer the amendment.

Mr. HILL. Let me ask what is proposed to be done with the appeal?

Mr. QUAY. I will offer the amendment to another part of the bill. I do not desire to have a vote upon both questions.

Mr. COCKRELL. Well, we will take a vote on the point of order. I will withdraw the motion to lay the appeal on the table, and let us take a vote now on the question of order.

Mr. QUAY. Will the Senator from Missouri consent to have a vote afterwards on the amendment?

Mr. COCKRELL. I will, if it can be had without debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?

Mr. HILL. Are we to take a vote? I supposed it was understood that the question was to come to a vote.

Mr. COCKRELL. It was.

Mr. HILL. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New York desire the yeas and nays?

Mr. COCKRELL. I agree to withdraw the motion to lay the appeal on the table.

Mr. HILL. Is there any objection to a withdrawal of the appeal?

Mr. QUAY. Yes, I object to it, because I desire a vote on the appeal as well as on the amendment. The Senator from Missouri has agreed, and it is unanimously consented to, I believe, that votes shall be taken on both questions.

Mr. GRAY. I do not consent to it. I consent to a withdrawal of the appeal if we can get a vote on the point of order, but I do not consent that the point of order shall not be made again.

Mr. HILL. If the Senate will to a withdrawal of the motion to lay the appeal on the table, I have no objection now to the withdrawal of the appeal from the decision of the Chair, if the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] desires to withdraw the point of order or thinks it best to do so. That will bring us to a vote directly on the amendment.

Mr. MORGAN. That is what I offered to do this morning.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Not at all, because then if the decision of the Chair stands, the amendment is not received. The decision of the Chair is to the effect that the amendment is not in order.

Mr. WHITE. It can be reoffered.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. If the appeal is withdrawn, that is the end of it, I take it.

Mr. QUAY. I think it is well understood that we now take a vote directly upon the appeal, the motion to lay the appeal on the table being withdrawn, and that afterwards when the amendment is offered we shall get a vote on it.

Mr. HILL. That involves a parliamentary question, and not the merits of the proposition.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?

Mr. HILL. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GEORGE (when Mr. COKE's name was called). The Senator from Texas [Mr. COKE] is detained at his room by illness. He is paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH].

Mr. McLAURIN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. IRBY], and vote "yea."

Mr. PALMER (when his name was called). I am paired generally with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. PUGH (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], but I am assured that he would vote with me on this question, and I therefore vote "yea."

Mr. HILL. I do not know that. I simply call the attention of the Senator from Alabama to the fact that I produced a decision made by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] himself involving this very question.

Mr. PUGH. He agrees with his colleague.
Mr. ROACH (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS], and withhold my vote.
Mr. VEST (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WASHBURN]. I will transfer my pair to the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER], and vote "yea."

Mr. WHITE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. SHOUP]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. VILAS. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin] was called away from the Chamber and is paired on this question and generally with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY].

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. DOLPH], who is necessarily absent from the Senate, is paired with the Senator from Texas [Mr. COKE].

Mr. HUNTON. My colleague [Mr. DANIEL] is paired with the Senator from Washington [Mr. SQUIRE].

Mr. HARRIS (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRIS], who, I believe, has not voted. I will transfer that pair to the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. RANSOM], who, I believe, has not voted, and let my vote stand. I voted "yea."

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GALLINGER). The present occupant of the chair is paired with the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS].

Mr. BLACKBURN. I have a pair with the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON] who I understand has not voted. I will withhold my vote. If he were present I would vote "yea."

Mr. DANIEL. Before the result is announced I wish to state that I have a general pair with the Senator from Washington [Mr. SQUIRE]. I beg leave to transfer my pair to the Senator from Kansas [Mr. MARTIN], and I vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 40, nays 6, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The decision of the Chair is sustained.

Mr. QUAY. The bill is still open to amendment, I understand.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is still open to amendment.

Mr. QUAY. Under the agreement I offer pro forma an amendment to come in at the end of the bill, constituting an additional section.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add at the end of the bill:

Nothing in any law to the contrary shall preclude any court of the United States, having jurisdiction of the parties, from considering and determining as to the constitutionality or validity of so much of said act, or any part thereof, as relates to the taxes upon gains, profits, and incomes therein mentioned whenever, by any proceeding which shall have been commenced, or begun, in such court, such question shall be presented.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let us have the yeas and nays on that amendment.

Mr. GRAY. I raise the point of order that was raised on the former amendment. It is the same amendment.

Mr. QUAY. I understood it was distinctly agreed that the vote should be taken on this amendment.

Mr. GRAY. I distinctly announced when the question was put that it would do it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Unless such an agreement was reached the Chair will sustain the point of order.

Mr. QUAY. I certainly understood that to be the agreement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Pennsylvania that he can reach the same result by offering the amendment in the Senate.

Mr. QUAY. We may as well dispose of it now. The same point of order would be raised when the bill is in the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is compelled to sustain the point of order made by the Senator from Delaware. It is the same amendment which has just been voted down.

Mr. LODGE. I now move the amendment of which I gave notice the other day. I move, on page 5, at the end of line 16, to insert: And all offices created in the preceding paragraph relating to annual revenue service shall be placed in the classified service as provided in the eligible lists of the Civil Service Commission as now provided by law.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, when I spoke the other day on the matter of the income tax I said a few words in regard to the amendment. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] then objected to the amendment that it was counter to the usual principle which had been pursued in regard to the different offices, that a bonded officer should not be placed under the civil-service law. I knew that at one time such had been the practice, but I felt quite confident that there had been many exceptions made in regard to it, and that the practice had been practically abandoned. I have since then procured the statistics upon this point, and find that, instead of no bonded officers being included under the civil-service law, all the letter carriers, 11,736 in number, give bonds to the Government, which are approved by the Post-Office Department, and that all stamp clerks and a large number of other clerks having custody of money in post-offices give personal bonds to the postmaster, which is precisely parallel to the case of these officers. There are probably more than a thousand of such clerks in the postal service alone who thus give personal bonds. Some of the clerks give bonds as high as $10,000 to different postmasters.

There are now under the civil-service law twice as many bonded officers as are proposed to be covered by the amendment which I have offered. All the eighty-eight Indian superintendents are bonded officers, being bonded from $10,000 to $30,000. They have the charge of purchasing supplies and the care of supplies, and know, an extremely responsible position. The Secretary of the Interior has lately stated that he has had no difficulty in getting thoroughly efficient and good men, capable of giving bond, from the classified service. In all the Departments there are scattered here and there employees who give bonds and who are taken from the eligible list. There is therefore nothing in that point.

The theory on which the old practice existed was that if a bonded officer who gave bonds to his immediate superior was taken from an eligible list he in some way confined the right of choice of the superior officer. As a matter of fact, in the case of these deputy collectors and other positions of that kind, the collector or superior officer has no right of choice in picking them out. They are selected for him by Senators or by Representatives, or by some persons eminent in politics, who desire to have them placed in the service. He has much less choice than he would have if he should take his deputies from the eligible list. He is not obliged to take a man whose testimonials as to character and fitness are not satisfactory. He can reject any or all. There is not the slightest evidence from the large number of bonded officers now in the classified service that there is any difficulty in getting them.

There is, therefore, no objection in practice; and there is no practical reason for not taking these men in under the classified service; and the reasons for doing it seem to me of the very strongest kind. It is a part of the duty of the Government to have the power of examining the books, the affairs, the intimate personal and pecuniary concerns of every business house, of every one who pays an income tax in this country. There can be imagined a class of officers where there will be a larger opportunity for favoritism or for blackmail or for corruption. They are places of high temptation and of great difficulty. These men will receive under the seal of confidence business information of the gravest kind. It is a part of the iniquitous character of this tax that the investigation into the private concerns of individuals, corporations, and business firms should be necessary, but it is necessary.

These men must be sent into every business house. They have the right to go into every business firm and look at the books, the Greater care and better character are required with such duties as these, of no class of men than men charged with such duties is but a small part of the duties. The tax will be largely paid in checks to the collector. The opportunity for fraud in that way will be very little, but these men have the opportunity secretly to greet persons who will afterwards publish accounts of what men's poverty may be what their debts may be. They load the Government with one. Is it conceivable that men appointed purely on political grounds, I do not care from which party, should not be in this important duty of the Government from their past as well as their present conduct.

It seems to me, Mr. President, that we never have understood to create a class of officers where we should guard the choice more strictly than we do here. This amendment I consider entirely germane and appropriate to the bill. The bill creates these offices, and if it can create them it certainly can regulate the appointment. It carries no general legislation that is not already in the bill. It involves no expenditure of the public money. When we are going to create these offices it seems to me that we should do something to see that the very best men can be secured. I do not say that the system which is proposed here is necessarily an ideally perfect system, but it is infinitely better than the haphazard way of picking them out, especially in some of our large cities.

I know in my own city the class of men who would be selected under the present system are not a class of men to whom the merchants and business men of that city would care to open their books and private affairs. It is not a large number of officers, but they are very important ones. The President has already begun the extension of the civil service to this branch of the Government. It seems to me this is a mere continuance of that extension, and that it is doing something to make an obnoxious law less obnoxious in its administration than it would otherwise be.

Mr. COCKRELL. The President of the United States has ample authority to place all these officers under the civil-service law. We have always left that question to him. I move to lay the amendment on the table.

Mr. LODGE. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri moves to lay the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts on the table, on which the yeas and nays are demanded.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GEORGE (when Mr. COKE's name was called). I repeat the announcement of the pair of the Senator from Texas [Mr. COKE] with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH]. I make the announcement for the day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (when Mr. GALLINGER's name was called). The present occupant of the Chair is paired with the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS], who is detained by illness. If he were present, the occupant of the Chair would vote "yea."

Mr. HALE (when his name was called). My pair with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. RANSOM] I transfer to the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRELL], and I vote "nay."

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). Having a general pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRELL] and the Senator from Maine having transferred his pair to that Senator, I vote "yea."

Mr. McLAURIN (when his name was called). I will transfer my general pair with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON] to the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. IRBY], and vote "yea."

Mr. PALMER (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH].

Mr. PUGH (when his name was called). I announce my pair with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR]. If he were present I think he would vote for the amendment of his colleague, and I would vote "yea" on the motion to lay the amendment on the table.

Mr. ROACH (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. WHITE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. SHOUF]. I will transfer my pair to the Senator from Kansas [Mr. MARTIN] and vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. PUGH. I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] to the junior Senator from Florida [Mr. PASCO] and vote "yea."

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin. I am paired with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. VEST (after having voted in the affirmative). I wish to make the announcement that I have a general pair with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WASHBURN] which has been transferred to the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER]. This announcement will apply to all the votes by yeas and nays until I shall change the statement.

The result was announced—yeas 34, nays 17; as follows:

So the amendment was laid on the table.

Mr. DUBOIS. I desire to call up the amendment which I offered the other day and which was printed.

Mr. QUAY. Will the Senator from Idaho yield to me for a moment until I reoffer the amendment I presented a few moments ago?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. DUBOIS. Certainly.

Mr. QUAY. I reoffer the amendment which was just now ruled out on a point of order, to come in after the first section, constituting the second section of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add as section 2 of the bill:

Nothing in any law to the contrary shall preclude any court of the United States having jurisdiction of the parties from considering and determining as to the constitutionality or validity of so much of said act, or any part thereof, as relates to the taxes upon gains, profits, and incomes therein mentioned whenever, by any proceeding which shall have been commenced, or be pending, in such court, such question shall be presented.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays are demanded on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (when Mr. GALLINGER's name was called). The present occupant of the chair is paired with the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS].

Mr. ROACH. I transfer my pair with the Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS] to the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER], and vote "nay."

Mr. HARRIS (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRELL], and I had transferred that pair to the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. RANSOM] before he came in and voted. I must withdraw my vote, not knowing how the senior Senator from Vermont would vote if present.

Mr. DANIEL (after having voted in the negative). I beg leave to withdraw my vote. Since voting I have been informed that the Senator from California [Mr. WHITE] has made the transfer which I announced for myself.

The result was announced—yeas 19, nays 32; as follows:

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. DUBOIS. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The SECRETARY. After line 14, on page 8, it is proposed to insert:

For incidental and contingent expenses, including labor, for the United States assay office at Boise City, Idaho, $100.

Mr. DUBOIS. I desire to say that this appropriation is necessary for the purpose of carrying on the operations of the assay office at Boise City, Idaho. The gold output in Idaho has increased very largely. The reports show that the output of gold was one-third more in the last year than the year preceding, and it is altogether probable that the gold output will continue to increase. In consequence of this the work of the assay office has been running behind, and there is not sufficient money to carry on the business there.

I believe the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations accepts the amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. We did not have this amendment before us in the Committee on Appropriations. The Senator from Idaho has secured the indorsement and recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury for it since the bill was reported, and I have no objection to agreeing to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from Idaho.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LODGE. I desire to offer an amendment, to be inserted after the clause providing for the expenses of the income tax.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The SECRETARY. It is proposed, on page 5, after line 16, to insert:

And for additional clerks and other officers to perform the additional work made necessary by the clause providing that alcohol used in the arts shall be free from internal-revenue taxation, $300,000, and the Secretary of the Treasury may make regulations assessing cost of ascertaining title to exemption or of refunding in proportion to amount used in business.

Mr. HILL. I suggest to the Senator that it might be proper to refer that amendment to the Committee on Civil Service Reform.

Mr. LODGE. I shall consider that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I will say a word in regard to the amendment.

I take $300,000, not quite half of the first estimate of the Treasury Department. They have since raised their estimate from $500,000 a year to $1,000,000; but I have taken less than half of the first estimate, because it seems to me it is more than enough if the expenses of making the exemption were assessed upon those who claim it. As it now is, the persons entitled to that exemption will pay the tax, and the Government will then be deluged with law suits to recover it. It is absolutely clear that there will be no possibility of withstanding a suit on that exemption. I believe myself that it is a proper exemption. But, however that may be considered, there is no doubt that it exists in the law, and that the persons using alcohol in the arts are entitled to it; and, it being in the law, I can not see why it is not just as plainly our duty to enforce that as any other provision of the law.

There is an immense body of manufacturers, of druggists, of persons engaged in many industries, who are directly interested in this. With the law unenforced we compel them to endless litigation, instead of giving them relief. We involve the Government in additional expense and in the ultimate loss of revenue. It seems to me a most short-sighted policy not to carry out that provision of the law, and therefore, Mr. President, I have moved the amendment in the hope that it will be placed on the same ground as the income-tax provision, to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to carry out the law as it now exists.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President, there is no estimate for this proposed appropriation. A report was made by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in regard to this matter, simply showing that it would take $500,000 for new appointees. It is useless to undertake the execution of that portion of the tariff law, in my judgment, until there is some additional legislation which is not provided for in this bill, and cannot be. If such a provision is adopted, it should be included in some subsequent appropriation bill. There is no urgency in the matter; and I move to lay the amendment on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. I wish to call the attention of the Senator from Missouri to a provision which requires that the deputy collectors shall only be used in executing the income tax. I think that provision should be stricken out. I desire to move to strike out all after the word "law," in line 5, on page 5, down to and including the word "incomes," in line 7.

Mr. COCKRELL. I will accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 5, line 5, after the word "law," it is proposed to strike out "and" to carry into effect the act of August 28, 1894, imposing a tax on incomes;" so as to read:

For salaries and expenses of 363 additional deputy collectors, including stationery and printing, said deputies to be employed in the same manner as now provided by law, being for the six months ending June 30, 1895, $211,600.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. I move to strike out the same language in line 13, after the word "law," down to and including the word "incomes," in line 15.

Mr. ALDRICH. I intend to move to strike out that whole paragraph, but I suppose that will make no difference so far as the amendment of the Senator is concerned. I wish it understood, however, that I shall have the right to do that.

Mr. ALLISON. That will be in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Iowa will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 5, line 13, after the word "law," it is proposed to strike out "and" to carry into effect and enforce the act of August 28, 1894, imposing a tax on incomes;" so as to make the clause read:

For salaries and expenses of ten additional revenue agents, to be employed and paid in the same manner as now provided by law, being for the six months ending June 30, 1895, $16,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] has just given notice that he intends to move to strike out the entire paragraph. I think, however, it may be necessary to have two or three of these special agents.

Mr. ALDRICH. I should not object to two or three, but the idea of appointing ten revenue agents with a roving commission to go and investigate the business of everybody in the United States is an outrage.

Mr. COCKRELL. I am perfectly willing to reduce the number to four. I think there should be four. There are now twenty allowed by law, and nineteen were in the service in 1893. This would bring up the number allowed by law to twenty-four, and I do not think that would be too many.

Mr. ALDRICH. I should be willing to agree to three.

Mr. ALLISON. I think, if the Senate will allow me, three will be ample for the remainder of this fiscal year, whatever may be necessary thereafter. Surely, in the preparation of these plans, etc., three revenue agents will be ample to do all that is necessary to be done, in addition to the nineteen or twenty already employed.

Mr. COCKRELL. Very well; let the amendment be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The proposed amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 11, on page 3, before the word "additionally," it is proposed to strike out "ten" and insert "three," so as to read:

For salaries and expenses of three additional revenue agents, to be employed and paid in the same manner as now provided by law, and to carry into effect and enforce the act of August 28, 1894, imposing a tax on incomes, being for the six months ending June 30, 1895, $16,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HILL. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 5, at the end of line 16, it is proposed to insert:

Provided, However, That no part of the sums appropriated in this act for the revenue and collection of the act of August 28, 1894, imposing a tax on incomes, shall be used in compliance or requiring any individual taxpayer to answer any questions or submit to any interrogatories, except answers showing the sources and amounts of his gains, profits, and income and the nature and amount of the deductions claimed, notwithstanding any forms, blanks, or regulations of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to the contrary.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, in framing the income-tax law it was carefully provided that the collector of internal revenue should have no power in the first instance to ask any questions or to put any interrogatories to the taxpayer.

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] this afternoon alluded to the fact that the tariff law was perfected in the Senate. I think that some of the amendments which were made tended more carefully to guard the rights of the taxpayer. The provisions of existing law do not authorize any interrogatories to be put or require any answers to be made by the taxpayer in the first instance. I read from the law, section 3173:

And if any person on being notified or required as aforesaid shall refuse or neglect to render such list or return within the time required as aforesaid, or whenever any person who is required to deliver a monthly or other return of objects subject to tax fails to do so at the time required, or delivers any return which, in the opinion of the collector, is false or fraudulent or contains any undervaluation or understatement, it shall be lawful for the collector to summon any and every other person having possession, custody, or care of books or account containing entries relating to the business of such person, or any other person he may deem proper, to appear before him and produce such books, as at a time and place named in the summons, and to give testimony or answer interrogatories, under oath, respecting any objects liable to tax or the returns thereof.

The power is to be exercised only in two instances. First, where the party refuses or neglects to make a return; second, in case the collector has reason to believe that the return contains false statements.

The law provides in another section—and that is the necessity for this amendment—that these returns shall be made according to the forms and regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. It is not a proper construction of the law that in prescribing these forms and regulations the Commissioner can administer interrogatories to the taxpayer. That was the very thing we guarded against when we authorized the collector only to do that first, in case the party fails to make a return; second, in case the collector has reason to believe afterwards that the statements are not correct. Then he is authorized to summon the party and under oath to compel him to answer the questions and produce his books and papers. Then it is provided how that summons shall be made, and the statute carefully guards his rights.

I hold in my hand the forms and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, which he has assumed to administer under this law, and which are to accompany the annual return in the first instance and in which a large number of questions are put to the taxpayer. I am referring now simply to the individual taxpayer, whose rights I am proposing to protect, if possible. Here are a large number of questions, irrelevant, improper, unauthorized, I think, by any existing law.

My amendment can do no harm. It is better, I submit to the Senate, that we determine in the appropriation for carrying out this law that we did not mean, in giving the Commissioner power to make forms and regulations, that he should have the right to put any number of interrogatories to the parties summoned. That is the object of my amendment. In other words, the collector of internal revenue has a right to ask the taxpayer to give up the items of receipts; that is all right; and all the items of deductions; that is all right; and to verify them; but he has no right to compel an answer to any question; he has no right to submit to the taxpayer a lot of interrogatories which he must answer upon the pain and penalty of having a subsequent proceeding made.

Therefore, I have proposed in my amendment, what? Simply that in the making of his annual returns a party shall not be compelled to answer any interrogatory or question, but only to make returns; that is, to give up the items, and amount of his income, and the nature of the deductions claimed. It seems to me that is right. There can not be any serious objection to that amendment; and I think it should be adopted when we are proposing to make an appropriation to carry out the law.

Mr. President, I submit the amendment without further argument.

Mr. COCKRELL. The Senator has very clearly demonstrated that his amendment is legislation pure and simple. Therefore I make the point of order on it.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present occupant of the chair is inclined to the opinion that the point of order is not well taken; but under Rule XX will submit the question to the Senate for its decision.

Mr. ALLISON. Let the amendment be again read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read.

The Secretary read the amendment proposed by Mr. HILL.
Mr. COCKRELL. I withdraw the point of order and move to lay the amendment on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order is withdrawn and a motion made to lay the amendment on the table. The question is on that motion.

Mr. HILL. I desire the yeas and nays on that motion. I regard this as an important amendment.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator from Missouri to withdraw his motion for one moment.

Mr. COCKRELL. I will.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is withdrawn, and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] is recognized.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire the Senator from New York to point out again—perhaps he did so, but my attention was not called to it—anything in these regulations which requires persons making a return to answer specific questions.

Mr. HILL. I hold in my hand the form which the Commissioner of Internal Revenue has authorized on his form No. 365, which I shall read:

The person making the foregoing return is required to answer the following questions—

I do not object to anything on the first page of the form; that is all right. I will turn the paper over to the Senator.

The Commissioner has the right subsequently if he thinks the return is false, if he has any reason to doubt it, or anything of that kind, or if the party refuses to make it, to issue a summons compelling him to bring his books and papers; but he can not put the party on oath. We carefully guarded against that, as I think the Senator from Missouri recollects in the debate we had. By these regulations the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is virtually evading the law.

Mr. LODGE. I should like to ask the Senator from New York a question.

Mr. HILL. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. LODGE. I understand the Senator to state that the law as it now exists on the statute books does not permit these interrogatories except in the case of persons who neglect or fail to make a return.

Mr. HILL. Or after the return has been made, if the return is not satisfactory, in the opinion of the Commissioner, then the party may be brought in, and he has due notice, etc.

Mr. LODGE. If the commissioner has any doubt about the truthfulness of the return?

Mr. HILL. Yes, sir.

Mr. LODGE. But there is absolutely no provision in the law, as I understand it, authorizing interrogatories of that character in the first instance.

Mr. HILL. Unless it can be claimed that the authority to make forms and regulations gives him that right, which I think it does not.

Mr. PLATT. What section authorizes the Secretary to prescribe forms and regulations?

Mr. HILL. The first part of section 3173.

Mr. PLATT. Nowhere else?

Mr. HILL. Nowhere else.

Mr. LODGE. Does not that section confine the forms and regulations to the subjects enumerated?

Mr. HILL. They all relate, of course, to the subjects enumerated.

Mr. GRAY (to Mr. HILL). Read the section authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to make regulations.

Mr. HILL. I say:

That it shall be the duty of any person, partnership, firm, association, or corporation, made liable to any duty, special tax, or other tax imposed by law, when not otherwise provided for, in case of a special tax, on or before the first Monday of March in each year, in case of income tax on or before the first Monday of March in each year, and in other cases before the day on which the taxes accrue, to make a list or return, verified by oath or affirmation, to the collector or deputy collector of the district where located, of the articles or objects, including the amount of annual income, charged with a duty or tax, the quantity of goods, wares, and merchandise made or sold, and charged with a tax, the several rates and aggregate amount, according to the forms and regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, for which such person, partnership, firm, association, or corporation is liable.

Mr. PLATT. That is from the forms and regulations for income returns?

Mr. HILL. Certainly. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS] suggests to me—and puts it very pointedly—the party is cross-examined in advance.

Mr. LODGE. Does the series of questions which the Senator has been reading very much enlarge the authority granted by law to the Commissioner?

Mr. HILL. Certainly it does.

Mr. LODGE. And therefore would give rise probably to further litigation?

Mr. HILL. I submit the question, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment submitted by the Senator from New York.

Mr. VEST. I should like—I have not been able to see these regulations—to see how they enlarge the tariff law or go beyond it. Let us see what are the regulations which are not authorized by the statute.

Mr. HILL. I shall read them:

[Form No. 36.]

United States internal revenue—Income tax on persons, 1894. Instructions relative to annual returns—

Then there follow eighteen different instructions, which are in accordance with the law. They do not quote the law exactly, but they state its substance. Then follows the return. Form No. 365. Then, on the third page, after the return is made, and all that, there follow a number of questions, which I shall read:

The person making the foregoing return is required to answer the following questions, namely:

Question 1. Had your wife or any minor child or children of yours any income last year?

Answer 1. _____

Question 2. Have you included such incomes in this return?

Answer 2. _____

Question 3. Have you kept books of account?

Answer 3. _____

Question 4. Is your income herein estimated or taken from your books?

Answer 4. _____

Question 5. Are the "necessary expenses" of "Losses" set forth by you opposite paragraph 6 of "Deductions," and when did each occur?

Answer 5. _____

Question 6. Are you a citizen of the United States, and what is your occupation?

Answer 6. _____

Question 7. How do you determine that debts returned by you as "worthless" could not be collected?

Answer 7. _____

Question 8. What were the "necessary expenses" and the amount of each class included in the amount set opposite paragraph 5 of "Deductions"?

Answer 8. _____

Now, I would not be particular about this, but I am advised that these are intended to be enlarged; that the question is being discussed as to whether they are sufficient. I simply desire to have it understood that these questions can not be answered, and are intended to be answered in the first instance, and, as the Senator says, they can not cross-examine on oath the maker of the original return.

Mr. CHANDLER obtained the floor.

Mr. COCKRELL. I am going to accept the amendment, if that is what the Senator from New Hampshire rises to discuss.

Mr. CHANDLER. All right. I should like to ask the Senator from Missouri, however, whether when the bill goes into conference he will insist upon keeping the amendment in the bill with the tenacity that is characteristic of him in every case he undertakes.

Mr. COCKRELL. If I am under the same impression I am now as to the language of the amendment, as explained briefly, and think it right, I shall do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL].

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on concurring in the amendments made as in Committee of the Whole. Is it the desire to have separate votes on concurring in the amendments?

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the amendments be concurred in in gross.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I desire to have a separate vote on the amendment in line 21, page 2.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Let it be reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 21, page 2, after the word "uncurrent," the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, inserted the word "fractional," seems to read:

Resigning of silver coins: For resigning of the uncurrent fractional silver coins in the Treasury, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, $300,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection the amendments made as in Committee of the Whole, with the exception of the one which has just been stated, will be concurred in. The Chair hears none, and the amendments are concurred in. The question is on concurring in the reserved amendment.

Mr. BLANCHARD. Mr. President, when the bill was under consideration in the Senate as in Committee of the Whole I objected to the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations proposing that the word "fractional" should be inserted after the word "uncurrent," in line 21, page 2 of the bill. The following colloquy was had in reference to the matter at the time my objection to the amendment was made:

Mr. BLANCHARD. I should like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations why the word "fractional" is put in this paragraph? I understand that there are silver coins, other than fractional coins, in the Treasury which might be denominated uncurrent. Why should they not be received?

The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations replied as follows:

I understand that there is not a sufficient amount to justify such resigning at this time and the appropriation of this particular sum for that purpose, and the committee did not think it necessary to provide for it in this deficiency appropriation bill, but it is necessary in regard to uncurrent fractional coin, because otherwise it cannot be withdrawn, and the result is represented by certificates and is practically an operation.

To which I made the following reply:

Mr. BLANCHARD. There are silver dollars, I believe, in the Treasury of the United States which are uncurrent, as there are silver halves and quarters and dimes. It seems to me that all uncurrent silver coins should be received. The House of Representatives adopted this paragraph of the bill in such terms would enable all silver coins needing it to be received, including dollars as well as halves, quarters, and dimes, and it seems to me it would be best in that form for the Senate. I should like to have a vote at least upon the adoption of this amendment.

Then, after some further colloquy between the chairman of the committee and myself, and between the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BATE] and myself, the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] made the following remarks in support of the amendment of the committee and in opposition to what I had said as to the advisability of receiving the silver dollars uncurrent in the Treasury:

Mr. TELLER. I understand this is the usual annual appropriation for this purpose. The Department has not indicated that it had any uncurrent silver dollars, and, as a matter of fact, there are none.

That was the emphatic statement of the Senator from Colorado. He then continued:

No matter what the Senator from Louisiana may imagine, as a matter of fact there are no uncurrent silver dollars in the Treasury; therefore the provision is not of any consequence except to keep it in accordance with the recommendations of the Department. That is all there is of it.

Mr. President, the Senator from Colorado is recognized on this floor and throughout the country as an authority on all matters relating to silver. There is no gentleman in this Chamber or the other whose information is more extensive upon that subject than that of the Senator from Colorado. Whenever he rises in the Senate and makes a statement in respect to silver it is accepted by the Senate as absolutely true. Therefore when the Senator from Colorado made the statement to which I have alluded, it was held to import absolute verity.

There are sitting within ten feet of me at least two Senators whose votes upon the proposition were changed by the unqualified statement of the Senator from Colorado.

We are told in mythological classics that Jupiter himself sometimes nods. The Senator from Colorado himself is not an exception to that old maxim of such universal application to mankind, that "To err is human." The Senator from Colorado was mistaken in his statement—a statement that influenced the action of the committee. I myself was disposed to accept what he said, so great was my belief in his knowledge of all facts relating to the silver question. I was not at that time in possession of the facts to refute his statement, but after the vote was taken I concluded I would test the accuracy of his knowledge—that there were no uncurrent silver dollars in the Treasury. I accordingly dispatched to the Treasurer of the United States, the Hon. D. N. Morgan, the following telegram:

Are there any uncurrent silver dollars in the Treasury? I mean by uncurrent, silver dollars of old date and of light weight, or which should, for any reason, be removed before used or put again into circulation. Please answer as soon as possible and give amount.

To which within a half hour I received the following reply, dated Treasury Department, January 10:

In reply to telegram of this date I have to state there are in the Treasury 1,000 uncurrent silver dollars and 22,000 fractional silver absolutely unfit for circulation. Also $500,000 fractional silver of these dates, which should be received.

D. N. MORGAN,
Treasurer United States.

To Hon. N. C. BLANCHARD.

One hundred and eighty-two thousand silver dollars may, it is true, be put "a drop in the bucket" when compared with the several hundred million silver dollars in existence in the United States; and it may be true that it is too small a matter to be taken into consideration by Congress when providing for the resigning of uncurrent silver coins in the Treasury. But as small as the amount may be, it numbers 182,000 things strong against the dogmatic assertion of the Senator from Colorado. It stands 182,000 protests, and silver protests at the statement of the Senator from the State of Colorado.

Mr. KYLE. Will the Senator from Louisiana allow me?

Mr. BLANCHARD. I yield to the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. KYLE. Was it not also large enough matter for the Appropriations Committee of the Senate to take notice of and change the phraseology of the House bill by inserting in the paragraph the word "fractional"?

Mr. BLANCHARD. It was. The proposition as it passed the House of Representatives omitted the word "fractional." As House of Representatives it permitted the resigning of all uncurrent silver coins in the Treasury of the United States, whether they be fractional coins or silver dollars. That action of the House was based upon the recommendation of the Treasury Department. The Appropriations Committee of the Senate, when it inserted the word "fractional," disregarded the recommendation of the Treasury Department, and added a word of their own to the words forming the estimate upon which the appropriation is based. I hold the estimate in my hand. It reads as follows:

Recoinage of uncurrent silver coins in the Treasury, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury; being a deficiency for the fiscal year 1895, $100,000.

The Treasury Department asked Congress to appropriate $100,000 for the recoinage of uncurrent silver coins in the Treasury; not the uncurrent fractional silver coins there. I repeat that the House of Representatives placed the appropriation in the urgent deficiency appropriation bill just as the Treasury Department had asked for it, but the Appropriations Committee of the Senate changed the wording of the estimate of the Treasury Department, changed the wording of the appropriation as adopted by the House, by confining it to the recoinage of fractional silver coins in the Treasury. As adopted by the Senate the provision prohibits the recoinage of the 182,000 silver dollars which, the Treasurer of the United States says, are in the Treasury uncurrent and which can not be used or put again in circulation until recoined.

Mr. President, the Senator from Missouri, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, did not himself venture the assertion that there were no silver dollars uncurrent in the Treasury. He confined his statement to saying that, as he understood it, there were not enough uncurrent silver dollars in the Treasury to justify an appropriation for their recoinage at this time. He further went on to state that the wording of the appropriation, which included the word "fractional," was in accordance with previous appropriations which had been made under this head for the recoinage of uncurrent silver coins in the Treasury.

He insisted that the phraseology used now should be the same as that used in the sundry civil appropriation bill and perhaps in bills anterior to that. I hold in my hand the estimate of the Treasury Department, upon which an appropriation of $100,000 was made, to recoin the uncurrent fractional silver coins in the Treasury, in the sundry civil appropriation act passed at the last session. In that bill the word "fractional" was used. Why was it used? Because the Treasury Department in its letter distinctly asked for an appropriation to recoin the uncurrent fractional silver coins. It is different from the estimate which the Treasury Department made for such purpose at the present session. I have here the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury upon which the appropriation in the sundry civil appropriation act of the last session was based. It is addressed to the President of the Senate, and is as follows:

THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT, August 2, 1894.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith copy of a communication from the Treasury of the United States, dated the 1st instant, relative to an appropriation of $500,000 for the recoinage of uncurrent fractional silver coins, and to recommend that an appropriation for that object be made in the following terms:

Recoinage of uncurrent fractional silver coins: "For recoinage of the uncurrent fractional silver coins in the Treasury, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, $500,000."

Respectfully, yours,

J. G. CARLISLE, Secretary.

But when it came to the present session the word "fractional" is omitted in the estimate. Why? Because there are uncurrent silver dollars in the Treasury which need recoinage. The word "fractional" was omitted, and by its omission the Secretary of the Treasury enlarged his recommendations so as to include the recoinage of all uncurrent silver coins in the Treasury.

It is well known, Mr. President, that the mints of the United States located in Philadelphia, New Orleans, and San Francisco are short of work. Since the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman Act it has been with the greatest difficulty that work has been found for the mints in operation. The mint in the city of New Orleans, in my own State, has once or twice since the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman Act almost closed down on account of there not being work enough to keep it going. Only within the last few weeks the statement went forth from the Director of the Mint here that a large reduction in the force of the mints at Philadelphia and New Orleans would have to be made on account of the insufficiency of work to justify the retention of the present force to keep the mints in operation. In such a case, the Secretary of the Treasury having asked for an appropriation "to recoin all uncurrent silver coins" in the Treasury, I think it would be wise to omit the amendment of the committee to the proposition as it passed the other House, and leave it in such shape that the uncurrent silver dollars may be recoined along with the uncurrent fractional silver coins.

I have noticed that in both Houses of Congress in recent years whenever a proposition rises that looks to the coinage of silver money tries to strike it down. Here was a proposition which passed the other branch of Congress that did authorize the recoinage of the silver dollars that are uncurrent in the Treasury, but when it gets to the Senate somebody must strike it out by embracing the word "fractional" in the amendment, which confines the recoinage to the uncurrent fractional coin and discriminates against the silver dollar, which is likewise uncurrent in the Treasury. I think this discrimination against the silver dollar ought to stop. While this is a small beginning, I say to the Senator from Colorado, let us begin right here. If there be a single silver dollar in the Treasury uncurrent which should be recoined, let us recoin it. There are 182,000 of them. Let them go in along with the $2,500,000 of uncurrent fractional silver coins.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President, the Committee on Appropriations recommended the insertion of the word "fractional" for very good and sufficient reasons, and not because they were attempting to strike at silver directly or indirectly.

In the first place, this is an urgent deficiency appropriation bill. The $100,000 herein provided for this purpose will not recoin one-half of the uncurrent silver coins in the Treasury. There are in the Treasury 182,000 uncurrent silver dollars at the most, while there are two and a half millions, I believe, of uncurrent fractional coins. You do not coin it away by the appropriation of this question is, which shall we appropriate for the uncurrent fractional silver coins or the uncurrent silver dollars, and take this money, $100,000, and pay it out for doing what? To put 182,000 silver dollars into circulation, say.

Why do that, when the Secretary of the Treasury to-day has the full right, power, and authority to coin 150,000,000 ounces of silver bullion into standard silver dollars without the appropriation of a cent to do it? We do not want to waste the $100,000 a hundred times more than the uncurrent silver dollars in the Treasury amount to—150,000,000 ounces of silver without one particle of appropriation. Why shall we allow him to use the $100,000 proposed to be appropriated in the recoinage of uncurrent standard silver dollars when he has the authority to coin ten times, aye, a hundred times, a thousand times more than the uncurrent silver dollars in the Treasury aggregate and place the money in the Treasury, and that without any appropriation? We do not want to waste the $100,000 proposed to be appropriated in recoining only 182,000 silver dollars, or a part of them, when the Secretary has the power to coin 150,000,000 ounces of silver. He may coin silver to that extent and put the silver dollars in the Treasury.

Mr. GEORGE. Has the Secretary of the Treasury that authority? Mr. COCKRELL. Certainly he has; the law expressly provides for it. There is no question about it in the world. That was the reason why we inserted the word "fractional." We desire to have that silver in circulation, his we do not want to waste the $100,000 proposed to be appropriated in recoining only 182,000 silver dollars, or a part of them, when the Secretary has the power to coin 150,000,000 ounces of silver. He may coin silver to that extent and put the silver dollars in the Treasury.

Mr. BATE. Mr. President, I made a little speech the other day which brought forth the discussion that then occurred, and elicited the remarks from the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], which has now caused the renewal of the debate. I must say, sir, that my vote then was influenced almost entirely by his remarks. When he asserted that there were no silver dollars uncurrent in the Treasury I was satisfied of his correctness, and voted along with him. I see, however, from the facts as they are now presented through the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BLANCHARD] that there are, although a small number, 182,000 uncurrent silver dollars in the Treasury. It is a matter of principle with me, and that is why I made the objection the other day.

As much respect I feel for the members of the Committee on Appropriations and for their attention to their duties, nevertheless I beg to differ with them in this instance, and vote against their recommendation. I do it upon principle. And although the chairman of the Appropriations Committee has just stated that the Secretary of the Treasury has the right under the seigniorage act to coin that silver—

Mr. BLANCHARD. I beg to say that the uncurrent standard silver dollars in the Treasury, but other silver coin.

Mr. COCKRELL. To the extent of 150,000,000 ounces.

Mr. BATE. That is immaterial. Suppose it is so. I am one of those who desire to give an emphasis to the fact that the Secretary ought to recoin all the uncurrent silver, and especially the uncurrent silver dollars. I do not believe in giving a black eye to the silver dollar under any circumstances, and I shall not aid in doing it. I want to be heard in its defense, and I stand up for its defenders. Upon both principle and sentiment—for there is a sentiment connected with the silver dollar—we should recoin this uncurrent silver, and I shall vote in that direction contrary to my vote the other day, which was influenced by the statement of the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. BLANCHARD. When the bill was before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole the reasons which actuated the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate in recommending this dation on which the glory, the prosperity, and the immortality of all that is good will rest forever.

Mr. McCREARY of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, as several gentlemen who desired to make remarks on this occasion are absent, I ask unanimous consent that they be allowed to print their remarks in the RECORD.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BRETZ) (at 3 o'clock and 10 minutes p. m.). In accordance with the resolutions already adopted, the House now stands adjourned until Monday next at 12 o'clock m.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Morning business is not yet concluded. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over at this hour, which has just been passed.

The SECRETARY. A resolution by Mr. CALL directing the Sergeant-at-Arms to have the Senate employees in the folding room Canada will be a criterion of the United States when the eagle takes distinction from the humming-bird.

The total population of all the provinces composing Canada is less than 4,800,000; the population of the State of New York alone is 5,500,000; population of the United States is 62,000,000. The circulation of all the checks and bills of Canada are less than $500,000; the gold coin in the clearing-house banks of New York City, November 25, 1894, was $20,000,000. The aggregate resources of all the clearing-house banks of New York City exceeded the aggregate resources of the clearing-house banks of the State and national banks east of the Rocky Mountains $2,000,000,000.

Canada's bank act was "assented" to May 16, 1890. It had no stain upon it. Thirty-nine banks composed the system which it governs. The United States printed the laws proposed by Secretary Carlisle, would govern $500,000,000 (State and National).

I desire, finally, to mention that the resolution of the committee the following day, concurred in the introduction of the bill in the Senate by Senator Matthews, December 6, 1894, which passed the Senate January 25, 1895, and passed the House promptly thereafter:

Resolved, That all the bills of the United States issued or authorized to be issued under the seal of the United States shall be printed in plain language, principal and interest, of the coinage of the Government of the United States, in silver dollars, of the coinage of the United States, containing all the grains each of standard silver; and that no bill of exchange, such silver coin as a legal tender in payment of said bonds, principal and interest, is not in violation of the public faith, nor in derogation of the rights of the public creditor."

Stanley Matthews died a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I trust you will overlook the defects of my statement. My nervousness is due to my severe cold, which kept me coughing half the night. I apologized for it in advance; and I thank the committee for its kind attention.

THE HOUSE OF OUR FATHERS, the hearings be now closed.

The motion was agreed to.

Eulogy on the Late Hon. J. Logan Chipman.

REMARKS

OF

HON. BENTON McMILLIN, OF TENNESSEE.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Friday, September 15, 1895.

The House having under consideration a resolution announcing the death of the late Hon. J. Logan Chipman—

Mr. McMILLIN said:

Mr. SPEAKER, I feel ill prepared for the duty assigned me to-day. One of the best friends of my life, one of the noblest men of earth, is gone. The sad duty devolved on me, as upon my colleague who has just spoken [Mr. CARUTH], of attending a funeral, the most marked in its proportions, the most sorrowful in its characteristics, that I have ever seen in the case of any man. He who is mourned to-day had reached that fullness of years and of experience, had reached that confidence in his fellow-men, which, if years, experience, and confidence could ever make a man ready to die, would have made him ready.

If there ever was a funeral procession which, if it could be known in advance, would make a man satisfied with the part he had taken in this life's affairs, that of J. Logan Chipman was such. Surrounding his home, filling the magnificent church in which the funeral exercises were held, lining every street that lay between there and the beautiful cemetery where he rests, a distance of 34 miles, there was a solid wall of his weeping fellow-citizens. He had exhibited no pomp in this life. He had acquired no wealth to make men love him or honor him for any other cause than for his own generous, noble, distinguished personality. I heard at his funeral the sad song which was the result of his own genius, and I saw the tearful eyes and heard the sobbing sobs that responded in unison to those beautiful lines, which will live as long as song and poetry are appreciated in our language.

There are many things in the life of the distinguished legislator who has gone that are worthy of comment to-day and of commendation hereafter. He had begun early to store his mind with useful knowledge, and he could boast being a ripe scholar. His friends could boast that he was not only a scholar, but a legislator of high order, a jurist of profound learning, a poet of distinguished ability, an editor who had won distinction as such, and a legislator who, from the day he entered this Hall, which tries men so sorely, was recognized as a leader among men and worthy of all imitation. I have seen many trying places and scenes, even in the life that has been allotted to me, but I think the most difficult place on earth to reach to succeed is the House of Representatives of the United States, where J. Logan Chipman did succeed.

He knew no fear. He was too manly ever to oppress the poor; he was too bold to cower before the rich. With equal scale, as a judge, he held up and meted out the laws of his country. It was a subject of comment in the city, both before and after his death, that as an editor he was never known to court public sentiment, but was always found trying to instruct it. You who have heard his voice in this Hall will bear witness with me that that splendid diction, for zeal for the cause that he ever honored and adorned by his advocacy, for readiness to engage in debate whenever he thought the interests of his constituency or his country demanded it, there was no superior to J. Logan Chipman, either during the days that he was amongst us or during the memory of any man who has served before.

He was reelected to Congress over obstacles that made many of his friends fear and tremble during the campaign. It is not mine to speak of the politics of that conflict, but he had the great heart of that beautiful city of nearly a third of a million people behind him, and they gave him a majority which, under all the circumstances, should be most gratifying to any man. I kept inquiring concerning him, knowing he was sick, and on the day on which this Congress met I received a message requesting that I should select a seat for him. The permission was asked. The House was always exceedingly devoted to him. The courtesy was kindly granted, and a seat was chosen that it is the misfortune of his country that he was never able to fill.

He was stricken down at his home in the midst of preparation for coming here. While he had been very unwell for days, no one thought that there was danger of death. He had his trunk packed, he had his business arranged, he had put his affairs in order, and when his wife suggested the evening before he was to start that perhaps he had better not attempt it, he said, "I must go; the time has come when it is possible that I can save these people that have honored me so long, and I am anxious to be engaged in those conflicts in which I consider that either the weal or the woe of my country is to be determined."

She persuaded him not, but consented that he should start the next day; and in the language of that beautiful song of which he was the author, and which was sung at his funeral, he was "Watching and waiting" for an opportunity to return to the scene of his duties. But he waited and watched in vain. He was taken to the hospital, and even there, when the doctors said that death had marked him, but dare not tell him lest it should hasten by the announcement, he got up one day after day and hour after hour, walked around, looked out of the window, and eastward toward this Hill, his post of duty, and asked at what time he would be permitted to start? Alas! beneath this Dome he was no more to walk; in this Hall he was no more to triumph! But when the inevitable came his greatest triumph came. Evincing that faith which is more honor than man can otherwise achieve here or anywhere else in this life, and taking the hand of his faithful companion in his, he said: "Wife, repeat with me the Lord's prayer." And with the last words of that wondrous prayer, "For Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever," his life went out, and this House and this country lost one of the most faithful and useful Representatives it ever had.

Dying with such faith—

O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?

Indian Appropriation Bill.

SPEECH

OF

HON. CHARLES CURTIS, OF KANSAS.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Tuesday, January 22, 1895.

The House being in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, and having under consideration the bill (H. R. 874) making appropriations for current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department and fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, and for other purposes—

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas said:

Mr. CHAIRMAN: One part of that amendment asks for payment for certain ponies taken by the United States to present the Indians from going on the war path. There never was any provision made for the payment of these ponies by treaty stipulations, or by the kind. The report says that there were some five thousand of these ponies taken; and they were sold by the Government at an average amount of $5.50 each. This amendment asks this Congress to make an appropriation to pay the Indians at the rate of $30 a head for the ponies taken; and I raise the point of order against it, as it is new legislation and is an expenditure.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Was the gentleman's question a point of order?

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. I will be glad to answer the gentleman's question.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Were these ponies taken from the Indians in a state of hostility or were they peaceable?

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. A part were on the war path and a part were not.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. A part of the tribe were on the war path?

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. Some of the tribes were on the war path, others were not.

Mr. MADDOX. I want to ask the gentleman from Kansas a question.

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. I yield to the gentleman for a question.

Mr. MADDOX. Is it not true that the report showed that our representatives and General Crook agreed to pay these Indians $40 a head for these ponies?

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. General Crook did agree to recommend that the ponies be paid for; but it was because two other tribes, Red Cloud and Red Leaf, had been paid. And he said at the time he agreed to recommend payment that Red Cloud and Red Leaf ought not to have been paid.

Mr. MADDOX. Well, did not he say at the same time that this Government would pay $40 apiece for these ponies; and do you not believe we ought to do it as we were under contract to do so?

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. No; I do not believe we ought to do so, because these ponies were sold at auction at $5.50 a head, and the amount of money was invested in cattle for these Indians.

The appropriation asked for in this amendment is not limited in amount. It provides for the payment not only for the ponies taken but also for ponies stolen since 1868. I do not know how many ponies it is claimed were stolen, but understand they number several thousand.

The Sioux Commission report that there were 5,000 ponies taken from the Indians about whose loyalty there was no question; they were taken as a precautionary measure, or, in other words, to prevent their possible use by war parties.

These ponies were sold at auction by the War Department, and the proceeds, after deducting all expenses, expended in the purchase of cows for the Indians.

The ponies brought about $27,000, the expenses attending sales, forage for animals, hire of herders, etc., amounted to something over $6,000.

This appropriation, if made, will amount to at least $150,000 for ponies which were sold for $27,000, and most of it, I believe, would go into the pockets of claim agents and not to the Indians.

Mr. MADDOX. But do not you believe that we ought to comply with the contract as made by General Crook?

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. General Crook did not make a contract, and there is no provision for the payment in the act of March 2, 1889, and General Crook and other members only agreed to recommend that the ponies be paid for.

Mr. MADDOX. Does not General Crook say $40 apiece?

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. General Crook told them that he would do the best he could. He thought that as the other two bands had been paid they should be paid, too, but he thought a mistake was made in paying the two tribes.

Mr. MADDOX. But General Crook does say that we ought to pay $40 apiece.

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. He told the Indians that the other tribes were paid $40 for each pony, and that he believed that they should be paid the same as the other tribes had been and that he would recommend it, but the gentleman must remember that he said it was a mistake to pay Red Cloud and Red Leaf.

Mr. HUNTER. I wish to remind the gentleman from Kansas, when he speaks of the price of these ponies being $5 apiece, that that was after they had been moved several hundred miles, and that was the value after paying claim agents, commissions, etc.

Mr. CURTIS of Kansas. I beg the gentleman's pardon. They sold for the average amount of $5.50 apiece at auction. That was not the price after deducting the expenses. The expenses, all told, amounted to only about $6,000.

SUGAR-BOUNTY CLAIMS.

Mr. MITCHELL, of Oregon. I am chairman of the subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Claims having under consideration sundry bills looking to the payment of certain sugar bounties alleged to have been earned under the revenue act of 1890. These claims are of different kinds. One is a claim for bounty on domestic sugars actually produced in the United States prior to August 28, 1894, and claims for which had prior to that date been presented to the Treasury Department and adjudicated. That is one class.

Another class is claims for bounties on sugars produced and actually made prior to August 28, 1894, claims for which had been presented prior to that date to the Department and were on that date pending in the Department, but had not been adjudicated.

Then there is a third claim for sugars produced since August 28, 1894 (when the revenue act of 1890 was repealed), from the raw material that had been planted, cultivated, and was ready for harvest at the date of the repeal of the revenue act of 1890, but from which sugars had not yet been made.

In order that we may have certain information from the Treasury Department to enable us to know precisely how the matter stands, I am instructed by the subcommittee to offer a resolution, and I ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit to the Senate at his earliest convenience the following information:

First. How many pounds of domestic sugar were actually made from cane, sorghum, beets, and molasses in the years 1893 and 1894 prior to August 28, 1894, when the revenue act of 1890 was repealed, and on which no bounty has yet been paid, and the claims for bounty on which had been presented to the Department prior to the repeal of the revenue act of 1890, stating separately the amount actually made in each of those years, together with the name of the claimant for bounty in each case, and the amount claimed by each.

Second. The amount of domestic sugar made in the year 1893 and claims for bounty on which were on file but not yet adjudicated by the Department when the repeal took effect, August 28, 1894, together with the name of each claimant and amount claimed by each and the date of filing of each claim.

Third. The amount of domestic sugar made in 1894 prior to the repeal, August 28, 1894, and claims for the bounty on which were on file but not yet adjudicated by the Treasury Department when the repeal took effect, August 28, 1894, stating in the answer to this and the two preceding inquiries from what the sugar in each case was produced—whether cane, sorghum, beets, or molasses, and where produced.

Fourth. State what claims, if any, have been filed and the dates thereof respectively, when filed, and the amount of each claim for sugar made in 1893, but not made August 28, of that year, and made on file and made on file, cane, sorghum, beets, and molasses, the crop of which was harvested during the year 1894.

Fifth. State any information in the possession of the Department as to the amount of sugar produced in the United States made after August 28, 1894, but from the crop of raw material harvested during that year, and on which no bounty has yet been paid, and the claims for bounty on which had been presented to the Department and adjudicated prior to August 28, 1894, and on which no bounty has been paid.

Sixth. An estimate of the additional amount of money necessary to pay all claims under the act of 1890 for sugars produced in 1893 and 1894 prior to August 28, 1894, and claims for which were on that date pending in the Treasury Department but not then adjudicated.

Seventh. An estimate of the amount of money necessary to pay the bounty provided by the act of 1890 for domestic sugars actually produced after August 28, 1894, but from crops cultivated, produced, and harvested in the years 1893 and 1894 on which no bounty has been paid.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon asks unanimous consent for the consideration of the resolution at this time.

Mr. MILLS. I object to the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. MITCHELL, of Oregon. Let it be printed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Being objected to, the resolution will be printed and go over.

Mr. HOAR introduced a bill (S. 2649) granting a pension to Francis Sherman; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

I have also a copy of the marriage license, and a certificate of the military service of David S. Isbell, the husband of the petitioner, together with a letter from the Pension Office. I move that the papers be referred with the bill to the Committee on Pensions.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CAMERON submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2397) to provide for the restatement, readjustment, settlement, and payment of dues to army officers in certain cases; which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

Mr. ALLEN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas submitted three amendments intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which were referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

POLICY REGARDING HAWAII.

Mr. ALLEN. I submit a resolution, which I ask may be printed and lie over.

The resolution was read, and ordered to lie over and be printed, as follows:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate, the revolutionary having now become the established Government of the Hawaiian Islands, that a wise and enlightened foreign policy requires that steps should be taken by this Government, without unnecessary delay, to annex those islands to the United States as a part thereof; and that, in the meantime, the personal and property rights of American citizens in said islands should be protected by the presence of a sufficient naval force.

NEPOMSET RIVER IMPROVEMENT.

Mr. HOAR submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

Ordered, That the Secretary of War be directed to communicate to the Senate such information as he has in regard to the necessity for an improvement in Nepomset River, in the State of Massachusetts, together with his opinion, or that of the Chief of Engineers, as to the propriety and cost of such improvement.

ADDITIONAL TAX ON BEER, ETC.

Mr. SQUIRE. Mr. President, I rise to a question of privilege. I find in the RECORD this morning the following:

He said—

submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him as a substitute for the bill (H. R. 7368) to place upon the free list bituminous coal, shale, slack, and coke, which was referred to the Committee on Finance, and ordered to be printed.

I believe that the RECORD is correct, but the language is such as to leave the impression on the mind of the reader that I proposed to place coal upon the free list, which was not my intention. The amendment proposes to impose a tax on all beer, lager beer, and porter, and all other malt, brewed, or fermented liquors manufactured and sold or removed for consumption or sale within the United States, by whatever name such liquors may be called, of $2 for every barrel containing not more than 31 gallons, and at a like rate for any other quantity or for any fractional part of a barrel.

I will simply state that I favor a duty on coal, and I wish to correct any false impression which might be conveyed by the RECORD in that respect.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs:

A bill (H. R. 6323) to amend the Articles for the Government of the Navy relative to punishment on conviction by court-martial; and

A bill (H. R. 8552) to authorize the appointment of cadets to the Naval Academy.

The bill (H. R. 7602) to pension Mary R. Williams was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

R. 8479) making appropriations for current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

HAWAIIAN AFFAIRS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there are no further concurrent or other resolutions, the Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolutions submitted by Mr. LONGE on the 21st instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate cordially approves the dispatch of a ship of war to the Sandwich Islands on Saturday last, and is of opinion that an American man-of-war should be for the present kept at Honolulu.

Resolved, That prompt measures should be taken to construct or promote the construction of a submarine cable from San Francisco to Honolulu, and that no part of the rights and privileges secured to the United States by article 4 of the existing treaty between the United States and the Hawaiian Government should be abandoned or waived in order to enable any other government to secure a foothold or lease upon any part of the Hawaiian Islands.

Resolved, That in the judgment of the Senate immediate steps should be taken to secure possession of the Sandwich Islands by their annexation to the United States.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is, Will the Senate agree to the resolutions?

Mr. GEORGE resumed the speech begun by him on Tuesday. After having spoken for some time,

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHANDLER in the chair). The Senator from Mississippi will suspend. The hour of 2 o'clock has now arrived, and the duty of the Chair to lay before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated,

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 1481) to amend the act entitled "An act to incorporate the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua," approved February 29, 1889.

Mr. GEORGE. I said I shall be able to conclude what I have to say in fifteen minutes, if I am allowed to proceed.

Mr. WHITE. I was about to take the floor on the subject of the bill now pending as the unfinished business, but I will yield, if there be no objection, to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business may be informally laid aside until the Senator from Mississippi can conclude his remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business be informally laid aside, and that the Senate continue the consideration of the resolution which has been before the Senate. Is there objection?

Mr. ALDRICH. Will the Senator from Mississippi allow me to make a suggestion in connection with his argument?

Mr. GEORGE. I want to get through with what I have to say.

Mr. ALDRICH. I will take but a single second.

Mr. GEORGE. I want to proceed. I am entitled to the floor, and should be glad not to be interrupted.

Mr. ALDRICH. The Senator has not the floor, as I understand.

Mr. GEORGE. I ask the Senator from Rhode Island to take his seat and not interrupt me.

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President—

Mr. GEORGE. I claim the floor. Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair desires to state to the Senator from Mississippi that the question before the Senate is, Will unanimous consent be given to laying aside the regular order that the Senate may proceed with the consideration of the resolution which has been pending? Is there objection?

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President, I have no objection to make, but I think the ordinary courtesy which obtains between members of the Senate, or which should obtain between members of the Senate, ought to permit the Senator from Mississippi to allow me to make the suggestion I was about to make.

Mr. GEORGE. I do not want to hear the Senator's suggestion. I will promise to get through in fifteen minutes by the clock, and I am very well satisfied that the Senator will make no suggestion that will attract any attention of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to granting members of the Senate, at the request of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS]? The Chair hears none, and the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE] will proceed.

[Mr. GEORGE resumed and concluded his speech, which will be published entire hereafter.]

Mr. MILLS. I should like, if no other Senator then desires to speak on this question, to do so to-morrow morning after the routine morning business is over. If some other Senator desires to speak to-morrow he may do so.

CONSIDERATION OF PENSION BILLS.

Mr. GALLINGER. I desire to request that if, at the close of the discussion on the unfinished business to-day, there be any time remaining, the Senate devote a half hour to the consideration of pension bills on the Calendar reported favorably by the Committee on Pensions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRAY in the chair). The Senator from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent that, after the close of the discussion to-day on the pending bill, half an hour may be given to the consideration of pension bills favorably reported on the Calendar. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

INDIAN RIVER INLET IMPROVEMENT.

Mr. QUAY. I am instructed by the Committee on Commerce to report favorably a bill which I send to the desk, and which I ask may be immediately considered.

The bill (S. 1482) is one that is available for the appropriation for the dredging of the channel at the Indian River Inlet, Florida, was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Whereas by act of Congress which became a law August 7, 1891, entitled "An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," it is provided—

"For improving Indian River, Florida, dredging channel of the Indian River between the Negro cut to the bar at the Indian River Inlet, $50,000, and in addition hereto the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to expend in making said improvement the $15,000 appropriated by act approved July 13, 1892."

And whereas the sum of $30,000 is required and was intended for said improvement at the Indian River Inlet, and the sum of $15,000 appropriated by act approved July 13, 1892, was expended during the year 1894 by the Secretary of War in the improvement of the original purpose of that appropriation, and is therefore not available.

Be it enacted, etc., That in addition to the amount heretofore appropriated the sum of $15,000 shall be, and the same is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for dredging the channel between the Indian River Inlet, the same to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War.

Mr. GALLINGER. I call the attention of the Senator from Washington to the fact that a little time ago unanimous consent was given that after debate on the unfinished business should close half an hour would be devoted to the consideration of pension bills on the Calendar.

Mr. BRODERICK. Will not the gentleman make his request a little broader, so as to permit any member of the committee to file his views on this question?

Mr. BAILEY. I am entirely willing that the gentleman from Kansas shall suggest that modification.

Mr. BRODERICK. Then, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that any member of the committee have leave to file his views at any time during to-day or to-morrow.

Mr. HARRISON. I desire to state—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Debate is not in order, but the Chair will hear a brief statement of the gentleman.

Mr. BAILEY. The gentleman from Alabama is correct in that statement; but he will bear me witness that I said I hoped the report would not be made in the morning hour.

Mr. HARRISON. But I said I would report it at any time the gentleman desired, if he would make his request.

Mr. BRODERICK. I simply want the record to show that any member of the committee has leave to file his views at any time this week.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a privileged motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. Under the rules of the House, Mr. Speaker, this day being assigned to the consideration of the Private Calendar, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of bills on that Calendar.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will remind the gentleman that the motion is not debatable.

Mr. SAYERS. Is it not within the rule to raise the question of consideration?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question of consideration can not be raised. The only way to defeat the motion is to vote it down. The Chair will cause the latter clause of Rule XXIV to be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Third. On Friday of each week after the morning hour, it shall be in order to entertain a motion that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of the Private Calendar; and if this motion fail, then public business shall be transacted on other days.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The motion, therefore, of the gentleman from Pennsylvania is in order under the rule.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. I desire now, Mr. Speaker, unanimous consent to ask the gentleman from Texas, representing the Committee on Appropriations, how long he believes it will take to conclude the consideration of the pending appropriation bill.

Mr. SAYERS. My judgment, I will state merely to the gentleman, is that it would probably require two hours and a half to complete the bill. But the gentleman knows that such matters are not always within the control of the member having charge of the measure.

Mr. WILSON of West Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I think I ought to give notice now that I had intended to ask the gentleman of the House to a bill from the Committee on Ways and Means this morning. But as the gentleman from Texas believes that the sundry civil bill can be disposed of in the course of an hour or two, I have given way to him for that purpose. I give notice, however, that I shall ask the House, after that bill is disposed of, to take up the bill in relation to the differential duty of one-fourth of a cent on imported sugars—

Mr. HOOKER of Mississippi. I wish to make a suggestion, with the consent of the Chair, to the gentleman from Pennsylvania. I hope the gentleman from Pennsylvania will insist on his motion to take up the regular order of business for to-day. There are many bills undischarged on the Calendar of the Committee of the Whole that ought to be considered, or we had better abolish the rule assigning Friday to that business altogether.

Mr. McMILLIN. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from Pennsylvania will permit me, I would like to make a suggestion in the way of a compromise, which would probably accommodate all sides, and that is that we substitute a day next week for the consideration of the Private Calendar instead of to-day—

Mr. SPRINGER. I object to that.

Mr. McMILLIN. I agree that there ought to be some time given to those matters which are on that Calendar, but I have no doubt it would answer just as well to substitute a day next week, as has been done heretofore.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. Why not take Friday of next week? Mr. McMILLIN. Well, that day belongs, under the rules, to the Private Calendar already.

Mr. DOCKERY. I hope the gentleman from Pennsylvania will withdraw his motion.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. The motion I have made, Mr. Speaker, is not debatable, I know; but the House has heard the notice of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WILSON] that if the gentleman from Texas yields the floor to-day he would ask the House to take up and consider a measure reported from the Committee on Ways and Means. Now, the Private Calendar has been deprived of its rights during this entire Congress; and last week, by unanimous consent, in the absence of representatives of the committee on the floor, that day was assigned to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Now, we are perfectly willing to yield to the Committee on Appropriations, but not to everything that comes along; so that I shall insist upon my motion and let the House dispose of it as it sees fit.

Mr. SPRINGER. Regular order.

Mr. SAYERS. With the consent of the House, I wish to say merely this: That if the House votes down the proposition of the gentleman from Pennsylvania I will move to go into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering the sundry civil appropriation bill.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. Mr. Speaker, I think I am entitled to say that if the House goes into the consideration of the sundry civil bill, and that does not take up the entire day, then we are notified by the gentleman from West Virginia that he will proceed to take up a bill from the Committee on Ways and Means, and thus, if successful, deprive the Private Calendar altogether of that consideration to which it is entitled.

We are entitled under the rules, to this day, and I hope the House will give it to us.

Mr. SPRINGER. Regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is demanded, which is the question on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The question was taken, and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the "noes" seemed to have it.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. I demand a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 73, noes 111.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. Let us have tellers on the yeas and nays.

Tellers were refused.

So the House refused to proceed to the consideration of the Private Calendar.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SAYERS. I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering appropriation bills.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole. Mr. LESTER in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee had under consideration the bill (H. R. 8518) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, and for other purposes, and had finished the reading of the bill. The Clerk will now recur to the parts of the bill which were passed over.

Mr. DOCKERY. I desire to ask unanimous consent of the committee to return to page 100 and to offer the following amendment.

The amendment was read, as follows:

On page 100, at the end of line 2, insert the following:
"Provided, That hereafter the estimates for miscellaneous expenses of the Supreme Court of the United States shall be submitted in detail as to salaries paid thereunder and for all other objects."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DOCKERY] asks unanimous consent to recur to that paragraph, for the purpose of offering that amendment.

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. I hope that amendment will be reported again. I did not catch it.

The amendment was again read.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Chairman, I now ask the committee to return to page 99, lines 12 to 20, which were passed over yesterday. The amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. QUIGG] was then pending, to which I raised a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Would it not be better to begin with the first item which was passed over?

Mr. SAYERS. I prefer the other way. I ask consent to return to page 99, lines 12 to 20, to consider an amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. QUIGG] to which I raised a point of order. I will withdraw the point of order, with the understanding that the gentleman will offer the substitute which we have agreed upon.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. SAYERS] asks unanimous consent to return to this paragraph.

Mr. SAYERS. It does not require unanimous consent; we passed over it.

I ask consent to withdraw the amendment that I offered yesterday, and to substitute the one which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The amendment was read, as follows:

On page 99, line 14, after the word "New York," insert the following:
"Provided, That all persons employed under section 715 of the Revised Statutes shall be deemed to be in actual attendance when they attend upon the order of the court; and, provided further, That no such person shall be employed during vacation."

Mr. McMILLIN. Reserving the point of order, I should like to hear the gentleman's statement about that.

The CHAIRMAN. Is this the amendment referred to by the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. SAYERS. I withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Was it to this subject?

Mr. SAYERS. Yes.

Mr. McMILLIN. In order that there may be no mistake, I reserve the point of order until I hear the gentleman's statement on the new amendment just offered.

Mr. QUIGG. The facts in this case are just these: This amendment is offered—

Mr. McMILLIN. I will ask that the Clerk read the section as it will stand amended, and then we can see what bearing it will have.

The Clerk read as follows:

For pay of bailiffs and criers, not exceeding three bailiffs and one crier in each court, except in the southern district of New York: Provided, That all persons employed under section 715 of the Revised Statutes shall be deemed to be in actual attendance when they attend upon the order of the court; And provided further, That no such person shall be employed during vacation; of expenses of district judges directed to hold court outside of their districts, and judges of the circuit courts of appeals, of meals and lodgings for jurors in United States cases, and of bailiffs in attendance upon the same, when ordered by the court; and of compensation for jury commissioners, $5 per day, not exceeding three days for any one term of court, $50 per 100.

Mr. QUIGG. Now, if the gentleman from Tennessee will listen to me for a moment, I will understand it precisely. Section 715 of the Revised Statutes, to which my proposed amendment relates, covers the appointment of bailiffs and criers for the Federal courts.

Under that section the circuit and district court are allowed to appoint the criers, and the marshals may appoint bailiffs, not exceeding five in number, who are to be paid $2 a day, and whose compensation is to be paid for actual attendance upon the courts, and for other necessary purposes. The sundry civil appropriation bills during the last ten years have amended this law by reducing the number of bailiffs from five to three. There are in New York seven courts in almost constant session. There is the circuit court of appeals, the circuit courts in five parts, and the district court. There are there 18 bailiffs, less than the number allowed by the law, the number being three to each court, which would admit of 21 bailiffs, but there are now only 18. Their compensation, their pitiful $2 a day, has been taken up by the comptroller of the Treasury, upon his construction of what the words "for actual attendance" mean. There is a difference of opinion between him and the five judges of the courts as to the significance of those words. The courts assert that when those bailiffs attend upon the order of the courts they are in attendance upon the courts, the courts being in session. The Comptroller contends that in order for them to receive that $2 a day there must be a court in session. Mr. McMILLIN. Do you propose by this amendment, in any interrupt you there, to have them paid when there is no court in session?

Mr. McMILLAN. Mr. President, I desire to give notice that on Saturday, the 9th of February, at 3 o'clock p.m., I shall submit resolutions on the death of my late colleague, Senator Stockbridge.

Mr. FRYE. A great many of those petitions are coming in daily to the Senate. It was referred to the Committee on Commerce in the Senate. The Senate committee has agreed to it and it was reported yesterday, or if it was not it will be reported to-day from the Committee on Commerce. SUGAR BOUNTY CLAIMS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a former day, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A resolution by Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon, directing the Secretary of the Treasury to transmit to the Senate a statement as to the number of pounds of domestic sugar actually made from cane, sorghum, beets, and maple sap in the years 1893 and 1894, prior to August 28, 1894, when the revenue act of 1890 was repealed, and on which no bounty has been paid, etc.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is, will the Senate agree to the resolution?

The resolution was agreed to.

POLICY REGARDING HAWAII.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a former day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted yesterday by Mr. ALLEN, as follows:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate, the revolutionary having now become the established Government of the Hawaiian Islands, that a wise and enlightened foreign policy requires that steps should be taken by this Government, without unnecessary delay, to annex those islands to the United States as a part thereof; and that, in the meantime, the personal and property rights of American citizens in said islands should be protected by the presence of a sufficient naval force in Hawaiian waters.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I am of the number in this Chamber who believe that the overturning of the Hawaiian Government in January, 1893, through the instrumentality of Minister Stevens, aided by marines landed from the Boston, was inexcusably unlawful. It was, in my judgment, not only a gross and flagrant violation of international law, but it was a violation of the American doctrine of noninterference to war.

On the discovery of Minister Stevens's conduct he should have been promptly dismissed the service.

The presence of a minister of this Government at a foreign court implies that nothing shall be done by him that will in the slightest degree injuriously affect the autonomy or integrity of the Government to which he is sent. It was for the purpose of guarding American citizens and American interests, and for no other purpose, that Mr. Stevens was sent to the court of Queen Liliuokalani to represent this country, and his presence there implied the existence of a lawful government over which she ruled, and with which it was his duty to deal fairly and honorably.

He should, under such circumstances, have studiously refrained from engaging in any alliances antagonistic to that Government and from any conspiracy looking to the overturning of the Government to which he had been sent.

If the President had pronounced upon the wrong inflicted upon the Hawaiian Government in 1893 by Minister Stevens and the marines I would have been found among the number who would have supported him in that step; but he did not do so. He suffered the revolutionary Government to become established and rooted in the Hawaiian Islands to such an extent that I now believe that it is our duty in the interest of this country and of American citizens residing in the Hawaiian Islands, as well as in the interest of the inhabitants of the islands themselves, to support the existing power, entirely regardless of the circumstances or conditions under which it was established.

In other words, sir, I think we have suffered the wrong to go unredressed for such a length of time that we are now estopped to deny the legality of the present Government, and therefore I am in favor of maintaining a naval force in Hawaiian waters during these perilous and troublesome times to guard the interests of Americans and American property.

I am not of the number who believe in what has, in these latter days, been called a "brilliant foreign policy." I believe in a policy that is just, humane, and safe, not brilliant nor stupid; a policy that will guard every port, every island adjacent to this country, and that will permit no foreign power to obtain a foothold on or menace our territory, our prosperity, or our well being; a plain, resolute, sensible, statesmanlike, and businesslike policy that will maintain American interests at all times and under all circumstances, and which at the same time will be entirely just to foreign powers.

I have not the slightest sympathy with that spirit that is found in certain quarters which has induced this country to take comparatively short time to "bully" small and semibarbarous powers; such conduct I regard as inexcusable in a powerful and just nation.

Mr. President, these islands are highly important to American interests. They are important in our transpacific trade, and we can not in justice to our own country and people suffer them to pass under the dominion of any foreign government. I am well persuaded that the time has come when they must either become a part of the American Republic, or a part of some formidable foreign power; and being of this opinion, I am in favor of opening negotiations for their annexation to this country.

In saying this much, sir, I give expression only to my own views. I do not undertake to speak for the Populist party or for any individual. It is the part of wisdom, in my judgment, to now enter upon a course that will result in the annexation of these islands to the United States as a part of our territory and put at rest for all time the status of these islands.

[Mr. MILLS addressed the Senate. His speech will be published hereafter.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FAULKNER in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the resolution of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN].

Mr. VEST. I submit a resolution which I propose as a substitute for the one pending.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The proposed substitute will be read.

The Secretary read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That while the people of the United States earnestly sympathize with the effort to establish republican institutions wherever that effort is made, they reaffirm the policy of absolute noninterference, unless by agreement, with the affairs of other nations and recognize to the fullest extent the right of every people to adopt and maintain their own form of government unaided and uninfluenced by foreign dictation.

That the Administration of President Cleveland in maintaining this policy as to our foreign relations deserves the approval and support of the American people.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the substitute proposed by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST].

Mr. CAFFERY. Mr. President, I propose to discuss the pending resolution in a very brief manner.

Mr. MILLS. I suggest to the Senator from Louisiana to let the gentlemen go over and discuss them to-morrow.

Mr. CAFFERY. I should like to have the resolutions go over until to-morrow, as there is so little time remaining of the morning hour.

Mr. BUTLER. I suggest to the Senator from Louisiana that there is no possible chance to dispose of the resolutions to-day, as only six minutes now remain before the hour of 2, and it would be wise to allow the resolutions to go over until to-morrow, as the Senator from Louisiana desires to address the Senate; and I make that request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina asks unanimous consent that the pending resolution shall go over until to-morrow, retaining its place. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. CALL. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to call up the bill (S. 2578) opening the naval resurvey of the coast of the United States in "Sawaduck and Alouha," a homestead settlement and confirming the title of actual settlers thereon. This is the bill that it was agreed should be taken up yesterday evening, but the right bill was mislaid and it was suggested there had been an adverse report upon it. It is found that that is an error and that the bill was reported favorably from the Committee on Naval Affairs,

In that connection, let me call the attention of the Senate to the correspondence which this thing commenced, and the officers of the Maritime Canal Company. It will be found that the first president of the construction company, Mr. Cheney, offered to construct this work for so many hundred million of dollars, and he said, "as a guarantee of our good faith"—the faith of the construction company—"we propose to subscribe for $100,000,000 of the stock, and pay for it in cash." That was in June, 1889. This offer was not accepted, and I have never been able to understand why it was not. As Mr. Hitchcock says, they were the same parties in interest—the construction company and the Maritime Canal Company; they could have taken that $100,000,000 in cash, and constructed the canal for $70,000,000, and have had $30,000,000 surplus to be divided amongst them.

It is true they did not accept that proposition, but they afterwards accepted another and a smaller sum which, if I had the time, I should lay before the Senate, as it is found in the report, but that appears beyond any question in the testimony of Mr. Cheney, and in his written proposition, which is copied in the report, that the construction company in June, 1889, proposed to subscribe for $100,000,000 of the stock of the Maritime Canal Company and pay for it in money.

Mr. PASCO. Mr. President, if I understand this question correctly, the whole basis of this canal construction under the project before us rests upon the concessions obtained from Nicaragua and Costa Rica. I can not accept the idea that the concessions can be charged by inference or by agreements with the promoters or in any other manner than by conventions with the countries which granted them to these promoters. But there are several objections to the concessions, to which I called attention in the remarks which I had the honor to make in the Senate some ten days ago, and I propose at the proper time to offer some amendments to remove these objections.

One of the objections is that these concessions only last for ninety-nine years, and at the end of that time the whole work and everything connected with it goes back to the countries of Nicaragua and Costa Rica.

Mr. MORGAN. The Senator is mistaken about that. They can be renewed for another ninety-nine years.

Mr. PASCO. The right to the privileges ends in ninety-nine years, but the use of the property can then be granted by lease for another ninety-nine years; and at the end of the ninety-nine years' lease the canal and all the property connected with it go back absolutely to those Governments, and the Senator will find that by reference to article 44 in the Nicaraguan concession. Article 4 says:

The duration of the present privilege shall be for ninety-nine years.

In article 44 it is said that:

But the company shall have the right, at the expiration of the aforesaid term of ninety-nine years, to the full enjoyment of the free use and control of the canal in the capacity of lessee, with all the privileges and advantages granted by the said concession, and for another term of ninety-nine years.

I have only five minutes in which to allude to these matters; and therefore I can not go into them as fully as I should otherwise do.

The second objection to which I called attention was the fact that the Governments of Costa Rica and Nicaragua have, under these concessions, the privilege of allowing their vessels engaged in domestic trade and in foreign commerce, when leaving a toll-port, to pass through the canal at one-half the usual rates of toll, and in the remarks which I made in the Senate I said it was unbecoming for us to consent that American commerce should be put to any disadvantage in comparison with that of any other nation in the world.

One of these amendments has been prepared to remove this objection to the bill. The third alludes to the mode by which the committee proposes to control this company—that is, by having two-thirds of the directors appointed by the President of the United States and confirmed by the Senate. I called attention the other day to the fact that this was not possible under these concessions. My views have not been changed at all by what has been said in reference to it to-day. The Senator from Maine [Mr. FAYE] thinks that the provisions in the bill can be made good by the Nicaraguan Canal Company consenting to it. I do not think it can be a matter of consent on the part of the company. There are three parties to each agreement, there are the Governments of Costa Rica and Nicaragua, the promoters, and the Government of the United States. In my judgment, one of the purposes Nicaragua had in view in placing this provision in the articles of concession was to carry out article 8, to prevent any foreign nation from becoming the owner of these privileges.

The present concession is transferable only to such company of execution as shall be organized by the Nicaraguan Canal Association, and in no case to be sold or to be organized by foreign public powers.

So she is able through this article to control that matter.

Mr. MORGAN. If the Senator will allow me, I wish to call his attention to one point.

Mr. PASCO. If it will not come out of my time I shall yield to the Senator.

Mr. MORGAN. The Senator said it could only be done by a lease. Section 44 of the Nicaraguan concession reads in this way:

The company shall have the right, at the expiration of the aforesaid term of ninety-nine years, to the full enjoyment of the free use and control of the canal in the capacity of lessee, with all the privileges and advantages granted by the said concession, and for another term of ninety-nine years.

In the capacity of lessee, not by making a new lease.

Mr. PASCO. That is what I meant by a lease. The company will take the canal for the second ninety-nine years in the capacity of lessee; and that implies the existence of a lease, whereas actually written out and formally executed of management by this concession. Certainly the company take a second term of ninety-nine years as lessees.

Mr. MORGAN. It is not necessary to have a new lease.

Mr. PASCO. And the property finally goes back to the Nicaraguan Government. I will read the amendments which I propose to offer. The first one is with reference to the period of ninety-nine years, and is as follows:

This act shall not take effect unless the Government of the United States shall first, by convention with the Governments of Nicaragua and Costa Rica, secure such modification of these concessions made by the said Governments as will make the duration of the privileges guaranteed by such concessions perpetual instead of for ninety-nine years.

The second amendment I propose to offer is as follows:

This act shall not take effect unless the Government of the United States shall first, by convention with the Governments of Nicaragua and Costa Rica, secure such modification of these concessions made by the said Governments as will place the commerce of the United States on an equal footing with the commerce of the said countries, notwithstanding the terms of article 44 of the concession made by the Government of Nicaragua to the promoters of the canal, and article 40 of the concession made by the Government of Costa Rica with such promoters.

The third amendment I intend to propose is to add at the end of section 13 the following:

And this act shall not take effect unless the Government of the United States shall first, by convention with the Governments of Nicaragua and Costa Rica, secure such modification of these concessions made by the said Governments as will make the duration of the privileges guaranteed by such concessions perpetual instead of for ninety-nine years.

At the proper time I shall offer these amendments.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, the question of this amendment just proposed is concerned, I think it is objectionable in this respect. If Senators are right in assuming that the concession forbids something sought to be done by this bill, that objection may be removed, as stated by a Senator here to-day, by the action of the Governments of Costa Rica and Nicaragua, whereas in the present instance, if these amendments are adopted, it will be necessary to make a treaty with those Governments and submit it to the ratification of the Senate, and thus allow one-third of this body to defeat the entire project.

My answer to the proposition of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] is this: First, I would vote for this bill if I believed that this mortgage covered nothing, because I believe that the stock which the Government of the United States will own in this enterprise will be sufficient to secure its control absolutely, and to justify its interposition; secondly, the bill itself clearly contemplates something to be done in the future before it has any effect.

I agree that there are things to be done under this bill which, if not accomplished, will render the measure practically nugatory, but a start must be had somewhere. We are the parties to commence this work, and until we formulate a proposition which we are able to carry into execution we can not expect participation elsewhere.

Plainly the provision of the bill in section 4 presupposes some action upon the part of the Government of Costa Rica and Nicaragua, because it is there stated that the mortgage must be recorded in the proper offices in Nicaragua and Costa Rica to be designated by said States. There must be action, and I agree with the Senator from Delaware that if those Governments refuse to act in the matter of course those mortgages can not be carried out or enforced upon the character of property to which he has referred.

But, again, if the stockholders, or the parties in interest, the promoters, the persons with whom we are supposed to deal, constituting the Maritime Canal Company, refuse to go into this stipulation and to abide by the provisions of this act, then also it all must fail. But, Mr. President, we are acting upon the hypothesis that the plan outlined here will be acquiesced in by those whose acquiescence is material.

As I said before, I am satisfied that the benefits to be secured to this country from itself and the ownership of the Government of the United States of the controlling interest in the entire stock of the concern warrant the legislation which is proposed.

Mr. President, so far as the proposition is concerned which has been made here, to the effect that the United States Government is a holder not for value, I deny it.

One of the objections made is that we are doing too much, that we are assuming too great a risk, but the guaranty is an ample consideration, according to the views of Senators who criticize this bill, for the issuance of stock to the Government of the United States.

Mr. CALL. I should like to ask a question of the Chair. I inquire in what order the amendments to the bill are to be considered, or is there any order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The order in which the amendments will be considered will be the order in which the proposers of amendments are recognized by the Chair.

Mr. CALL. I offered some time since an amendment which I intend to propose, which has been lying on the table, and I now offer it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Florida that there is an amendment now pending. The hour of 5 o'clock having arrived, the Chair calls the attention of the Senate to the fact that amendments are now in order and will be voted on under the unanimous-consent agreement. The pending question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST], which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 4, line 17, after the word "that," strike out:

Prior to the 1st day of July, 1897, no bonds indorsed shall be issued from the Treasury in excess of $30,000,000, and on or before said date.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. VEST. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BATE (when his name was called). I am paired on this proposition with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY]. I do not know how he would vote on this amendment if he were here, and I therefore withhold my vote. I am opposed to the bill and he is in favor of it.

Mr. TELLER (when Mr. BERRY's name was called). The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY] is paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON], who is absent.

Mr. COKE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH]. If he were here I should vote "yea."

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I agreed to pair with the Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES] upon all questions involved in the pending bill. Not knowing how he would vote on this question, I withhold my vote.

Mr. PLATT (when Mr. HAWLEY's name was called). I desire to state that my colleague [Mr. HAWLEY] is absent. His pair has been announced with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BATE]. If my colleague were present he would vote "nay" on this amendment.

Mr. LINDSAY (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN]. If he were here I should vote "yea."

Mr. MCPHERSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HIGGINS]. If he were here I should vote "yea."

Mr. MITCHELL (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY]. If he were here I should vote "yea."

Mr. PALMER (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH]. I understand he would vote with me on this question. I vote "yea."

Mr. PASCO (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY]. If he were present I should vote "yea," and I understand he would vote "nay."

Mr. PETTIGREW (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. CAMDEN]. He would vote "nay" if present, and I should vote "yea." I transfer my pair to the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH] and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. PALMER. Will the Senator from South Dakota allow me to make a word of explanation? I understood I was paired with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH]. Has the pair been transferred?

Mr. PETTIGREW. It was arranged afterwards so that the Senator from Illinois and I can vote, by transferring pairs, so that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. CAMDEN] and the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH] will stand paired.

Mr. PALMER. I am authorized to say that the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH] would vote "yea" if present. Mr. PETTIGREW. The Senator from Illinois is so authorized, and the Senator from North Dakota would vote against the bill if present.

Mr. ROACH (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. TELLER (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. SHOUT]. If he were present I should vote "yea" and he would vote "nay."

Mr. VEST (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WASHBURN]. Can the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DAVIS] tell me how his colleague would vote on this amendment?

Mr. DAVIS. I am not informed as to how my colleague would vote.

Mr. SQUIRE. I will state that I am informed that the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WASHBURN] would vote for the bill.

Mr. VEST. Then I shall not vote.

Mr. WILSON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON]. We have arranged in regard to votes upon the pending bill so that both will be at liberty to vote if present. I will vote in his absence. I vote "nay."

Mr. MORGAN. Did the Senator from Iowa say he was paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON]?

Mr. WILSON. Yes.

Mr. MORGAN. The Senator from Iowa is relieved from that pair, because the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON] transferred his pair to the Senator from Kansas [Mr. MARTIN].

Mr. WILSON. I have just stated that by an arrangement which has been made I am relieved from the pair on this vote, and I have voted.

Mr. WOLCOTT (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICE]. If he were here I should vote "yea" and he would vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. MARTIN. I am paired with the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON]. I am advised that if he were here he would vote "nay." I should vote "yea" if at liberty to vote.

Mr. MITCHELL (when his name was called). In addition to the statement made by the Senator from Texas [Mr. COKE], I desire to state that my colleague [Mr. DOLPH] is detained from the city and is necessarily absent. If he were here he would vote against all amendments and for the passage of the bill.

Mr. DUBOIS. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH].

The result was announced—yeas 24, nays 29; as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the amendment proposed by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Wolcott].

The SECRETARY. Add at the end of section 10 and as a part of said section the following proviso:

Provided, That all sums expended in the purchases of material and supplies in and about the construction of said canal, including dredging machinery and ships, shall be purchased in the United States, except such material and supplies as may be grown or produced in Nicaragua or Costa Rica or not grown or produced in this country.

Mr. MORGAN. As the representative of the committee and its chairman, if I am permitted to do so, I will accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. Wolcott].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CALL. I submit an amendment to come in on page 16, after line 10.

The SECRETARY. On page 16, after line 10, strike out the remainder of the bill and insert in lieu thereof:

The United States of America shall construct a maritime and interoceanic ship canal on the lines and according to the surveys and the concessions from the States of Nicaragua and Costa Rica to the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua.

SEC. 2. That the President of the United States shall acquire from the owners thereof the concessions from the States of Nicaragua and Costa Rica, and shall pay them a sum of money sufficient to reimburse their reasonable and proper expenditures, and pay the States of Nicaragua and Costa Rica such amount as is required by the terms of the concessions, and also shall have a reasonable compensation to the persons composing the commissions, and also shall have a reasonable pay for the time and labor expended by them, and such additional sum as may be necessary to pay the expenses of perfecting the assignment and transfer of the concessions to the United States. The whole amount shall not exceed $500,000.

SEC. 3. That the canal shall be constructed of the depths and widths and except as they shall be altered by authority of the United States, and it shall be constructed under the direct supervision of Gen. Thomas L. Casey, Chief Engineer of the United States Army, who shall be continued in the same position and direction of the work after he shall be retired from the office of Chief of Engineers of the United States Army.

SEC. 5. That the superintendent shall order on duty there.

SEC. 6. That the superintendent, Gen. Thomas L. Casey, shall have a discretion to let the work, either in part or in whole, on contract to responsible salary and allowances of a General of the Army and his expenses during the period of construction of the canal.

SEC. 7. That $500,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not appropriated, for the construction of the canal, and annual appropriations shall be made by Congress of such amount as can be usefully expended during the period of construction.

The tolls imposed on ships using the canal shall not be more than sufficient to reimburse the United States for all the money expended in its construction, and after that shall be paid in full, the tolls shall be no more than will be sufficient to keep the canal in good repair and provide for its preservation and maintenance.

SEC. 7. That this act shall be subject to amendment or repeal.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair rules that the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida is not in order until amendments which have been proposed perfecting the text of the bill have been acted upon.

MR. PALMER. Are amendments still in order?

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Amendments are in order to the text of the bill or to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TAYLOR].

MR. PALMER. I submit an amendment.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

THE SECRETARY. After the word "years," in line 14, section 13, insert:

And the President shall have power to remove any one or all of the directors appointed by him whenever, in his opinion, the public interests will be promoted thereby, and he may appoint successors to such of the directors as may be removed by him, and he shall report such removals to the Senate.

MR. MORGAN. I think that is a good amendment, and I hope the Senate will adopt it.

MR. HOAR. I ask unanimous consent to suggest to the Senator from Illinois that, while the President can appoint directors only by introduction of an arrangement by which he could remove a director at the Senate, I think the words "with the advice and consent of the Senate" should be inserted.

MR. PALMER. I am entirely willing to accept the suggestion of the Senator from Massachusetts.

MR. HOAR. Then the words "he shall report such removals to the Senate" should be stricken out, because they will become unnecessary.

MR. PALMER. I accept that modification.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment as modified will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

And the President shall have power to remove any one or all of the directors appointed by him whenever, in his opinion, the public interests will be promoted thereby, and he may, by the advice and consent of the Senate, appoint successors to such of the directors as may be removed by him.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Illinois as modified.

The amendment as modified was agreed to.

MR. WOLCOTT. I call the attention of the Chair to the second amendment I have submitted.

The Secretary read as follows:

And no more than 1 per cent of the stock of said company shall be issued for each dollar in truth and in fact expended by said company.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Colorado.

MR. MORGAN and MR. PLATT called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

MR. COCKRELL. Let the amendment be read again.

The Secretary again read the amendment.

MR. COCKRELL. I do not see what there is in the amendment to object to.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The roll call will proceed on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT].

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

MR. ROACH (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS].

The roll call was concluded.

MR. PEPPER. I offer an amendment, to come in immediately after the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT] which has just been adopted.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The Secretary. At the end of section 8 as amended add the following:

And all laborers employed on the work of the canal shall be citizens of the United States, and shall not be subject to any law or contract which shall deprive them of their rights as such laborers.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PEPPER].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. POWER. I offer an amendment.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Rise to make a parliamentary inquiry. The Senator from Maine [Mr. FRYE] proposed an amendment. Did he withdraw it, or is it still pending?

Mr. FRYE. I did not withdraw it. It is still pending.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I ask that it may be called up, that my amendment to the amendment may be acted upon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has recognized the Senator from Montana [Mr. POWER].

Mr. POWER. I should like to have my amendment read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. As soon as the amendment offered by the Senator from Montana is disposed of, the amendment of the Senator from Maine will be stated. The amendment of the Senator from Montana will be read.

The SECRETARY. Strike out sections 15 and 16 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

That all officers detailed as aforesaid shall be paid by the United States their official salaries, including commutation of quarters, and, in addition, 25 per cent of such salaries and commutation from sums appropriated for that day of the appropriation of the same; the amount thus paid to officers shall be paid annually into the Treasury of the United States by the said canal company.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Montana [Mr. POWER]. [Putting the question.] The yeas appear to have it.

Mr. POWER. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will state the amendment submitted by the Senator from Maine [Mr. FRYE].

The SECRETARY. Insert as section 15:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT] to the amendment of the Senator from Maine [Mr. FRYE].

Mr. MORGAN. I do not think I understood the amendment to the amendment. Is the word "bids" in it? The Senator from Colorado did not mean "bids."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be again read.

The Secretary read, as follows:

And the aggregate amount of such bids for the entire completion and finishing of said canal shall not exceed $700,000.00.

Mr. MORGAN. I call the attention of the Senator from Colorado to the fact—

Mr. CHANDLER and Mr. GORMAN. It should read "awards."

Mr. WOLCOTT. Yes; "awards."

Mr. CHANDLER. The Senator from Colorado does not mean "bids."

Mr. WOLCOTT. No; "awards."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be stated as modified.

The Secretary read as follows:

And the aggregate amount of such awards for the entire completion, etc.

Mr. PLATT. That is not right.

Mr. FRYE. Say "accepted bids," if the Senator from Colorado will allow it.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Yes, "accepted bids" is better than "awards."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment as modified will be stated.

The Secretary reads as follows:

And the aggregate amount of such accepted bids for the entire completion and finishing of said canal shall not exceed $700,000.00.

Mr. FRYE. That is right.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT] to the amendment of the Senator from Maine [Mr. FRYE].

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the amendment of the Senator from Maine as amended.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the amendment be read as amended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Sec. 15. The directors in letting contracts shall divide the work into such sections and parts as will secure the completion of said canal with the utmost expedition, and all contracts shall be let to the lowest responsible bidder after advertisement, they giving bond for the performance of the work, to be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall also prescribe the extent of the advertisement of proposals to be required; and the aggregate amount of such accepted bids for the entire completion and finishing of said canal shall not exceed $700,000.00.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. STEWART. I offer a substitute for the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A substitute for the bill is not now in order. Are there other amendments to the text of the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Indiana will be read.

The SECRETARY. After the amendment of Mr. PALMER, in section 13, add:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VORHEES].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PASCO. I offer the amendment of which I gave notice some time ago. I shall ask for the yeas and nays on it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. Add at the end of section 13:

This act shall not take effect unless the Government of the United States shall first effect such arrangements with the Governments of Nicaragua and Costa Rica as will place the commerce of the United States using the canal and all contracts for the same on a footing as that of those countries, notwithstanding the terms of Article XLIV of the concessions made by the Government of Nicaragua with the promoters of the canal, and Article XL of the concessions made by the Government of Costa Rica with such promoters.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Florida [Mr. PASCO], on which he demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. TELLER. On all these questions I am paired with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. SHORR]. I should vote for all amendments that would improve the bill, because I am against the bill. I shall not announce the pair hereafter on the amendments, or state how I would vote. I shall not take the time to do it.

The result was announced—yeas 35, nays 26; as follows:

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. VILAS. I offer an amendment, and I ask the attention of the Senator from Alabama to it.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read. THE SECRETARY. Add to section 151 the following:

No contract for the construction of the whole or any part of said canal shall be let to any company, association, or corporation in which any stockholder or director of the Maritime Canal Company is a member or stockholder, or in which he is in anywise interested.

Mr. FRYE. There is no objection to that amendment.

Mr. MORGAN. I have no objection to the amendment.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PASCO. I move to add to the end of section 13 the following:

Contracts in said work shall be let only by the Maritime Canal Company of Nicaragua, and shall be let and paid for only by the officers of said company, subject always to such prior inspection of the said work in sections as completed as Congress may hereafter provide, and subject to the previous approval of the Secretary of War."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE].

Mr. PALMER. Is the amendment proposed by the Senator from Indiana divisible?

Mr. TURPIE. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is.

Mr. PALMER. I ask, then, that it be divided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois demands that the amendment submitted by the Senator from Indiana be divided. The Secretary will state the first amendment.

The SECRETARY. Strike out all of section 8 of the bill.

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 11, line 4, strike out all after and including the word "all" down to and including the word "company," in line 8, and insert the following:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the amendment proposed as a substitute by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE]. It will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the President be hereby, and is, authorized to appoint three suitable persons, civil engineers, two of whom shall be members of the United States Civil Engineer Corps of the United States Army, and one a citizen from the State not interested in, and not employed nor heretofore employed by the Nicaragua Maritime Company, or any of its allied corporations, who shall proceed to make such survey and estimate of the cost of construction of the canal of the Nicaragua Canal, by the route as reported by A. G. Menocal, chief engineer of the Nicaragua Canal Construction Company, on the 15th day of May, 1889, and that they shall also make a report of the practicability of said route, and that they shall make a report of the practicability and an estimate of the cost of any other route by way of Nicaragua which they shall deem worthy of consideration.

Mr. TURPIE. I demand the yeas and nays on the amendment. The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

colleague [Mr. McLAURIN] that a pair had been arranged with his colleague [Mr. DIXON].

Mr. ALDRICH. I did so inform him.

Mr. GEORGE. Yesterday?

Mr. ALDRICH. Yes sir; but I think the Senator from Mississippi intended to be present at the time, and of course my colleague would desire to protect the Senator from Mississippi. I have no question about that; but on the statement made by the colleague of the Senator from Mississippi I have no objection to the arrangement which has been made.

Mr. FRYE. It is but just to say that I myself arranged a pair between the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY] and the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON].

Mr. GEORGE. Did the Senator see the Senator from Rhode Island in relation to it?

Mr. FRYE. I have not seen the Senator from Rhode Island, but I have seen the Senator from Arkansas, and he told me he understood that the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. McLAURIN] was to vote for the bill, and he desired to vote against it. He asked me to arrange a pair and speak to the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] in regard to it. Then I went back to the Senator from Arkansas and informed him that the pair had been arranged with him.

Mr. GEORGE. My colleague would not vote for the bill if he were present, and he is absent with the understanding that the general pair which has stood between him and the Senator from Rhode Island for several months is still in force.

Mr. ALDRICH. In view of the statement now made by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE], there is nothing to be done, of course, but to allow the pair to stand between my colleague [Mr. DIXON] and the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. McLAURIN], as I am sure my colleague would desire.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I vote "yes."

Mr. McPHERSON (after having voted in the affirmative). I inadvertently voted. I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HIGGINS] and withdraw my vote.

Mr. BATE. I am paired, as heretofore stated, with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY]. I do not know how that Senator would vote on this proposition if present, and I therefore forewent my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 12, nays 32; as follows:

YEAS—12.

Caffery,	George,	Power,
Cockrell,	Irby,	Stewart,
Daniel,	Jones of Ark.,	Wolcott.

So the amendment was rejected.

The bill was reported to the Senators amended, and the amendments made in Committee of the Whole were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, and was read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. PALMER. On that question I ask for the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BATE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY]. Were he present I should vote "nay," and he would vote "yea."

Mr. COKE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DOLPH]. If he were present I should vote "nay."

Mr. ALDRICH (when Mr. DIXON's name was called). My colleague [Mr. DIXON] is necessarily absent from the Senate. He is paired, as has already been stated, with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. McLAURIN]. If my colleague were present he would vote "yea."

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon (when Mr. DOLPH's name was called). It has been already stated by the Senator from Texas [Mr. COKE], but I desire to repeat that my colleague [Mr. DOLPH] is detained from the Senate. If he were here he would vote for the bill.

Mr. DUBOIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH]. If he were present he would vote "nay" and I should vote "yea."

Mr. LINDSAY (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN]. If he were present I should vote "nay."

Mr. GEORGE (when Mr. McLAURIN's name was called). My colleague [Mr. McLAURIN] is absent from the Senate because of indisposition. He is paired with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON]. If my colleague and the Senator from Rhode Island were present my colleague would vote "nay."

Mr. McPHERSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HIGGINS]. If he were here I should vote "nay."

Mr. MARTIN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON]. If he were here I should vote "yea."

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY]. If he were present, I should vote "nay," and he would vote "yea."

Mr. PASCO (when his name was called). On this, the final vote, I again announce my pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. PETTIGREW (when his name was called). I again announce the transfer of my pair with the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. CAMPEN] to the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH]. If the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH] were present he would vote against the passage of the bill, and I understand the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. CAMPEN] would vote for it. I vote "nay."

Mr. ROACH (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from California [Mr. FRICKS]. If he were present he would vote "yea" and I should vote "nay."

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon (when Mr. TELLER's name was called). The senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] has been called from the Chamber. He desired me to announce that he is paired with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. SHOUF]. If the senior Senator from Colorado were here he would vote "nay," and the Senator from Idaho [Mr. SHOUF] would vote "yea."

Mr. VEST (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WASHBURN]. If he were here I should vote "nay."

Mr. TURPIE (when Mr. VOORHEES's name was called). My colleague [Mr. VOORHEES] is paired with the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL]. If my colleague and his pair were present my colleague would vote "nay."

Mr. MORGAN. The Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL]

would vote "yea."

Mr. WOLCOTT (when his name was called). I will transfer my general pair with the junior Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICE] to the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY] and vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 31, nays 21; as follows:

the rôle of orator, as that character is generally understood, but he could hold his own in debate, and whenever he took the floor he spoke with effect and commanded respect and attention because he spoke directly to the point and intelligently.

Mr. O'Neill's power as a legislator was due, in a great measure, to his businesslike attention to the measures before the House, and his quiet, persistent, persuasive pursuit of whatever he had in hand. His energy never flagged and his watchfulness never ceased until he had carried his point or exhausted every honorable means to accomplish his purpose. He did not care for show or applause, but addressed himself with quiet energy and zeal to the work he had to do, and usually succeeded in what he undertook. Such men are much more useful in a legislative body than the showy, talking members, whose energies are exhausted in speech making and parade.

Mr. O'Neill was liberally endowed with most attractive qualities. Strong and active in mind and body, he could assert and express himself when the occasion required with power and force, but there were no boisterous or inflammatory elements in his nature. He was quiet, sedate, always courteous and considerate, never wounding the sensibilities of those who for the time were opposing his measures or the objects he was promoting.

Taking him all in all he was a model representative of the people in a free republic, and this was attested by the uninterrupted confidence the people reposed in his ability and worth and by his long and honorable career in public life. The great Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and the great city of Philadelphia may well enshrine his memory and services in their hearts, and the country at large may fitly cherish his career as one of the most honorable and distinguished in our political history.

Mr. President, as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and at 3 o'clock and 21 minutes p. m., the Senate adjourned until Monday, January 28, 1895, at 12 o'clock m.

If there be no objection, that order will be made.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

GAINESVILLE, McALISTER AND ST. LOUIS RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, when the House took a recess yesterday there was an order pending for the yeas and nays on the demand for the previous question on a bill which I had called up for consideration. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the title of the bill, after which the Chair will submit the request.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 9082) to grant the Gainesville, McAlister and St. Louis Railway Company the right to locate, build, and to operate the right-of-way therefor through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes.

The yeas and nays had been ordered upon his demand for the previous question on the passage of the bill. The Chair does not see the gentleman from New York [Mr. VAN VOORHIS] who objected. Without objection, the order for the yeas and nays will be vacated.

There was no objection.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I have seen the gentleman from New York, and he told me that he would withdraw his objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has also told the Chair that he withdrew his objection. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The question from the committee amendment read and published in the Record.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

UNION PACIFIC RAILWAY.

Mr. BRICE. I am directed by the Committee on Pacific Railroad, to whom was referred the resolution of October 13, 1893, directing that committee to investigate and report to the Senate if the Union Pacific Railway Company has passed into the hands of a receiver, and, if so, by what action and under what circumstances, and what steps, if any, are necessary to protect the interests and secure the indebtedness to the United States of said railway company, and to inquire into and report upon the extent of the authority of Congress over said road, to submit a partial report in response to the resolution. I ask that the report be printed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, it will be so ordered.

APPEALS IN INJUNCTION CASES.

Mr. HOAR. I am directed by the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5216) to amend the act entitled "An act to establish circuit courts of appeals and to define and regulate in certain cases the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1891, to report it with an amendment. It is a very small bill, and I ask that it be put upon its passage. Let the bill be read for information.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read.

The Secretary read the bill.

Mr. HOAR. Now let the amendment reported by the committee be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment reported by the Committee on the Judiciary will be read.

The SECRETARY. At the end of the bill it is proposed to add:

Provided further, That the court below may, in its discretion, require a certain time additional for the filing of the appeal.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. ALLEN. I desire to object to the present consideration of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection.

Mr. HOAR. I will state to the Senator from Nebraska that a very strong motive of personal interest requires me to leave the Senate to-day or to-morrow morning, to be absent for some time. This bill, which was referred to me a year ago, is now before me. I merely provides that the appeal which now is allowed in cases of appeals for injunction may be made to the circuit court of appeals in case of refusal of an injunction by the lower court. That is the whole of it. It is a very simple matter.

Mr. ALLEN. I think the bill ought to go over.

Mr. HOAR. Very well.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Being objected to, the bill will be placed on the Calendar.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CHANDLER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 7977) to amend the internal-revenue laws of the United States; which was referred to the Committee on Finance, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. KYLE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. POWER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

PRIVILEGES OF THE FLOOR.

Mr. HARRIS. The late Secretary of the Senate is in the Capitol. By a singular omission or oversight of the Committee on Rules, we have failed to extend the privileges of the floor to ex-Secretaries of the Senate. I therefore ask unanimous consent that ex-Secretaries of the Senate be given the privileges of the floor.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

PRINTING OF NICARAGUAN CANAL BILL.

Mr. MORGAN. I ask an order for the printing of the Nicaraguan Canal bill as it passed the Senate on Friday last.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the order to print will be entered.

STATE WAR CLAIMS.

Mr. BRICE submitted the following resolution: which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, directed to cause to be ascertained, from the claims of the several States, now on file in the Treasury Department, under act of July 27, 1811 (22 Stat., 226), the amounts due them for expenses incurred in raising troops, as provided for by the order of the Secretary of the Treasury of February 8, 1862, and to report the same to the Senate.

REVENUE DEFICIENCIES.

Mr. STEWART submitted the following resolution: which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to inform the Senate what is the estimated deficiency in the revenues of the Government to pay current expenses between the 31st day of December, 1894, and the 31st day of December, 1895, and if the deficiency in the balance in the Treasury on the 31st day of December, 1894, will be sufficient to meet such deficiency.

PAYMENTS FOR BONDS.

Mr. PEPPER. I submit a resolution, for which I ask present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to inform the Senate what kind of money or currency, and what amounts of each kind, were received in exchange for the United States bonds issued and sold under the provisions of the refunding act of 1870.

Mr. ALDRICH. There is no refunding act of 1870, that I know of, which authorizes the issue of any bonds.

Mr. PEPPER. The only refunding act we have had was in 1870, July 14, I think.

Mr. ALDRICH. The issues of bonds have been under the act of 1875.

Mr. PEPPER. It does not refer to the resumption act at all.

Mr. ALDRICH. Bonds were issued under the authority of the act of 1875.

Mr. PEPPER. The bonds referred to in the resumption act were the bonds authorized to be issued under the act of 1870.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. PALMER. I wish to ask the Senator from Kansas if it is his purpose to limit his inquiry to the two last issues of bonds?

Mr. PEPPER. No; I do not care anything about that. The last two issues were made ostensibly in pursuance of the resumption act of 1875; but the resumption act of 1875 refers to the bonds that were issued under the provisions of the act of 1870; that is to say, the resumption act simply required, so far as the bonds were concerned, the Secretary of the Treasury to sell such bonds as were authorized under the act of 1870, in order to procure a fund with which to redeem the outstanding Government notes. What this resolution calls for is information as to the kind of money or currency and what amounts of each were received in exchange for bonds which were sold under the provisions of the act of 1870, no matter at what time, with the exception, of course, of the last two issues, which I do not care anything about, but I did not expect those.

Mr. PALMER. I object to the present consideration of the resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection, and the resolution will go over under the rules, and be printed.

COST OF ARMOR PLATES.

Mr. CHANDLER submitted the following resolution: which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Navy be directed to transmit to the Senate a statement showing the prices paid per ton for armor plates for vessels of the Navy, comparing the same with the prices paid by other nations, and also explaining in the Record of January 28, and to inquire whether to American manufacturers for armor plates for other nations.

PRESS-GALLERY PRIVILEGES.

Mr. CHANDLER. I submit a resolution, for which I ask present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Rules be directed to examine the newspaper article recited in the remarks on Saturday last of the senior Senator from Florida, concerning in the Record of January 28, and to inquire whether there has been compliance by the writer of the article any violation of the privileges of the press gallery of the Senate.

Mr. ALDRICH. Let that go over, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection to the present consideration of the resolution, and it will go over under the rule.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 5062) to grant the Gainesville, McAlester and St. Louis Railway Company the right to build two branch lines and to grant the right of way therefor through the Indian Territory, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 5624) to authorize the Oklahoma Central Railroad rather have the information of the Senator from Colorado upon it than to trust my own remembrance.

Mr. WOLCOTT. If the Senator will take all his information from the same source he will make a very short speech.

Mr. VILAS. No doubt the Indians would be very quickly deprived of their rights, too.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, it becomes the duty of the Chair to lay before the Senate the unfinished business, the title of which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 4909) to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. President, I beg to appeal to the Senator from Mississippi that he suspend the bill which has been under consideration to continue in its onward course. We have had a large part of the speech of the Senator from Wisconsin (Mr. VILAS); and if that speech can be finished now I believe the bill can be speedily concluded. There are reasons, as I explained to the Senator and the Senate on Saturday, which make it of great importance not only to the people of Colorado, but to the people of Utah, and of vast importance to the United States, that this question shall be settled.

This bill has passed the House of Representatives, and our only chance to bring about a settlement of this difficulty which has produced so much friction and trouble lies in the passage of some bill at this time. So I ask the Senator from Mississippi if he will not permit this bill to keep its place until it shall be acted upon. I beg to assure him that I believe there is no one to speak at length except the Senator from Wisconsin, and I believe the bill will take but a short time.

Mr. GEORGE. I should like very much to make an agreement which would be satisfactory to the Senator from Colorado, but the bankruptcy bill has been delayed now beyond all expectation. It was one of the first measures which it was expected would be considered at this session. The Nicaragua Canal bill, however, got the right of way. We are now approaching the last month of the session. I do not feel at liberty to make any agreement by which any portion of the time which may be assigned to the bankruptcy bill may be assigned to some other measure, unless there can be an agreement fixing a day and hour at which a final vote will be taken.

Mr. CULLOM. On what?

Mr. GEORGE. On the bankruptcy bill.

Mr. CULLOM. We had better discuss that bill a little while before fixing a time to vote on it.

Mr. ALDRICH. An agreement as to a vote on that bill can not be made at present.

Mr. GEORGE. If such an agreement can be had, then any indulgence I might consent to would not have the effect of postponing, and probably endangering for want of time, the passage of the bankruptcy bill.

Mr. WOLCOTT. May I suggest to the Senator from Mississippi that possibly we may be able to procure from the Senator from Wisconsin and from others interested in the question an agreement that we may vote on the Ute bill at some certain hour in the near future, which would limit the indulgence which is asked for from the Senator from Mississippi, and possibly make him more lenient with respect to letting the bill go through. We shall dispose of it to-day; and I do not think the Senator from Wisconsin will care to stand in the way of an agreement, he having the floor.

Mr. VILAS. Not in the least.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Very well.

Mr. VILAS. I am not obstructing the bill; I am simply striving to engage the attention of the Senate to what seems to me to be its enormity and its injustice.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I appreciate that very much.

Suppose we say 4 o'clock. Will the Senator finish what he has to say probably within an hour?

Mr. VILAS. Easily.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Will the Senator from Mississippi consent to taking a vote at 4 o'clock? The bankruptcy bill can certainly wait until then. If we can get a vote sooner on the Ute bill, of course the bill of the Senator from Mississippi may then be proceeded with.

Mr. TELLER. We may reach a vote sooner.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I hope the Senator from Mississippi will consent that the Ute bill may be voted upon not later than 4 o'clock. We shall certainly reach a vote by that time. That is not long compared to the time which has been devoted to the discussion of many other measures.

Mr. GEORGE. I dislike very much to stand in the way of Senators. Say 3 o'clock.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I should be very glad to say 3 o'clock, but the Senator from Wisconsin has the floor. Will the Senator from Wisconsin say 3 o'clock?

Mr. VILAS. I do not want to say 3 o'clock.

Mr. CULLOM. Better make it 4 o'clock, which will only be two hours.

Mr. HARRIS. Will the Senator say half past 3 o'clock? Mr. VILAS. We can take the bill up to-morrow morning. Mr. WOLCOTT. Let us see, then, with it now, because the Senator from Wisconsin might want to say over again some of the things he has said to-day. [Laughter.]

Mr. VILAS. There are some of them which ought to be said over again until they are heard by all who are interested in this measure.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I think one saying has burned them into our memories. I hope Senators will consent to giving us, say not later than 4 o'clock to-day.

Mr. GEORGE. I ask unanimous consent that the Ute bill be considered to-morrow morning after the routine business.

Mr. HARRIS. I have given notice that I shall ask that a bill very important to the District of Columbia be considered to-morrow morning.

Mr. GEORGE. Then, Mr. President, I decline to enter into any agreement.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Then I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 6592, being the bill which has been under consideration.

Mr. HARRIS. I hope the Senator will not make that motion, because if carried it will displace the bankruptcy bill.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I would say to the Senator from Tennessee that we are willing to make any concession in the world; but here is a bill which, had my request been agreed to, would have but two hours to run, a bill of vast importance to a great section. Everybody agreed to give way to the unanimous consent was given that it should be taken up; and it has not yet robbed the bankruptcy bill of a minute. The bankruptcy bill did not come on until 3 o'clock.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair must remind Senators that the motion is not debatable. The Senator from Colorado moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of a bill the title of which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 6792) to disapprove the treaty heretofore made with the Southern Ute Indians to be removed to the Territory of Utah, and providing for settling them down in severalty where they may so select and are qualified, and to settle all those not electing to take lands in severalty on the west 40 miles of present reservation and in portions of New Mexico, and for other purposes, and to carry out the provisions of the treaty with said Indians June 15, 1880.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Colorado. [Putting the question.] The yeas appear to leave it.

Mr. ALDRICH and Mr. WOLCOTT called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

Mr. VILAS. I understand the adoption of this motion will displace the bankruptcy bill.

Mr. ALDRICH. Is discussion in order, Mr. President?

Mr. VILAS. I am not discussing; I am asking a question. I understand the motion, if adopted, will displace the bankruptcy bill.

Mr. ALDRICH. That has been stated three or four times, and it will paralyze the nature of discussion after a while.

Mr. HARRIS. The parliamentary inquiry which I wish to submit is, What will be the effect of the pending motion if it shall carry?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be a displacement of the present regular order, the bankruptcy bill.

Mr. ALDRICH. I should like to make a parliamentary inquiry. If the Ute bill is disposed of before 4 o'clock the Senator from Mississippi or the Senator from Tennessee or any other Senator may move to take up the bankruptcy bill at that time, and that motion will be in order, will it not?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It certainly will be.

Mr. VILAS. I should like to make a parliamentary inquiry. Is a question in reference to the order of business admissible under this rule made by the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] only, or is it a proper question for any other Senator to ask?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands a parliamentary inquiry made of the Chair to the best of his ability. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DUBOIS (when his name was called). I am present with the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. HOAR (when his name was called). I am present with the junior Senator from Alabama [Mr. DILLON]. I do not know how he would vote on this question if present, and therefore withhold my vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HILL in the chair). The Senator from Washington has not voted.

Mr. DANIEL. I am paired with that Senator, and withhold my vote.

Mr. HOAR (after having voted in the affirmative). I inadvertently voted. I am paired with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PUGH], and withdraw my vote.

So the motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6792) to disapprove the treaty heretofore made with the Southern Ute Indians to be removed to the Territory of Utah, and providing for settling them down in severality where they may so elect and are qualified, and to settle all those not electing to take lands in severality on the west 40 miles of present reservation and in portions of New Mexico, and for other purposes, and to carry out the provisions of the treaty with said Indians June 15, 1880.

Mr. WOLCOTT. When we reached the hour of 2 o'clock the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS] had the floor, and I suppose he desires to proceed.

Mr. VILAS. Mr. President, I do not desire to occupy the attention of the Senate on this bill any longer than is necessary to simply present the facts. The Senator from Colorado has manifested a great deal of confidence that such an understanding has been reached that the bill will be passed no matter what may be the discussion. I desire only to see to it that the facts in relation to the bill as nearly as I can present them to Senate shall be before it, and to enter in that way only my feeble protest against the enactment of so great an injustice.

The proposition to which I was drawing attention was this, that having once treated with the Indians for the exchange of their reservation for another, it is now proposed by the bill to cancel that agreement arbitrarily, and without again submitting to them the question of their assent, to take from them nearly two-thirds of their present reservation for nothing save such moneys as may result from a sale of the land or portions of it to homestead settlers and others.

I was calling attention to the very great injustice of such a proceeding, and had begun to read an article from the Denver Republican on the subject, when we were interrupted by the expiration of the morning hour. I begin again, therefore, that article, for I shall be glad to have Senators see what a newspaper of Colorado says in relation to this exact measure.

There are matters connected with the alleged compromise agreement in relation to the Southern Ute which should be considered with great care before that compromise is given the force of law.

It is proposed to place the Indians in the western part of their present reservation with the addition of a small tract of land lying in New Mexico. If this were done it would throw the greater part of the good land open to settlement. The question of this land is a duty which will be inflicted upon us and it should not be done at the price of an Indian war, which would lay waste a great deal of the southwestern part of the State and paralyze business in that section during the whole of the year.

It should be borne in mind that the Indians are not parties to the agreement to thus dispose of them. They have been waiting impatiently for some six years for an agreement made by their removal to Utah to be carried into effect. Disappointed year after year, they have threatened to go on the war path if this agreement were not enforced. It needs no extensive knowledge of the Indian character to appreciate that they will be ill-willed and incensed if they are told that the agreement for their removal to Utah has been rescinded, and that, instead, they will have a great part of their present reservation taken from them, while they will be forced to settle in one corner, with the addition of a little tract of new arable, which they do not want.

It is to be hoped that war with these Indians will be avoided, but it can not be denied that if this new agreement is adopted it will be against their will, and there will be great danger of conflict. Altogether there are about a thousand Southern Utes, and, counting boys capable of fighting, they could place some 600 warriors on the war path. This force would be enough to terrorize all that part of the State. It seems to be reckless for people in the San Juan region to advocate the adoption of this compromise agreement. It would benefit a few men who want to locate land within the limits of the present reservation, but it would endanger the peace and good order of all the country bordering on that reservation.

Mr. President, I can not show more succinctly than that Colorado newspaper has done the exact condition which will be presented by the enactment of the bill. It is proposed to deny these people the plainest and simplest rights. No doubt we have the force to do it; no doubt we can rob them, and it seems to be assumed that we should do it. Yet I had hoped that so plain a matter as this would receive some consideration at the hands of the Senate of the United States. I remember a year ago or more a dramatic and pathetic appeal made by the distinguished Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] in this body in behalf of his own people, when the law which seemed to be for the interests of the people of the United States was about to be enacted and, as he thought, to the great injury and detriment of his own people.

Mr. TELLER. I think so yet.

Mr. VILAS. The Senate is made of folks so yet. He then pleaded for the rights of the poor, oppressed, and injured people, as he thought they were, of Colorado, and to-day he is ready, as I understand, to fling to the winds the consideration of justice in behalf of the Indians; to take from them the rights which have been guaranteed to them by a treaty of the United States by an act of Congress prescribing their title to those lands; to take those rights from them without tendering them the poor privilege of being heard on the subject, without their assent to strike down an agreement which has been made and in the effort of it to substitute an arbitrary law taking from them what this paper says are the good lands of their reservation for the reason that some of the people in the San Juan region of Colorado desire to settle there.

I know that the Senator from Colorado will deny for an instant any purpose of injustice, but how can these things be done without injustice being inflicted? I would not impute to him or any other Senator the purpose of outraging these Indians. They have no such purpose, but they are seeing only this, that there is a reservation in the way and they wish to remove it from the way; and having tried one course which the dictates of justice commended, having made one agreement which was just in itself, fair to the Indians, and ought to have been executed, and which could not be executed, now, instead of trying to make another in which those people shall have their voice before their lands are taken from them, it is proposed to rob them of their lands by a summary proceeding.

Mr. President, it may be that this is to be done. The Senators say that all that is necessary in order to accomplish the result is that I should cease to protest against it, and that then as soon as the facts are known to the Senate, and the plain consequence is obvious, the evil is about to be inflicted, notwithstanding it is said in this newspaper from Colorado that so obvious and plain is the injustice that the Indians are likely to rise in arms, even a pitiful 400, against the United States.

Mr. FRYE. The PRESIDENTIAL OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Maine?

Mr. VILAS. Certainly.

Mr. FRYE. I am obliged to leave the Chamber for a few minutes, and I should like to ask the Senator from Wisconsin before I go whether the bill has received the consideration of a committee?

Mr. VILAS. I understand the bill has been reported back by the committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. TELLER. Certainly.

Mr. FRYE. The Senator from Wisconsin is not a member of that committee.

Mr. VILAS. No, sir; I am not a member.

Mr. FRYE. Does the Senator know whether the committee were unanimous in relation to it?

Mr. VILAS. I only know from the general remarks of one or two gentlemen on the committee that they did not assent to it. I have paid no attention to that part of the matter.

Mr. FRYE. Does the Senator know whether the side of the Indians was presented before the committee?

Mr. VILAS. I think not.

Mr. PLATT. They were there.

Mr. VILAS. They may have been there when the bill for the approval of the agreement made with them was considered, which was reported favorably by the Indian Affairs Committee, but were they there when this last measure was pending?

Mr. PLATT. I so understand.

Mr. TELLER. And they were favorable to the bill.

Mr. VILAS. I should like to hear about it.

Mr. PLATT. Chief Ignacio was there.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. As some question has arisen about the action of the Committee on Indian Affairs, I should like to trespass upon the attention of the Senate for one minute.

This is an old question and has been a matter of contention for years. The first proposition was that the Indians should be removed from their present location and carried into Utah to a large reservation. Months were spent in undertaking to get an agreement of that sort between the Indians and commissioners on the part of the United States, and that was at last agreed to. After it was agreed to, great complaint was made on the part of some people living in Utah that the Indians ought not to go and they did not want them to come; that they were not anxious to carry them like to move, etc. Conflicting statements were made as to whether the Indians preferred to remain on their present reservation or to move. First it was stated that the Indians were unanimously opposed to going at all. Then it was stated that a majority of them were anxious to go.

In the efforts of the committee to find out what the truth was and to do the best thing that could be done for the Indians, we inquired of everybody we could get before the committee, including these Indians, and we reported some months ago a bill proposing to carry out the original agreement made between the Indians and the Government. With the active opposition that was made to that measure on the part of a number of people claiming to be the friends of the Indians, particularly on the part of the Indian Rights Association, I believe, and others, saying the worst things possible for the Indians would be to send them to Utah, the committee took up this subsequent bill and agreed to its being reported, with the understanding, as I thought, that it was satisfactory to all the Indians and the white people who were concerned, and I supposed it was a solution which would meet the approval of the contending factions in this matter.

Mr. WOLCOTT. This is a House bill. It has passed the other House.

Mr. VILAS. I should like to ask the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] whether any Indians were present when the bill now under consideration was before the committee.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. My impression is that Chief Ignacio, the leading man of the tribe, I understand, was there. I am not positive about that.

Mr. VILAS. Has he been there more than once?

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. He has been there several times.

Mr. VILAS. He was there at the time when the first bill carrying out the agreement was reported. The report speaks of it.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Chief Ignacio and Buckskin Charley and several others were there the first time. A number of the Indians were there at the first investigation. Chief Ignacio, if I am not mistaken, was there alone at the last investigation we had.

Mr. VILAS. Mr. President—

Mr. FRYE. I am sorry I interrupted the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. I will not say positively that it is true, but my impression is he was there. There are so many of these matters before the committee that, of course, I can not carry them in my mind. My impression is he was there and approved of the change.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to say that I believe the Senator from Arkansas is correct. At all events, Ignacio, the leading chief and the only chief who, perhaps, is capable of dealing with these subjects, has approved of it, and is in favor of this change. He preferred the other; but when he found he could not get it, he, like a sensible man, yielded, just as we did.

Mr. VILAS. If it be true that the Indians favor this scheme, then there can be no objection to our tendering them the opportunity to assent to it at least. The amendment which I have proposed requires the assent of only a majority. I am willing that this shall then be carried out. So far as I am concerned I care nothing about it; but, having occupied a position in the Department of the Interior, and afterwards on the Indian Commissions, where the facts in relation to this matter have been forced upon my attention, I have been unwilling to let this bill go against the objection of the Interior Department and the Indian Office without at least laying before the Senate the views of the Department and the facts in respect to it, and, at any rate, my humble, and, I suppose, from what the Senator from Colorado says, fruitless, protest.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I wish to intercept the Senator from Wisconsin long enough to ask him if he does not unintentionally mistake the fact when he says the amendment proposes to leave this matter to a majority of the Indians? I ask him if he has not entirely left out of consideration the Weminuche and provided for a vote of the Capotas and the Moaches?

Mr. VILAS. I have not the amendment before me. It is a long time since it was drawn. There may be an error in respect to it. I am ready to amend it so as to meet that objection. It was intended only to require the assent—

Mr. TELLER. Here it is.

Mr. VILAS. I think the Senator from Colorado who has just put the question to me will see that he is in error. If he will turn to the amendment he will find that it proposes to strike out section 5 of the pending bill and insert the following:

"That the foregoing provisions of this act shall take effect only upon the assent thereof and consent thereto by a majority of all the adult male Indians now located or residing upon that portion of the reservation of the Southern Utes not mentioned in the third section of this act."

Mr. WOLCOTT. That is, you cut off the Indians living in the west end.

Mr. VILAS. They live there now. The two tribes that live on the east end ought to consent to give up their lands.

Mr. TELLER. They all live together.

Mr. VILAS. The Weminuche live on the western end.

Mr. TELLER. They all live at the agency, really.

Mr. VILAS. Those three bands, I understand, live quite separate.

Mr. TELLER. If the Senator will allow me, I will explain the matter to him. There is supposed to be about 1,000 of these Indians. I should say myself there are some less.

Mr. VILAS. Eleven hundred.

Mr. TELLER. There are about 900, in fact.

Mr. TELLER. We have always believed, at least, that there were near a thousand out on the reservation. They ran some of them over into Utah, and probably a good many of them are off the reservation. But the only habitat they have is at the agency in the section that is to be cut off. So really if the Senator desires to do justice he should simply provide that all the Indians should vote on the question.

Mr. VILAS. I am perfectly willing to agree to it. I drew it in that way in order that the friends of the bill might find the least objection to it because it would require the assent of the least number; but I am perfectly willing that all the Indians on the reservation shall be required to give their assent. I will strike out that part of the amendment which limits it.

Now, Mr. President, there is another point in the bill to which I have proposed an amendment. If this is to be a law, let us at least try to make it approximately fair. The bill provides for no disposition of the lands except to homestead settlers or by sale under the coal, mineral, timber, and stone acts, and by being taken up under the desert-land law, if I remember aright. Now, under those laws there would be derived from the sale of the lands not enough in all probability to pay the Indians any very considerable sum of money after the expenses of administration were deducted. Certainly that is true if the Senators from Colorado are right in claiming, contrary to the newspaper there, that the good lands are not in the portion to be opened. There would be no taking of them up by homestead settlers to any great amount unless they were desirable.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Let me correct the Senator for just a moment. Of course, if the great mesas which are now barren and unproductive were opened up, which lie between fertile land at the north and fertile land at the south that can not be utilized because of this Indian reservation in the middle, there would be irrigating ditches, which cost from half a million to a million dollars each. There is the means, and thereby opening up to entry lands which must forever not only remain valueless, but make valueless lands to the north and south of them, while the Indians stay where they are.

Mr. VILAS. There is no doubt that some of those lands could be made valuable by irrigation. A great many of them are valuable now.

Mr. WOLCOTT. None of them.

Mr. VILAS. They ought to be sold, and sold fairly, at public auction, and the proceeds run over to these Indians. I propose as an amendment to this method of disposition simply that the proceeds of these lands shall be obtained according to their value and that the Indians shall have the benefit. Here is a scheme which not only takes away from them their plain, undeniable rights, but it takes away from them even their chances of deriving anything material from the sale of their property.

I can not understand why an unwillingness should be felt to permit them to have the benefit to be derived from a sale. Of course I understand why a great many people may desire to avoid paying for the lands which they will get, taking them up under the homestead law and postponing the day of payment for years and years, or under the desert-land act, or under some of the other acts; but justice to the Indians requires that their lands shall be put up for sale and the proceeds awarded to them.

Now, I stand here against this scheme, I stand here, I suppose, with a reasonable assurance, if I may trust the Senators from Colorado, that it is fruitless task, but it is so plain that we are doing a thing of essential injustice in itself that I am not willing that the bill shall be amended into law with my understanding of the facts, with my knowledge of the history, without some protest on my part. I should ordinarily deter at once to the Senators from Colorado in respect to any measure touching property or affairs in their State in which the honest interests of the United States were not peculiarly concerned, but they have submitted to being defeated in a respectable measure of which they approved as just by the opposition which has been made to it, which I never intend to have prevailed in my judgment, and which has prevailed, if this measure shall pass, only to inflict upon these Indian people an injustice a thousand times more flagrant than that removal which they much desired themselves could possibly have done of injury to them.

Mr. President, I have said all that I desire to say, so far as I am aware of, on this subject. Having presented the matter, I presume the Senator from Colorado will be able to reach a vote without further discussion.

Mr. ALDRICH. Will the Senator from Wisconsin, before he takes his seat, allow me to ask him a question? Was the view of this case which he now presents to the Senate presented to the committee?

Mr. VILAS. I was not before the committee. I had nothing to do with it. I did say to the Senator from Colorado that if the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs had no objection to the passage of this bill I should have no objection and make no objection, because the responsibility for such measures lies upon that Department. Application being made and the subject being considered by the Department of the Interior, the Secretary refused his assent and said this measure ought not to pass. We are to pass it simply because the people interested in obtaining the lands have made a compromise agreement with the Delegate from Utah, who is interested in opposing the transfer of the Indians to the southeastern portion of that Territory, in which I submit I should like to see the Senator (Mr. TELLER) himself, is the fittest for these people to live in of any place in the United States undoubtedly.

Let me add that I would be glad to do to see the Senate take up the bill for the ratification of the treaty that stands here on our Calendar with the unanimous report of the Indian Affairs Committee in favor of it so that we might execute our agreement with these people.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. President, I am at a loss to understand the references which the Senator from Wisconsin from time to time has made to the effect that there was great confidence on the part of the Senators from Colorado that a sufficient vote was secured in the Chamber to pass this measure. Certainly no word or act of mine could have given him that impression. I was of the opinion, after my years of service here, that the majority of the members of this body would naturally follow the unanimous report of one of its important committees. I was of the impression that the majority of the members of this body would vote in favor of the measure. The committee had given the subject consideration and had reported in favor of it; and that impression has ripened into an abiding conviction as I have heard the Senator from Wisconsin attempt to destroy the arguments in support of the bill and proceed by the bill itself.

This Indian question, Mr. President, is not a new one. These Indians came to us from the conquest of Mexico. We found them living in New Mexico, one of the three tribes of the Ute Indians, a blanket of tin, furs and pelts and drove, unwilling to adapt themselves to civilization; on the warpath wherever there was the slightest pretext; difficult of management and impatient of control. We took these Indians in 1878 to southern Colorado, and said to them, "Live along the La Plata River, and if that land were not sufficient to contain them we had lands in New Mexico for that purpose." The lands which were then offered only the lands which are tendered them now and which they are willing to accept.

In 1878 the Indians were temporarily left in this long strip of land 115 miles by 15. In 1879 an outbreak occurred, followed by an outbreak a year later and the Major Thornburg massacre. Then, in the great fight that arose in respect to these Indians, the Uncompagere and the White River Utes were dumped off into Utah, and these Indians were left where they were temporarily, until arrangements could be made for establishing them elsewhere.

the Indians to take allotments is this very act itself, and I should like the Senator to say what it means. What is to be the direction of the Secretary of the Interior by which he is to determine the qualifications?

Mr. TELLER. I do not know. That is left to the Secretary of the Interior, and he will determine, I suppose, if the Indians want to stay there, that they are qualified to remain. I have no doubt he will so determine. He can make no distinction between them, for there is very little distinction which can be made between them. Ignacio, the chief, is a very intelligent man, and was before the committee of the other House when this bill was drafted, and he was consulted by the committee after they had determined that they would not ratify or approve of the treaty which the Senator thinks ought to have been approved, and which I thought at the time ought to have been approved. Yet the chief object of the treaty, but others did object to it, particularly the people of Utah. In the present condition of Utah, soon to become a State, it is apparent that this question will be left open indefinitely if it is not settled in this way.

There is more land in the region to which it is proposed to remove them than the Indians can occupy; it is better land for their purposes than that which they now occupy, for I have no doubt that the present agency at this time there is anywhere from a foot to 3 feet of sand. Almost the entire tribe went down to Utah last fall, when the Government was compelled to send the Army to bring them back. I do not know where they are now, whether they came entirely back to the agency or whether they went into the lower region, the western end of the reservation, but I presume they are in the western end of the reservation today.

I would do no injustice to these Indians. They are the wards of the Government, and they are residents of the State of Colorado. As my colleague has said, they have never received anything but kindness at the hands of the people of that State, and this band of Indians, which has been there for years, has never had any reason to complain of the people of that State. There has been a great deal of friction about their stock running across our line and our stock running across their line. The reservation is on the line of travel, and every wagon that comes out of that great mining district is compelled to traverse it for 35 or 30 miles. On the west end the Indians will be free from that, and they will be free from the temptations to which they are now subjected by irresponsible people who travel through that country, as they must, and no possible method can be adopted which will prevent them from traveling through there.

In my judgment, this is the best scheme which can be devised for those Indians. I believe the intelligent Indians so understand it, though they still prefer to go to Utah. But they can not go to Utah, and there is no use of trying to send them there. You might as well talk about sending them to the State of New York, as to talk of sending them to Utah now. That idea must be abandoned.

I want to resent, not offensively, a statement made by the Senator from Wisconsin, when he said I was willing to do injustice to these people. I deny it. If I believed this was an unfair thing to do, I would not approve of it. The land will be taken by settlers, the money derived from it will go into the Treasury, the Indians will in proper time become the owners of it, and they will become the owners of it long before they will become agriculturists, I am afraid.

Mr. VILAS. Let me ask the Senator from Colorado this question: Have we not invariably heretofore, when a treaty of the United States or an act of Congress established the title of the Indians, proceeded to deal with them by bargain and obtained their consent before we took their lands from them?

Mr. TELLER. We do not take their lands from them. The Senator will bear in mind that every Indian may stay on any acre of that country that he chooses to under this proposed law.

Mr. VILAS. I have already called the attention of the Senator to the fact that under this proposed law no Indian can have an allotment of land, which is permitted to every one of them under the act of 1880, unless the Secretary of the Interior shall find him qualified to conduct agricultural operations; and one of my amendments proposes to give the Indian the right which the Senator from Colorado argues he has.

Mr. TELLER. If the Senator had only confined his objection to questions of that character, we never should have had any trouble. That is not the trouble with the Senator. He proposes to foist upon this bill an entirely new scheme. If he can not trust the Secretary of the Interior, I think I can.

I do not care anything about those words in the bill. They can all stay there; and then you do not take away their lands, but you do with them just as you do with other tribes from whom you bought land by treaty. You give them the proceeds of the land. It has been the policy of this Government, not to sell the land, as the Senator suggests, at public sale and let it get into the hands of speculators, but to maintain it for settlers, and let the settlers pay part cash and the balance later on, that money to be covered into the Treasury. That would be in strict accordance with the arrangement made in the act of 1880 with the Confederate Bands of Utes, where we took land of infinitely more value than this and paid them for it a dollar and a quarter an acre under the treaty we had already made with them. We are dealing with this little band of Utes as to their property exactly as we dealt with the great band of Utes, numbering 3,000, and we give to these Indians the same amount that we gave to the others; and this section of the country is not as valuable, or anything like as valuable, as that of the Confederate Bands which we purchased in 1880.

Mr. VILAS. But, if the Senator will allow me there, it has already been shown by his colleague that these lands possess no value—so he says—for homestead settlement, and there will be no proceeds received from them if we dispose of them under laws which defer the payment.

Mr. TELLER. My colleague has made no such statement. My colleague said that at some of these great mesas the land would not be sold until ditches were built. Ditches precede settlement in that country, and must. There has been $3,000,000 invested in ditches in that section of country, where there was not a man within five or six miles square. You can not have cultivation there without water, and the enterprising people who go there depend upon settlers coming in and taking the land and thus making their enterprise valuable by new settlements. You can not get that land settled otherwise, unless you give it to some great corporation, and it has not been the policy of this Government to give great bodies of lands to corporations, which I myself will never favor.

This land must be left for the homestead settler, who goes upon it, makes his home, and buys water of the ditch company, which has preceded him in the valley, through which the railroad passes, and which is a narrow valley, and not a wide one, like those in some of the older sections of the country. There is some land which will be taken immediately, which is in proximity to mining camps, which will afford a good market for the produce there raised, and every acre of which can be watered by combination among the farmers. The great mesa will not be taken, and will never be cultivated until aggregated capital shall build ditches and carry the water through it. But as my colleague said, it will take a great deal of money to do that. It will take three hundred thousand dollars or more, and I think an estimate has been made even higher than that; but the land to which it is proposed to send these Indians is now prepared for irrigation. I took the pains while in that section to inquire of various citizens as to what would be the cost of getting water into Mancos Valley and another valley, the name of which I do not recall, and the highest estimate any engineer made to me was $10,000. The water, of course, taken from the same river, the Arapahoe, and that $10,000 would irrigate an immense area of country.

I want to say to the Senator now that he is not properly informed as to that country. It has a genial climate. I am speaking now as to the west part of it. The land is lower down toward the end of the valley, though the land in Utah is better than that; but the land is better in the west of the present reservation than the land on which it is proposed to place the Indians in Utah, and the climate is better at that. I do not remember the name of the place at present, but it is a place where there is a large Mormon settlement—but while the climate there is better, the land is not so good.

We found one objection to taking these Indians to Utah was that we should have to buy out a great number of settlers who are there, some of whom are willing to sell and some of whom are not, and that was one cause of the objection to the treaty; but it is utterly impossible to ever hope to send the Indians anywhere else. This New Mexican addition is a good grazing country, though not so good as the Mancos and the other valley, the name of which has slipped my memory at the moment.

This New Mexican region has good springs and good grass, at least I am so told, though I have not any personal knowledge of it. I obtained my information from the Delegate from that Territory, who agreed with me that that would be a valuable place for the raising of cattle and horses. These Indians will not be agriculturists.

My colleague said that while I was Secretary of the Interior I made an arrangement by which 5,000 sheep were purchased for these Indians. About half of them were eaten the first year; but from the remainder, I understand, they have a pretty decent flock of sheep, amounting to a few thousand, and they have a few cattle and a great many horses. The horses and cattle can be kept on the upper end of the reservation, but the sheep I kept in the west end and can be kept in New Mexico. The cattle will be as good as this land, settled, we go there and cultivate this valley, the mining will have produce brought to them at reasonable rates, and the land will be suitable for homes for the agriculturists of the country, where they can get remunerative prices for their crops. Besides all this, a land that is isolated has to save agery and solitude will become the home of happy settlers, the Indian will get the money for his land, and be in a place which, for his purposes, is much better than where he is now, and it will be better for the white man there to close to the mining camps, as elsewhere.

Mr. PLATT. I want to ask one specific question of the Senator from Colorado. These Indians have a few cattle and some sheep. Can they or do they winter these cattle upon that portion of the reservation which it is proposed to cut off?

Mr. TELLER. I do not suppose they ever winter their cattle or their sheep on the east end of that reservation.

Mr. PLATT. Can they winter them on the west end, the end toward New Mexico?

Mr. TELLER. They can, and that is where they do winter them generally. They take their cattle every year and go to the west end, and from there down into Utah. They will continue to do that until the settlers drive them out of Utah. There is a portion of Utah adjoining their reservation which they will occupy for years as a pasture, because there can be no settlement made, as no water can be got on those high table lands. They will have the advantage of a run into the Territory of Utah, which the people of Utah will not complain of, unless the Indians are permanently settled there. They will have some opportunities in Utah which they have not now, because of their proximity to the east end of the Indian reservation along the line of the railroad.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS].

Mr. TELLER. Let the amendment be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The SECRETARY. It is proposed, in lines 4 and 5 of section 2, to strike out the words "as may elect and be considered by him qualified to take the same" and insert "as may not decline to accept such allotment in the manner hereinafter provided."

Mr. VILAS. I will only observe in reference to that amendment that it would put the right of these Indians precisely where the senior Senator from Colorado argues that it is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment.

Mr. VILAS. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. TELLER. I would suggest to the Senator that he does not wish to strike out the words "as may elect." Those words belong in the bill:

Such of the Southern Ute Indians in Colorado as may elect.

I suppose the Senator merely desires to strike out the words:

And be considered by him qualified to take the same.

Mr. VILAS. Yes; but this comes to the same thing. The act of 1880 gives the Indians a specific vested right in the land. If they shall decline to accept the allotment—I put it in that way—that amounts to an election; it means the same thing, and so far as the manner of election is concerned either way, only that the Secretary of the Interior ought to have a declination from the Indian who has a specific grant under the treaty and the act of Congress before he refuses to allow any land.

Mr. PLATT. I ask that the Secretary now state the amendment and the section as it will read if the amendment prevails.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In lines 4 and 5, section 2, it is proposed to strike out the words "as may elect and be considered by him qualified to take the same" and insert "as may not decline to accept such allotment in the manner hereinafter provided;" so as to read:

Sec. 2. That within six months after the passage of this act the Secretary of the Interior shall cause allotment of land in severalty to be made to such of the Southern Ute Indians in Colorado as may not decline to accept such allotment in the manner hereinafter provided out of the agricultural lands embraced in their present reservation in Colorado, etc.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to know how the Indians could decline to take the land. That is very indefinite.

Mr. PLATT. That is what I was going to ask.

Mr. VILAS. It is very easy for the Secretary of the Interior to provide for that by regulation.

Mr. PLATT. But that he does not require it.

The Secretary provided to call the roll.

Mr. CAMERON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER].

Mr. COKE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH].

Mr. DANIEL (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Washington [Mr. SQUIRE], otherwise I should vote "yea."

Mr. McLAURIN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON]. I have arranged to transfer the pair to the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH], which will allow the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS] and me to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. WILSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON], and therefore withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have a general pair with the Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS]. I will transfer my pair to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. JOHNSON], and vote "aye."

Mr. DAVIS. I am paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIN].

Mr. CAREY. I am paired with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. MITCHELL]. Were he present I should vote "nay."

Mr. McMILLAN. I inquire whether the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BLANCHARD] has voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not voted. Mr. McLAURIN. I am paired with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BLANCHARD], but I transfer my pair to my colleague [Mr. BURROWS] and vote. I vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 12, nays 32; as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. Add, at the end of section 2, "and as hereinafter further provided."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS].

Mr. VILAS. That amendment naturally goes with the one which has just been rejected.

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. Amend section 3 by striking out, in line 2, the words "not elect or be deemed qualified," and inserting "decline;" so as to read:

That for the sole and exclusive use and occupancy of such of said Indians as may decline to take allotment of land in severalty, as provided in the present section, there shall be, and is hereby, set apart and reserved all that portion of their present reservation, etc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS].

Mr. VILAS. That also goes with the other amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. Strike out section 4 and insert in lieu thereof:

Sec. 4. That after allotment shall be made of the lands in said reservation, as herein provided, to such of said Indians as shall not decline to take the same, the Secretary of the Interior shall, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, and after public advertisement in not less than three newspapers in the State of Colorado for a period of six weeks, offer for sale public lands and all of the adjacent Indian lands which shall have been allotted, as aforesaid, and are reserved by this act. Not more than 100 acres shall be sold to these persons, and payment therefor shall be made at the option of the purchaser, either wholly in cash or one-third in cash and the remainder in three equal annual installments with interest at 6 per cent per annum. Upon full payment being made, patents shall be issued to the purchaser, and the lands, and until such payment shall be made in full, a certificate shall be issued to the purchaser expressing the terms of the sale and providing for the issuance of the patent when full payment shall be made. Out of the proceeds of the sale of the lands, subject to the disposition of Congress in the execution of said trust, Provided, That before said lands shall be exposed to sale the Secretary of the Interior shall cause any improvements belonging to and on said lands on the lands now occupied by them to be appraised, and make such lands shall be made for less than the appraised value of such improvements, and those shall be paid to the Indians owning the same by the amount of such appraisement out of the proceeds of said sale of any tract upon which such improvement may be.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS].

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. Strike out section 5 of the bill and insert in lieu thereof:

Sec. 5. That the foregoing provisions of this act shall take effect only upon the acceptance thereof and consent thereto by a majority of all the adult male Indians now located or residing upon that portion of the reservation of the Southern Utes not mentioned in the third section of this act, which acceptance and consent shall be obtained in the manner hereinafter provided, and shall be made known by proclamation of the President of the United States upon satisfactory proof thereof being presented to him, which proof shall be presented to him within one year from the passage of this act; and upon failure of such proof and proclamation this act shall be of no effect and null and void.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS].

Mr. VILAS. On that amendment, unless it is accepted by the Senator from Colorado, I shall ask for the yeas and nays. I wish to modify the amendment by striking out, in line 2, on page 4 of the printed amendments, the words "that portion of" and, in line 3, by striking out "not mentioned in the third section of this act," so that it shall read:

That the foregoing provisions of this act shall take effect only upon the acceptance thereof and consent thereto by a majority of all the adult male Indians now located or residing upon the reservation of the Southern Utes, which acceptance, etc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin as modified.

Mr. VILAS. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CAREY (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. MITCHELL]. Were he present I should vote "nay."

Mr. COKE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DODGE].

Mr. DUBOIS (when his name was called). Under the arrangement made on the last vote, by which the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH] is paired with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON], I will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. MORGAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY].

Mr. WILSON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON]. I do not see him in his seat, and therefore withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HARRIS (after having voted in the affirmative). I rise to inquire whether the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL] is recorded as voting.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He is not.

Mr. HARRIS. I withdraw my vote. I am paired with the senior Senator from Vermont.

Mr. McMILLAN. Under the same arrangement heretofore made, transferring my pair with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BLANCHARD] to my colleague [Mr. BURROWS], I will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. MANDERSON. My vote will probably be needed to make a quorum. I therefore transfer my pair with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN] to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES], who is absent unpaired, and will vote. I vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 13, nays 31; as follows:

YEAS—13		Walsh.

So the amendment was rejected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The next amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin will be stated.

Mr. VILAS. I should like to modify my amendment so as to correspond with the other, which was just voted on by striking out, in line 2, page 3, the words "that portion of" and inserting "the," and by striking out, after the word "reservation," in the first line on page 5, the words "not reserved in section 5."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin as modified will be read.

The SECRETARY. Add at the end of the bill the following as a new section:

SEC. 6. That should it appear to the President of the United States that it is expedient to accept of the reservation of the Southern Utes, which shall be obtained in the manner hereinafter provided, and shall be made known by proclamation of the President of the United States upon satisfactory proof thereof being presented to him, which proof shall be presented to him within one year from the passage of this act; and upon failure of such proof and proclamation this act shall be of no effect and null and void.

That the foregoing provisions of this act shall take effect only upon the acceptance thereof and consent thereto by a majority of all the adult male Indians now located or residing upon the reservation of the Southern Utes, which acceptance, etc.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin as modified.

The question being put, there were on a division—yeas 10, nays 22; no quorum voting.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. No quorum voting, the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Allen,	Frye,	Lodge,	Pritchard,
Bate,	Gallinger,	McLaurin,	Proctor,
Blanchard,	George,	McMillan,	Sherman,
Caffery,	Gibson,	Manderson,	Stewart,

Callum,	Hill,	Pasco,	Wilson,
Davis,	Huntton,	Pfeffer,	Wolcott,
Dubois,	Irby,	Pottierew,
Faulkner,	Kyle,	Power,

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Forty-six Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. A division is called for on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. HARRIS. I suggest that the demand for the division may be withdrawn and the vote taken viva voce.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope we shall do that instead of having a ye-a-and-nay vote.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there be no objection that course will be pursued. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS].

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If no further amendment is to be proposed as in Committee of the Whole, the bill will be reported to the Senate.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I desire to offer an amendment which simply changes the title in a section. There is a misreference. I want to refer to the law of 1890. A law of another date is referred to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 2, beginning in the middle of line 9, strike out the words "An act to provide for the allotment of lands in severalty to Indians on the various reservations, and to extend the protection of the laws of the United States and to the Territories over the Indians, and for other purposes," and insert in lieu thereof the following:

An act to accept of and reserve the reservation of the Southern Utes of the State of Colorado for the use of the Indians of that State, and for other purposes, and to make the necessary appropriations for carrying out the same.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be passed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is: Shall the bill pass? Mr. VILAS. I ask for the yeas and nays upon the passage of the bill.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DANIEL (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Washington [Mr. SQUIRE].
Mr. DUBOIS (when his name was called). I again announce the pair of the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH] with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON]. I vote "yea."
Mr. HANSBROUGH (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. PALMER].

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL].
Mr. McLAURIN (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON] the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH] by agreement with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DIXON]. I vote "yea."

Mr. MANDERSON (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN] to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES] and vote "yea."

Mr. MORGAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY].

Mr. PETTIGREW (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from West Virginia [Mr. CAMPDEN]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.
Mr. HARRIS. I suggest to the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH] that he and I transfer our respective pairs so that both of us can vote.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I have no objection.
Mr. HARRIS. I record my vote "nay."
Mr. HANSBROUGH. I vote "yea."

Mr. FRYE (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN], who is detained to-day from the Chamber in the room of the Committee on Appropriations. I have voted for the reason that these are in no sense political questions and as my vote is needed to make a quorum.

Mr. CAREY (after having voted in the affirmative). I am paired with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. MITCHELL]. I voted inadvertently. I desire to withdraw my vote. If my vote is necessary to make a quorum I can vote.

The result was announced—yeas 36, nays 12; as follows:

YEAS—36.

Aldrich,	Frye,	Jones of Ark.,	Platt,
Allen,	Gallinger,	Kyle,	Power,

So the bill was passed.
Mr. WOLCOTT. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments. The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. JONES of Arkansas, Mr. ROACH, and Mr. PETTIGREW were appointed.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS IN WASHINGTON, WYOMING, ETC.

Mr. CAREY. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 2214) authorizing the purchase of sites for public buildings in the city of Spokane, Wash.; in the city of Cheyenne, Wyo.; in Boise City, Idaho, and in the city of Helena, Mont. There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. CAREY. I have an amendment to offer in the nature of a substitute, which I suggest be read instead of the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the proposed substitute will be read.

The SECRETARY. Strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill and insert:

To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to select, designate, and procure, by purchase or otherwise, suitable sites and for the commencement of the construction of public buildings thereon in the city of Spokane, Wash.; in the city of Cheyenne, the capital of Wyoming; in Boise City, the capital of Idaho; in the city of Helena, the capital of Montana; there is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $100,000. Each of said sites shall contain at least 16,000 square feet of ground, shall have an open space around the building to be erected thereon, including streets and alleys, of at least 40 feet; and neither of said sites shall cost in excess of $25,000.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY]. The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLEN. I move to amend the bill by inserting the cities of Norfolk and Hastings, Neb., in the descriptive part, increasing the sum appropriated to $150,000.

Mr. DUBOIS. I ask the attention of the Senator from Nebraska just a moment. There have been several efforts made to pass this bill. It was agreed to by the Appropriations Committee of the Senate the last time on the ground that none of the three new States named has a public building at all. It provides for the erection of a public building at the capitals of each of those States, where there are so many United States officers. I trust the Senator from Nebraska will not load it down by proposing to provide for public buildings in another State where they have public buildings, and where there is not a necessity so great as there is in these States. It will be a saving to the Government to erect these buildings. There is no objection to it. The bill was beaten the last time because it was loaded down by amendments. I trust the Senator from Nebraska will present a separate measure and not seek to amend this bill.

Mr. ALLEN. I have not the slightest desire to defeat this bill. I have for some time been attempting to procure the establishment of public buildings at Norfolk and Hastings, in Nebraska, where by existing law Federal court is required to be held twice a year and where thousands of litigants are deprived of the benefits of the proximity of a court in consequence of the failure to construct the proper buildings. Thus litigants in my State are required to travel from 300 to 350 miles, in many instances, to attend sessions of the Federal court in the city of Omaha and the city of Lincoln, which are in the southeastern portion of the State. It amounts to a practical denial of justice so far as a great many of them are concerned.

I have no desire to defeat this bill and I do not think that the amendment I propose will have that effect. I think, however, while the Government is purchasing sites for the erection of Federal buildings it might just as well purchase sites at these two places, which are designated by existing law as places for holding of Federal court.

Mr. CAREY. Mr. President, the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds agreed that the new States in which there are no public buildings should be allowed a public building so far as that committee could permit it. This bill provides for an appropriation of only $100,000 for the four buildings, for procuring sites and for the commencement of the buildings. The Committee on Appropriations of this body found a precedent for putting on the appropriation bill a public building at the capital of a State. Three of the States named in the bill have no public buildings. The State of Washington has a custom-house building somewhere on the coast.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. At Port Townsend.

Mr. CAREY. At Port Townsend. So the two committees have agreed, and at the last session of Congress it was agreed by a vote of this body that these four new States were entitled each to a public building. It is probably not in order to give these four new States each a public building of moderate size. I beg the Senator from Nebraska to withdraw his amendment, as it would probably defeat the measure. There are a number of fine public buildings in the State of Nebraska. These new States are, I think, entitled to this consideration. I believe if the amendment should be put on the Capital it would defeat the measure at the other end of the Capitol.

Mr. BATE. Mr. President, I do not know that I shall oppose the proposition of the bill, but it is rather unusual, it seems to me, for four or five localities to unite together for a common sum—$100,000 is the sum here—and then divide it out and say that $25,000 shall be given for a public-building site at one place and $25,000 for a site at another. It is a bad precedent. I believe in letting every tub stand on its own bottom. If there is merit in any one of these propositions let it stand alone and be acted on. I do not propose to oppose appropriations for public buildings in States where, but this combination is not a good one. I do not like this apparent logrolling to get a measure through. I do not like it in this case, but let each measure stand on its own merits.

Mr. HARRIS. Do I understand from the Senator from Wyoming that his substitute is recommended by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds?

Mr. CAREY. It was voted unanimously by that committee as a matter of simple justice to these States.

Mr. HARRIS. Has that committee taken any action on the subject-matter of the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska; and, if so, what?

Mr. ALLEN. Not that I know of.

Mr. KYLE. Are the public buildings to be located at the capitals of several States?

Mr. CAREY. They are. I wish to call the attention of the Senator from Tennessee to a fact. It does not provide that $25,000 shall be expended; the matter is in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior; but the provision is that he shall not expend more than $25,000 for a site. In two of the places $25,000 will be abundant, and in the other places it will probably not require $25,000 either to condemn sites or procure them by purchase. It is a very small amount of money, and I think the Senate can well permit these young States to have these public buildings.

Mr. ALLEN. I have not the slightest desire to defeat this bill, or to prevent any State from having public buildings, nor do I believe the amendment which I have offered will have that effect. I only want to emphasize the fact that in the State of Nebraska a large portion of our people are practically denied the privilege of litigating causes in the Federal courts in consequence of the remoteness of the courts from them. Three or four years ago my colleague can probably tell the time better than I can—an act was passed by Congress requiring that terms of the Federal court should be held at the cities of Norfolk and Hastings. We have now mere nominal terms of court there. The judge comes in the morning, enters a few orders, adjourns the court, and returns to his home. There is no jury and none of the ordinary privileges of litigation, and people residing at Chadron, a distance of nearly 60 miles from the city of Omaha, are compelled to go to the city of Omaha for the purpose of litigating their causes. Those who can not reach the Federal court there are practically denied justice, and that, too, in a country which is in great financial difficulties.

I should be perfectly willing, if Senators would agree to it, to increase this appropriation $15,000, letting $7,500 be expended in the purchase of sites in each of these cities, or as much of that sum as might be necessary, under proper protection by the proper courts. I do not think that the Senate would find that a disagreeable appropriation; it is very small, and I think it would pass through the House of Representatives without any trouble.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN].

The amendment was rejected.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

UNIFORM SYSTEM OF BANKRUPTCY.

Mr. GEORGE. I move to take up the bill (H. R. 4609) to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. ALDRICH. Pending that motion, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. GEORGE. What has become of my motion?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Pending the motion of the Senator from Mississippi, the Senator from Rhode Island moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. GEORGE. Will not the Senator from Rhode Island allow a vote to be taken on my motion?

Mr. PLATT (to Mr. GEORGE). You do not want to proceed with the bill to-night?

Mr. GEORGE. I should like to have it taken up.

Mr. ALDRICH. I think I should have no objection personally to making the bill moved by the Senator from Mississippi the unfinished business at 2 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. GEORGE. That is what I want. Let it be made the unfinished business for 2 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. ALDRICH and Mr. PLATT. That is all right.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

Mr. HARRIS. Is it understood that the bankruptcy bill becomes the unfinished business for to-morrow?

Mr. PLATT. Yes; at 2 o'clock.

Mr. HARRIS. That is what I wish to understand. Is such the understanding of the chair?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The chair understands that the bill will be the unfinished business for 2 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. HARRIS. If that is certain that is all I wish to know. Then I am ready for the Senate to proceed to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. ALDRICH. I renew my motion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After twelve minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 4 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, January 29, 1895, at 12 o'clock m.

ing for the consular inspection of immigrants before embarkation. As the bill is now in conference, I move that the petitions lie on the table.

Mr. BATE presented resolutions adopted by the Central Labor Union of Nashville, Tenn., favoring an appropriation for the Tennessee Centennial Exposition; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. HILL. I present some resolutions passed by the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York. On account of the high standing of this organization, being one of the oldest in the country, having been organized in 1768, and owing to other considerations, without asking that the report which accompanies the resolutions shall be read, I simply ask that the resolutions themselves be read and referred to the Committee on Finance.

There being no objection the resolutions were read, as follows:

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK.

(Founded A. D. 1768.)

At a special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, held January 24, 1895, the following report and resolutions of its committee on finance and currency on the national finances were adopted with but one dissenting vote:

Resolved, That this chamber is heartily in accord and sympathy with the prompt determination of the President of the United States to continue the sale of bonds to an extent as may be required for the redemption of the Treasury, even if he is forced to sell such bonds at a price out of proper value, and the high credit which this nation is entitled to in the markets of the world.

Resolved, That we respectfully urge upon Congress the necessity for prompt action in giving to the Secretary of the Treasury power to meet all the obligations of the Government and to maintain all the money of the people on a basis by authorizing the issue of bonds in sufficient amounts to cover all such needs, and we call attention to the paralysis of the industries of the country, mainly caused by the distrust existing as to our determination to uphold the integrity of our currency. This distrust we believe can not be removed without the enactment as is proposed, to be followed by a thorough revision of our laws relating to the currency of the country.

Resolved, That in our judgment there should no longer be left any doubt in the minds of the people at home and abroad, as to the intention of our Government in regard to the currency, and we believe that it is our duty and we therefore urge that the bonds if issued shall be made payable in principal and interest, in gold coin of the weight and fineness now fixed by law.

Resolved, That the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, through its membership, is in close touch and sympathy with the industrial classes of the United States, and these classes are all who are engaged in producing, distributing, and reemploying, productively, our enormous annual increment.

Resolved, That in the judgment of this chamber the interests of all these persons, and, through them, of all others, will be promoted by a better money system than that now existing, but that the subject of monetary reform is so intricate in its nature and its relation to the money of the country is so intimate and at the same time so delicate no change should be made in the money of the country without the most thorough examination in all its bearings, and this chamber deprecates any legislation affecting the currency until the report of a commission by a competent and responsible commission, selected from those of our citizens who by practical experience and special study and aptitude are best qualified to point out such measures as will upon trial prove to be permanently practicable, as well as capable of equitable adjustment to the business relations now existing.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this chamber that immediate provision should be made by Congress for the creation of such a commission, in order that they may be ready to report at the regular session of the Fifty-fourth Congress.

Resolved, That the foregoing report and resolutions be presented to both Houses of Congress, and copies of the same sent to the President of the United States and to the members of his Cabinet.

A true copy.

Ordered, That the papers relating to Senate bill 991, granting a pension to David Roche, in the Fifty-second Congress, be withdrawn from the files of the Senate, under the rules of the Senate.

PROPOSED FINANCIAL LEGISLATION.

Mr. MANDERSON. Mr. President, I desire to introduce a resolution, which I shall take the privilege of reading, and shall then ask the Senate for its immediate consideration. I make that request for speedy action because I believe that time is of great importance, of the very essence of result, and, perhaps by reading the resolution, I can make it clearly understood so that the necessity for its printing may be obviated.

Mr. President, the time is a most critical one, and that fact is recognized by all observers. This country seems to be in the throes of great disaster, and the minds of all men, without distinction of party, are actively engaged in seeking some way out of our financial difficulty. I do not pretend to any special knowledge on matters of finance, and on fiscal matters am better fitted to follow than to lead. I do believe, however, that I have good judgment and a fair amount of common sense, and that possession drives me to the conclusion that at this time no man's particular views upon finance can obtain. As the Senate is now organized, and under its present rules, if anything is to be done there must come an adjustment of conflicting views; there must come a giving and taking as to financial subjects; and unless that is done, unless there is mutual forbearance and that coming together for the common good that should prompt all, the result will be that this session of Congress will pass away without financial legislation. The necessity for it is so great that all people demand it; that we have daily presented to the two Houses of Congress resolutions of boards of trade and chambers of commerce. This morning there was read at the Secretary's desk a proposition for a national commission, the suggestion emanating from that great body of financiers and sound business men who

Mr. HILL. Does the mere fact that its principal place of business is to be in the District of Columbia change the general nature and character of the bill?

Mr. HUNTON. I think it does.

Mr. BATE. Mr. President, it is very evident that there is much doubt in regard to the matter, and it seems to me that it is one of the cases that should go to the Judiciary Committee. That is the motion of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. Doctors will differ; doctors of law and teachers of constitutional law and the construction of the Constitution differ very widely here, and the Committee on the Judiciary is a sort of common arbiter by which the proposition must be settled. I think the motion made by the Senator from Delaware is a very proper one. I agree with him that according to the reading of the bill it is intended to extend beyond the District of Columbia, and such being the object of the bill, according to its very language, we think it unconstitutional; that we have no right to pass it, and no right to take cognizance of it.

I, for one, do not desire to see such a precedent set. It is true it creates nothing more than an organization of horticulturists and florists, but we must remember, sir, that many a serpent is coiled beneath the rose. I think it may be so here. So I think it is better that the matter should go to the Committee on Judiciary and let the committee say whether we have the constitutional right to pass such legislation. I agree with the Senator from Delaware that we should preserve these rights and follow the line of the Constitution, but if there is any doubt about it let us get all the light we can from the committee. Therefore, I shall urge that the bill be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, there can be no doubt that Congress can legislate upon any subject within and for the District of Columbia as to which any State legislature can legislate for its State; and that Congress can create a corporation—that is, an artificial person—and clothe it with power to transact a given class or classes of business. The corporation derives its existence from the act of Congress, strictly constitutional, legitimate, and proper, but when it enters the domain of any one of the States of the Union it must get that domain as every other artificial or natural person enters it, according to the laws of that State.

Now, I do not remember the precise provisions of the bill in question, but if the bill goes no further than the creation of a corporation, clothing it with certain powers to do certain things, it creates an entity, it creates an artificial person who may go anywhere, but it goes subject to the laws of the State or the country in which it goes.

Mr. GRAY. I should like to inform the Senator from Tennessee. I do not suppose he has looked at the proposed act—

Mr. HARRIS. I have not.

Mr. GRAY. That there is one provision in it which I think he will agree with me is utterly out of place in the charter of such a corporation as is proposed here; that is, it attempts to give authority to hold real and personal property in any State or Territory.

Mr. PROCTOR. Mr. President, it hardly seems to me that this is a bill of magnitude enough to draw the constitutional line upon it. I have a list of precedents, and I see among them a national association for the relief of destitute colored women and children; a national gallery and school of arts, and various others. I am sure Senators will all agree that the purpose of the bill is a worthy one, and the measure itself shows upon its face that the parties in interest represent a great many different States. They are scattered, and the organization can not well have any local habitation except here in Washington. They desire to make this city their headquarters. It is a measure to stimulate a semiagricultural industry and encourage a diversity of agricultural pursuits.

Mr. GRAY. There is no question about the worthiness of the object.

Mr. PROCTOR. There is a provision that the society may hold real estate which is bequeathed to them. I have no objection, if that will meet the objection of the Senator from Delaware, to striking out that provision.

Mr. GRAY. The language is, "donated or bequeathed in any State or Territory."

Mr. PROCTOR. "Donated or bequeathed in any State or Territory." If the Senator makes a point upon that provision and if its omission will remove his objection, I will move to strike out those words.

Mr. GRAY. That would remove an objection, of course, but I think the Senator from Vermont will not be delayed much if he will allow the Judiciary Committee to report back a bill, as it can do very easily, which will be exempt from any objection at all.

Mr. DANIEL. I ask the Senator from Delaware not to get the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE], the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PUGH], and the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] to talking about this great constitutional question on the pending bill. It will certainly end the bill. The Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR] is willing to have the words which the Senator from Delaware objects to stricken out; and it seems to me that ought to satisfy the Senator from Delaware that the bill to incorporate a society of florists will do for country and the Constitution no possible harm.

Mr. HUNTON. I move to amend the bill by striking out in section 1, in lines 29 and 30, the words:

And such other estate as may be donated or bequeathed in any State or Territory.

When that is done, in my opinion, the bill will be freed from any possible objection.

Mr. PROCTOR. I have no objection to the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. HUNTON] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In section 1, line 29, after the word "dollars," strike out:

And such other estate as may be donated or bequeathed in any State or Territory.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GRAY. I should like to have a vote on my motion to refer the bill to the Judiciary Committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY] to refer the pending bill to the Judiciary Committee.

The motion was not agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PROCTOR. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. RANSOM, Mr. PEPPER, and Mr. PROCTOR were appointed.

DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. BLACKBURN. By instruction of the Committee on Appropriations I report back with amendments the bill (H. R. 8234) making appropriations for the diplomatic and consular service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, and submit a report thereon. I ask that the bill, together with the report, may be printed, and I give notice to the Senate that I shall at an early day call it up for consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar, and it will be printed, with the report, under the rule.

ARTHUR CONNELL.

Mr. DANIEL. I ask the Senate to consider the bill (S. 2203) for the relief of Arthur Connell.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, in section 1, line 6, after the word "thousand," to strike out "four hundred" and insert "and fifty;" so as to make the section read:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Arthur Connell, now a resident of Lynchburg, Va., the sum of $2,500, the said amount having been allowed by the Treasury centre of the United States Treasury, and by the said Arthur Connell in Memphis, Tenn., and by them turned over to the Treasury Department.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HEIRS OF MRS. CATHERINE P. CULVER.

Mr. PASCO. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate take up the bill (H. R. 684) for the relief of the heirs of the late Mrs. Catherine P. Culver.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments.

The first amendment was, in line 1, after the words "pay to" to strike out "Charles P. Culver, husband," and insert "the heirs," and in line 5, after the name "Culver," to strike out "or his lawful representative," so as to read:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay, to the heirs of the late Mrs. Catherine P. Culver, the sum of $100,000, the said amount having been allowed by the committee on the domicile of the party now renders it unnecessary. The second amendment, however, is to be acted on.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be withdrawn. The next amendment of the Committee on Claims was, in line 6, before the word "hundred," to strike out "eight" and insert

"five;" and in the same line, after the word "hundred," to strike out "and forty," so as to make the bill read:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and required to pay Charles C. Culver, husband of the late Mrs. Catherine Culver, or his lawful representative, the sum of $900, as compensation for the translation from the German of House Miscellaneous Document No. 8, Forty-fifth Congress, third session, made by order of the chairman and Committee on Coins, Weights, and Measures.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MARYLAND AND WASHINGTON RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (S. 3261) to amend an act entitled "An act to incorporate the Maryland and Washington Railway Company," approved August 1, 1892, and for other purposes.

Mr. HILL. That is an important bill. I think it had better go over.

Mr. FAULKNER. It is not a very important bill. It simply permits an electric railroad to come into the city on the line of another railroad which runs from Baltimore to Washington. That is all. The company has been incorporated.

Mr. HILL. I should like to look at the bill.

Mr. FAULKNER. The company has been incorporated, and the bill merely enlarges the scope of the original act.

Mr. HILL. I wish to examine the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection.

CLAIMS AGAINST THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. HUNTON. I ask unanimous consent to call up for consideration the bill (S. 2165) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the settlement of all outstanding claims against the District of Columbia and conferring jurisdiction on the Court of Claims to hear the same and for other purposes," approved June 16, 1890.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That in the adjudication of claims brought under the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide for the settlement of all outstanding claims against the District of Columbia, and conferring jurisdiction on the Court of Claims to hear the same, and for other purposes," approved the 16th of June, 1890, Statutes at Large, page 103, claims shall allow the rates established and paid by the board of public works; and whenever said rates have not been allowed the claimant or his personal representative shall be paid, on motion made within sixty days after the passage of this act, to a new trial of such cause.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CITIZENS' BANK OF LOUISIANA.

Mr. CAFFERY. I ask unanimous consent to call up the resolution to refer the bill for the relief of the Citizens' Bank of Louisiana to the Court of Claims.

Mr. CHANDLER. I object to the present consideration of the resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection.

INTERCHANGEABLE MILEAGE TICKETS.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 3291, known as the commercial travelers bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Maryland asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 3291) to amend section 23 of an act to regulate commerce, as amended March 2, 1890.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to amend section 23 of the act to regulate commerce by adding thereto a provision that nothing in that act shall prevent the issuance of joint interchangeable 5,000-mile tickets, with special privileges as to the amount of free baggage that may be carried under mileage tickets of 1,000 or more miles.

Mr. MANDERSON. It was a little difficult to follow the bill as it was read. I should like to ask the Senator from Maryland whether the bill proposes to make the issue of interchangeable mileage tickets, good the country over, compulsory upon any railroad.

Mr. GORMAN. It does not. It merely permits the railroads to issue such tickets. It is thought that practically it does not change in any particular the law as it is to-day, but a question has arisen as to whether the railroad companies can issue the tickets. They desire to do it, and in fact they are doing it now.

Mr. MANDERSON. I know some of the roads do issue such tickets.

Mr. GORMAN. It is only to make the right to issue them perfectly clear.

Mr. CHANDLER. I desire to state to the Senator from Nebraska that these tickets may be purchased by everybody.

Mr. GORMAN. Yes; by everybody.

Mr. MANDERSON. I understand that. My own idea was that the interstate-commerce law did not prohibit the sale of interchangeable mileage tickets; that it was permissible under the law, and that the Interstate Commerce Commission had recognized the fact. I understand from the Senator from Maryland that some of the railroad companies doubt their power to issue these tickets, and the bill is simply for the purpose of granting that power to them, but it does not compel them to issue such tickets.

Mr. GORMAN. That is all there is in it.

Mr. MANDERSON. I can see no possible objection to it.

Mr. TURPIE. There has been a construction by the Commission against what appeared to be the tenor of the interstate-commerce act in this respect, and for the purpose of correcting what I regard as an error in construction, or what may be regarded as such, the bill was introduced.

Mr. MANDERSON. I have no objection to the bill. I simply desired to know whether it was compulsory.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INSPECTION OF LIVE CATTLE, ETC.

Mr. PEPPER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 7910) to amend "An act for the inspection of live cattle, hogs, and the carcasses and products thereof, which are the subjects of interstate commerce, and for other purposes."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kansas asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill which will be read for information.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. BATE. This seems to be a very important bill. I object to its consideration this evening.

Mr. HILL. What committee reported the bill?

Mr. PEPPER. It was reported by the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. It is a bill in relation to the inspection of cattle. The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BATE] is a member of the committee, and I think is familiar with the bill.

Mr. BATE. I know about it. There has been a very grave question raised as to where our jurisdiction commences. I do not remember what occurred before the committee, but I know there was some opposition to it. I think it is a very grave question to come up this evening. I do not like to object to the bill called up by the Senator from Kansas, but certainly it does seem to me that with the Senate as thin as it is and being late in the evening such a bill ought not to be considered.

Mr. PEPPER. I think the Senator from Tennessee will remember the circumstances in connection with the bill when I call his attention to the fact that several different amendments were proposed by different persons outside of the committee, and one of them was brought to the committee by a representative of the Secretary of Agriculture. Dr. Salmon himself prepared the amendment which was agreed upon by the committee when the Senator from Tennessee was present.

Mr. BATE. I remember some amendments to the bill, but I do not think they received the unanimous assent of the committee. I think the right to object was reserved. It is a very grave question, though not a big one. I am myself ready to act on the bill this evening, but I suggest to the Senator from Kansas that it is a question which involves a good deal, and it might give rise to some debate. This evening is certainly not a good time to take it up, as there are so few Senators here.

Mr. GRAY. We can not pass the bill now.

Mr. HILL. Ought not the bill to go to the Committee on Interstate Commerce?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. PLATT. Looking around upon the seats which are provided for Senators here, I am inclined to think it will be necessary for me to make a suggestion if bills are to be pressed upon the consideration of the Senate this evening.

Mr. GORMAN. Will the Senator from Connecticut yield to me?

Mr. PLATT. Certainly.

Mr. GORMAN. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 27 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, January 30, 1895, at 12 o'clock m.

Mr. POWERS. It is not.
Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. It is in my State.
Mr. POWERS. It may be. I am aware that it is the general custom.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Vermont for the present consideration of this bill?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment recommended by the committee.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Strike out all after line 4 and insert the following:

"Provided, That the superintendent or chief officer in charge of any jail or prison in the District of Columbia, or in any State or Territory wherein are any prisoners under sentence of a court of competent jurisdiction, shall examine and inspect any letter or packet addressed to any such prisoner when such official shall believe that such letter or packet contains communications that will imperil the discipline of such jail or prison, or facilitate the escape of any such prisoner from confinement."

The amendment was adopted.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. POWERS, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

The House then, on motion of Mr. REILLY (at 5 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.), adjourned until 11 o'clock a. m. to-morrow.

Mr. GORMAN, from the Committee on Printing, reported these measures be printed in the usual document form.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be so ordered, in the absence of the objector.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. PEPPER. I desire to introduce a bill, but before doing so I wish to be heard briefly in explanation of its provisions.

Mr. HARRIS. The practice of arguing the merits of bills upon their introduction I think a very vicious one, and it has gone on the last week or two to an extent that devastates the morning hour. I shall object to any argument upon a bill on its introduction.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection.

Mr. PEPPER. It is not my purpose at all to go into an elaborate argument, but to call attention to a few facts rendering such a bill as I propose to introduce important and, in my judgment, necessary. I wish to say to the Senator from Tennessee that I think it would be cruel to interpose an objection now when I have waited so long during the progress of discussions upon financial questions without saying a word. It is upon that subject that I wish to introduce a bill. Yesterday we had three or four speeches on the same subject, and also the day preceding. I shall occupy but a short time, and I ask the Senator to withdraw his objection.

Mr. HARRIS. My objection is in no sense personal to the Senator from Kansas. It would be made just as readily if the request were preferred by any other Senator on this floor. I can only consent to have the morning hour consumed morning after morning by a discussion of financial or other general questions. I object.

Mr. PEPPER. Will not the Senator withdraw his objection for the present, and make it applicable to the future?

Mr. HARRIS. I can not withdraw my objection if the matter is to lead to debate.

Mr. PEPPER. Then, Mr. President, I will proceed until I am called to order.

Mr. BUTLER. I feel constrained to object.

Mr. GEORGE. I wish to introduce a bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator from Kansas that there is objection.

Mr. BUTLER. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Kansas for the purpose of introducing a bill, but there is objection to debate.

Mr. PEPPER. I understand the situation very well. I am ready to introduce the bill as soon as I discover that I shall not be permitted to continue my remarks and that all objections come from Senators upon the other side of the Chamber.

Mr. BUTLER. Like the Senator from Tennessee, I will object to any Senator making a speech at such a time. It is not because the Senator is on the other side of the Chamber that I object, but because, as the Senator from Tennessee has said, the time of the morning hour would be consumed with the discussion of subjects that are not before the Senate in any sense. I shall feel constrained to object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that debate can be had at this time only by unanimous consent.

Mr. PEPPER. I understand that. Then before introducing the bill (which is a joint resolution instead of a bill), I will ask that the joint resolution be read the first and second times, and that it lie on the table; and to-morrow morning I shall move to refer it to a special committee of three Senators, when I expect to be heard upon its merits.

The joint resolution (S. R. 126) providing for a special election to take the sense of the people on several questions relating to the financial policy of the Government, was read twice by its title, and ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. HARRIS (by request of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia) introduced a bill (S. 2685) to regulate the practice of medicine and surgery, to license physicians and surgeons, and to punish persons violating the provisions thereof in the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. BUTLER introduced a bill (S. 2686) to remove the political disabilities of Benjamin Allston, of Union County, S. C.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. GEORGE introduced a bill (S. 2687) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to certify to the Secretary of the Interior, for restoration to the public domain, lands in the States of Alabama and Mississippi not needed for naval purposes; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. HUNTON introduced a bill (S. 2688) to provide for the striking of juries in the District of Columbia; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. McMILLAN introduced a bill (S. 2689) to grant a honorarium to Caleb Woolpert; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. TURPIE (by request) introduced a bill (S. 2690) granting a pension to Sarah McCoy; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

AMENDMENTS TO BILLS.

Mr. DANIEL submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BURROWS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. TELLER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 8310) to amend an act entitled "An act to reduce taxation, to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes," which took effect the 28th day of August, 1894; which was referred to the Committee on Finance, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. CAREY submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 4393) to provide for the admission of Arizona as a State into the Union, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Territories, and ordered to be printed.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 8376) to promote the efficiency of discipline in penal institutions was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SESSION STATUS OF MISSOURI MILITIA.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the request of the House of Representatives to furnish to the House a duplicate copy of the joint resolution (S. R. 125) to restore the status of the Missouri militia who served during the late war; and on motion of Mr. PALMER, and by unanimous consent, the request was ordered to be complied with and a duplicate furnished.

STOCKBRIDGE AND MUNSEE INDIANS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution of the Senator from Nebraska (Mr. ALLEN) coming over from a previous day.

in him by that statute, and redeem those Treasury notes in silver? There is no excuse for it.

Sir, there was a time in the history of this country when the Secretary of the Treasury was a great and important Cabinet officer. Only in recent days has he become the mere clerk to register the will of some other man or men. If the Secretary of the Treasury would carry out in good faith the plain provisions of the statute to which I have referred there would be no trouble with reference to the gold reserve, and there would be no necessity for the issuance of bonds.

Under the provisions of the Sherman Act the Secretary of the Treasury has ample power to-day to coin seigniorage, cover it into the Treasury, and pay it out for the current expenses of the Government. There is enough silver in the Treasury Department to-day to produce $55,000,000 if coined. Why does not the Secretary of the Treasury exercise that power in behalf of the people? Is he invested with power to override, ignore, and violate statutes? If he follows his oath of office and the requirements of the law creating the office of Secretary of the Treasury, should he not in good faith carry out the provisions of this statute?

Whenever the Treasury Department lays down the rule that all forms of paper money issued by the Government are redeemable in gold, it places the Treasury Department at the mercy of the mercenary men who are depleting it of its gold from day to day. So long as our paper money is permitted to remain out, so long, under the construction of the Treasury Department, as it is made redeemable in gold as fast and as often as it is presented, we can not escape from the consequences of having the gold reserve depleted and the issuance of bonds from time to time with which to replenish it.

I have risen this morning for the purpose of calling attention to these two statutes not with any expectation that Congress will give an authoritative expression upon them, and by that means undertake to influence the conduct of the Secretary of the Treasury. I do not deceive myself into the supposition that anything of that kind will be done, but I call attention to these two statutes and the constant and persistent overriding of their plain provisions by the Secretary of the Treasury for the purpose of letting the country know, if they do not already know, that we have ample means of protecting the Treasury Department without the issuance of bonds.

In 1874, when there was a run upon the Treasury Department, when this country was experiencing a financial panic, the then Secretary of the Treasury issued $26,000,000 of Treasury notes in excess of the number now in existence. Under the provisions of the statute which are preserved to-day the Secretary of the Treasury has ample power to issue $54,000,000 of Treasury notes, noninterest bearing notes. Why not issue those notes and coin the seigniorage, amounting, all told, to $109,000,000, and by that means prevent the issuance of bonds and discharge the current obligations of the nation?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution submitted by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN].

Mr. ALLEN. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas were ordered.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President—

Mr. BATE and Mr. FRYE. Let the resolution be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will again be read.

The Secretary again read the resolution.

Mr. PLATT. What is the question before the Senate?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. ALDRICH. I move to refer the resolution to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. ALLEN. What is the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island to refer the pending resolution to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. ALLEN. The yeas and nays have already been ordered on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. ALDRICH. That does not make any difference.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island is in order, as the roll call had not been commenced.

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President, it is very evident that a resolution of this kind should not be adopted without reference to some committee. As I understand the resolution it commits the Government to the policy of redeeming its legal-tender notes in silver, and certainly hopes the resolution will not be adopted, at least without some consideration.

Mr. CULLOM. I should like to have the resolution again read. The Secretary again read the resolution.

Mr. KYLE. I think the Senate is as capable of passing upon the question involved in the resolution as is the Committee on Finance. Therefore I call for the yeas and nays on the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH].

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] to refer the resolution to the Committee on Finance, on which the yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. ALDRICH. The resolution, while it nominally allows the Secretary of the Treasury to exercise a discretion, really is a mandatory resolution that he shall pay United States notes in silver coin whenever such a contingency as is mentioned in the resolution arises. I take it for granted that the Senate of the United States will certainly not pass such a resolution without consideration and discussion.

Mr. ALLEN. The Senator from Rhode Island evidently has not read the resolution. It is not in the nature of a mandatory resolution. It is a resolution which expresses the sense of the Senate to the effect that whenever the Secretary of the Treasury is satisfied that there is a systematic attempt to deplete the Treasury of its gold he shall exercise the discretion vested in him by the Sherman Act and redeem paper money in silver.

Mr. GORMAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 838, being the District of Columbia appropriation bill.

Mr. HILL. I should like to have the Senate dispose of some business in the morning hour. I refer to two resolutions which were submitted yesterday.

Mr. GORMAN. I am aware that discussion is out of order, but I ask unanimous consent simply to make a statement.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. HILL. With reference to making a statement?

Mr. ALLEN. What is the request of the Senator from Maryland?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Maryland asks unanimous consent to make a statement to the Senate. Is there objection?

Mr. ALLEN and others. No objection.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair hears no objection. The Senator from Maryland will proceed.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, it is perfectly well understood by the Senate and the country that within the morning hour no outcome beneficial to the country can result from discussion on these resolutions in the various forms in which they have been presented. It is now the last day of January, with all the great appropriation bills on the Calendar or in the committee, and it will require all the time between now and the 4th of March next to dispose of the business which it is absolutely necessary shall be transacted by the body without taking up two hours every morning in general discussion. Therefore—

Mr. TELLER. I wish to make a suggestion before the Senator from Maryland makes his motion. I suggest that the pending resolution lie on the table without losing its place, so that Senators who at some time may wish to speak to this question may call it up.

Mr. GORMAN. I will state to the Senator from Colorado, who is a member of the Committee on Appropriations, that within a day or two, I have no doubt, time will intervene between the consideration of important bills which must be passed when an opportunity will be afforded for a further discussion of the question.

Mr. TELLER. I do not wish to interfere with the appropriation bill, and it was not for that purpose that I made the suggestion. I thought the resolution could lie on the table, simply to be called up hereafter if any Senator wanted to make remarks on it.

Mr. ALDRICH. That is all right.

Mr. TELLER. That would not interfere with the consideration of appropriation bills.

Mr. ALDRICH. I hope the Senator from Maryland will agree to the suggestion of the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. GORMAN. I insist upon my motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 838.

Mr. HILL. With all due respect to the Senator from Maryland, there are matters before the Senate as important, I think, as the mere passage of appropriation bills. Anything that will expedite the solution of the financial question is to be desired, and a brief discussion in the morning hour, it seems to me, will tend to clear the atmosphere. There are two resolutions now waiting for action which I do not think will attract any debate. One is an amendment introduced yesterday, to which there seemed to be a general acquiescence. The other is the resolution by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] asking for some information.

Mr. GORMAN. If the Senator from New York will permit me, I will state that as the resolutions of that character, which will lead to no debate, I will give way. I am myself very anxious to have the information. I have moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the District of Columbia appropriation bill, and after that is taken up we will dispose of these propositions. I insist on my motion. Mr. President.

Mr. HILL. With that understanding I do not object to the motion of the Senator from Maryland.

SENATOR FROM KANSAS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Maryland (Mr. GORMAN) that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the District of Columbia appropriation bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President—

Mr. GORMAN. I must object to debate.

Mr. CHANDLER. I rise to a privileged question, if the Senator from Maryland will allow me. I offer a privileged resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read for information. The Chair will then determine whether it presents a question of privilege.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Whereas at the time of the alleged election of JOHN MARTIN as Senator from Kansas the legislature of the State had not been duly organized and whereas at the joint convention which made said election no majority of the legally elected members of the legislature voted for Mr. MARTIN: Therefore,

Resolved, That there was no lawful election of a United States Senator from Kansas by the joint assembly which met on January 25, 1893, and that JOHN MARTIN is not entitled to a seat as a Senator from the State of Kansas.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President—

Mr. GRAY. Let the resolution go over.

Mr. GORMAN. I make the point of order that no business can intervene until the motion I have made has been put to the Senate.

Mr. CHANDLER. This is a privileged resolution. The Senator from Maryland knows very well that he can not dispose of it in that way.

Mr. GORMAN. I make the point that we can not consider the resolution now, that no business can intervene when a motion is made to proceed to the consideration of a bill, and that the question whether the Senate will proceed to its consideration must be determined without debate.

Mr. CHANDLER. I make the point that the resolution I offer supersedes the motion of the Senator from Maryland. It is of the highest order of questions. One of the most important matters, before we pass appropriation bills or to any other business, is to settle the roll of the Senate so as to know who are Senators and who are not.

Mr. HARRIS. Does the Senator from New Hampshire propose to have the resolution referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections?

Mr. CHANDLER. I will say that I do not. The Committee on Privileges and Elections has already voted that it will not give any further consideration at the present session to this case. Therefore I propose to bring the subject before the Senate to find out who are Senators before we vote upon proposed legislation.

Mr. GORMAN. I insist that debate is not in order, and ask for the ruling of the Chair.

Mr. CHANDLER. I will state to the Senator from Maryland that he has been debating his own motion for quite a while.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask for the decision of the Chair.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair was listening to the suggestion of the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. HILL. I do not understand that the resolution of the Senator from New Hampshire is privileged within the meaning of the rule. Only the case of the presentation of the credentials of a Senator and questions as to what disposition shall be made of them are privileged. A resolution like the one submitted is not privileged. Clearly the motion of the Senator from Maryland seems to be in order.

Mr. GRAY. That is right.

Mr. CHANDLER. In answer to the suggestion of the Senator from New York, I desire to say that if the presentation of the credentials of a Senator is a privileged question—

Mr. BUTLER. Debate is not in order.

Mr. CHANDLER. A fortiori, a motion to declare that a Senator is not entitled to his seat in the Senate is a question of the highest privilege.

Mr. BUTLER. Is debate in order? If it is not, I object to debate.

Mr. CHANDLER. The question is whether the resolution is privileged or not.

Mr. BUTLER. I object to any debate on this or any other matter if it is not in order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] was recognized and submitted a motion to proceed to the consideration of an appropriation bill, which the Chair entertained, the hour of 1 o'clock having arrived. The Chair thinks the resolution of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] is not a privileged question in the sense he has indicated, and that the sense of the Senate should be taken upon the motion of the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Chair kindly have the rule as to privileged motions concerning the election of Senators read?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the rule.

The Secretary read as follows:

RULE VI.

PRESENTATION OF CREDENTIALS.

1. The presentation of the credentials of Senators elect and other questions of privilege shall always be in order, except during the reading and correction of the Journal, while a question of order or a motion to adjourn is pending, or while the Senate is dividing; and all questions and motions arising or made upon the presentation of such credentials shall be proceeded with until disposed of.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask to have the rule read in relation to a motion to proceed to the consideration of a bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the rule to which the Senator from Maryland refers.

The Secretary read section 2 of Rule VII, as follows:

Until the morning business shall have been concluded, and so announced from the chair, or until the hour of 1 o'clock has arrived, no motion to proceed to the consideration of any bill, resolution, report of a committee, or other subject upon the Calendar shall be entertained by the Presiding Officer, unless by unanimous consent, and if such consent be given the motion shall not be subject to amendment, and shall be decided without debate upon the merits of the subject proposed to be taken up.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The last clause of Rule VIII will also be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

All motions made before 1 o'clock shall proceed to the consideration of any matter which shall be determined without debate.

Mr. GORMAN. Question!

Mr. CHANDLER. I respectfully appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?

Mr. GORMAN. I move to lay the appeal on the table.

Mr. ALDRICH. Has the Senator from New Hampshire yielded the floor?

Mr. CHANDLER. I desire to speak to the appeal if the Chair will recognize me.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator from New Hampshire made the appeal.

Mr. ALDRICH. The Senator from New Hampshire made the appeal, and I think he is entitled to the floor.

Mr. GRAY. The question is on laying the appeal on the table.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] appeals from the decision of the Chair, the question being, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate? The Senator from Maryland moves—

Mr. CHANDLER. Now I ask that I may be recognized to speak to the appeal.

Mr. GRAY. The Senator from Maryland has made a motion to lay the appeal on the table.

Mr. BUTLER. The Senator from Maryland has been recognized.

Mr. ALDRICH. The Senator from New Hampshire has not yielded for any such purpose.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has recognized the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] who moves to lay the appeal on the table.

Mr. CHANDLER. Does the Chair recognize that motion—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair recognizes the motion.

Mr. CHANDLER. Without giving me an opportunity to speak?

Mr. GRAY (in his seat). You can not help yourself.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has recognized the Senator from Maryland, who moves to lay the appeal on the table.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask the Senator from Maryland, passing over the rude remark made by the Senator from Delaware (Mr. GRAY) very distinctly that I can not help myself, which I would prefer to have him make on his feet in open session rather than stonily in his seat.

Mr. BUTLER. I object to debate, Mr. President. It is not in order.

Mr. GRAY. I will make it where I choose.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask the Senator from Maryland to withdraw the motion to lay the appeal on the table in order to give me an opportunity to make some remarks on the appeal.

Mr. BUTLER. If the Senator from Maryland withdraws the motion I will renew it.

Mr. GORMAN. If the Senate will indulge me a moment, the Senator from New Hampshire will have ample opportunity for his resolution at some time. I have stated frankly to the Senate the reasons why we must press the appropriation bill to-day. I can not, therefore, withdraw the motion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] to lay on the table the appeal of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. LODGE. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry. The Senator from New Hampshire having appealed from the decision of the Chair, do I understand that he can be taken from the floor and someone else recognized?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair has not taken the Senator from New Hampshire from the floor. The Senator from Maryland addressed the Chair and was recognized, and interposed a motion to lay the appeal on the table. That motion is in order, and it is not debatable. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. GORMAN. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CAREY (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. MITCHELL].

Mr. COKE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH].

Mr. GORDON (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. GRAY (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULLOM], and shall withhold my vote unless it be necessary to make a quorum.

Mr. MCPHERSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HIGGINS].

Mr. MARTIN (when his name was called). As I am somewhat personally interested in the result of the vote, I ask to be excused from voting.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kansas asks to be excused from voting. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. MORGAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY].

Mr. PALMER (when his name was called). I announce my pair with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH]. How he would vote I do not know. I should vote "yea" if he were present.

Mr. ROACH (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS].

Mr. VEST (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WASHBURN], but by agreement with the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WASHBURN] and the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY] will stand paired, so that the Senator from Colorado and I can vote. I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. TURPIE. I ask if the senior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DAVIS] is recorded as voting?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. He is not recorded.

Mr. TURPIE. I withhold my vote, being paired with the senior Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. MORGAN. I transfer my pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY] to my colleague [Mr. PUGH] and vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. WHITE. I am paired with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. SHoup]. He is not present, but as there appears to be a suspension of activity upon the other side of the Chamber and no quorum voting, I will vote.

Mr. ALDRICH. Debate is not in order.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I am paired with the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON], but I reserved the right to vote to make a quorum. I am informed that a quorum has not voted. I therefore will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. ALDRICH. I raise the point of order that discussion of that kind is not in order upon a roll call, and that it is not at this time competent for any member of the Senate to state that a quorum has not voted.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Then, I will put the statement in this form—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Debate is not in order at this time, the Chair will state.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I will state, in order to meet the hypercritical suggestion of the Senator from Rhode Island—

Mr. ALDRICH. It is not hypercritical at all.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I am paired with the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON], but I have the right to vote to make a quorum, and exercising my discretion I now vote "yea."

Mr. TELLER. I am paired with the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BERRY], but my pair has been transferred to the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WASHBURN], and I will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. GRAY. Under the discretion that I have with my pair, I desire to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. MCPHERSON. I am paired, as I have announced, with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HIGGINS], but in order to make a quorum I will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. BUTLER (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON]. I see he has not voted, but I take the liberty of transferring my pair to my colleague [Mr. IRBY], so that my vote may stand.

Mr. McMILLAN (after having voted in the affirmative). I am paired with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. BLANCHARD], but reserved the right to vote to make a quorum. So I will let my vote stand.

Mr. TURPIE. Under the conditions of my pair with the senior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. DAVIS], ascertaining that no quorum has voted, I will vote.

Mr. PALMER. I will transfer my pair with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH] to the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICE] and vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. GORDON. My colleague [Mr. WALSH] is out of the Chamber, and I transfer to him my pair with the Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON] and vote. I vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 40, nays 6; as follows:

YEAS 40

So the appeal was laid on the table.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question recurs upon the motion of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] to proceed to the consideration of the District of Columbia appropriation bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Is the resolution which I had the honor to offer in my own possession or in that of the Chair? If it is in mine, I shall offer it on some future occasion.

Mr. GORMAN. The resolution is not in order.

Mr. CHANDLER. If it is in the possession of the Chair I shall move to take it up at the first convenient opportunity.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution, the Chair understands, has gone over until to-morrow, under the rule.

Mr. CHANDLER. The Chair ruled that the resolution was not a question of privilege, and it seems to me it should come back to me. I ask for the ruling of the Chair on that point.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATION BILL.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8388) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill may be dispensed with and that the amendments of the Committee on Appropriations shall be acted upon as they are reached in the reading of the bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. I object. I call for the reading of the bill.

Mr. GORMAN. Let it be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection to the request of the Senator from Maryland. The bill will be read.

Mr. MCPHERSON. Mr. President, the Senator from Maryland having yielded to me, I rise to make a motion, which is to discharge the Committee on Finance from the further consideration of the bill (S. 3388) to provide for a temporary deficiency of revenue, introduced by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN], for the purpose of bringing the matter before the Senate for consideration.

Mr. ALDRICH. What is the request of the Senator from New Jersey?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Jersey will suspend until order is restored. It is impossible to transact business.

Mr. COCKRELL. I object to the motion at this time.

Mr. MCPHERSON. Mr. President—

Mr. GORMAN. I understand the Senator from Missouri has objected to the reception of the motion at this time.

Mr. COCKRELL. Such a resolution can not be passed without discussion. There is no use talking about it.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I acknowledge that I cannot proceed with the matter this morning if objection is made, of course I can call up the motion to-morrow morning. I have entered the motion, and therefore—

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection being interposed, the resolution will go over under the rule.

Mr. ALDRICH. I ask to have it stated.
Mr. COCKRELL. I object to the reception of the resolution.
Mr. CHANDLER. I desire to be informed what the request was to which objection is made.

Mr. McPHERSON. My motion was to discharge the Committee on Finance from the further consideration of Senate bill 3598, the committee being unable to agree upon a report on any bill, and bill being provided for a temporary deficiency of revenue, and my purpose being to bring the matter before the Senate for consideration.

Mr. CHANDLER. I want to learn whether that was objected to.
Mr. COCKRELL. I objected to its introduction at this hour.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection. The Chair holds that the resolution will go over.

Mr. COCKRELL. I insist that it has not been received, for I object to its reception. It being out of order at this time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question raised by the Senator from Missouri will be disposed of by the Chair when the resolution again comes up. The Senator from Maryland is recognized.

Mr. GORMAN. I call for the regular order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The District of Columbia appropriation bill will be proceeded with.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8388) making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read.
The Secretary proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. GORMAN. I wish to make an inquiry of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER]. I do not think the Senator quite understood the request that I made to the Senate. It is the usual one that has never been objected to in my knowledge of the history of this body, to permit an appropriation bill to be considered by items as it is read, acting upon the amendments of the committee as they are reached. It is a mere consumption of time to read the bill through in this way, and I appeal to the Senator in the public interest to let the usual form be observed.

Mr. CHANDLER. I only made the objection because there was a great state of excitement on the other side of the Chamber, in order to give Senators on that side an opportunity to calm down; and as one of them is now in the chair and apparently not at all excited, I withdraw my objection.

Mr. GORMAN. I am very much indebted to the Senator from New Hampshire for his apology.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BUTLER in the chair). The first amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations will be stated.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 2, line 4, after the word "dollars," to strike out "assistant secretary to Commissioners, $1,000," and insert "two assistant secretaries to Commissioners, at $1,000 each," so as to read:

FOR SALARIES AND CONTINGENT EXPENSES.

For secretary's office: For two Commissioners, at $500 each; Engineer Commissioner, $1,750; to make salary of secretary, $1,100; two assistant secretaries to Commissioners, at $1,000 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in the appropriation for salaries and contingent expenses, on page 2, line 12, after the word "laborer," to strike out "at $1 per day;" in line 13, before the word "dollars," to strike out "fourteen," and insert "sixty-five;" in line 15, before the word "assistant," to strike out "two" and insert "four," and on page 3, line 2, before the word "dollars," to strike out "forty-seven thousand four hundred and eighty-two" and insert "fifty-five thousand five hundred and thirty-three," so as to read:

Clerk, $1,500; clerk, $1,000; three clerks, each of whom shall be a stenographer and typewriter, at $1,200 each; messenger, $600; stenographer and typewriter, $500; driver, $200; laborer, $100; superintendent of buildings, at $1,600 each; janitor of buildings, $1,200; four assistant inspectors of buildings, at $1,000 each; clerk, $1,000; clerk, $800; messenger, $400; janitor, $200; steam engineer, $200; property clerk, $100; property clerk, $100; clerk, $750; clerk, $500; messenger, $300; three watchmen, at $75 each; janitor, $200; plumber, $100; four assistant inspectors of plumbing, at $1,000 each; janitor, $200; laborer, at $200 each; in all, $49,375.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SECRETARY. The next amendment—

Mr. ALDRICH. I do not understand upon what order we are now proceeding. It appears that the clerks are not reading the text of the bill, but simply the amendments. I have never known that practice to obtain in the consideration of an appropriation bill before.

Mr. GORMAN. The Senator is quite right.

Mr. ALDRICH. I do not understand that the order of the Senate goes to that extent. I hope there is no proposition at this time to pass an appropriation bill without reading it.

Mr. GORMAN. Let the bill be read.

Mr. ALDRICH. I suggest that the clerks read the bill and that the amendments of the committee be acted upon as they are reached.

Mr. ALLISON. That is the usual course.

Mr. ALDRICH. It is the usual course.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the bill as indicated.

Mr. CULLOM. I should like to call the attention of the Senator to the error of the bill to lines 24 and 25, on page 2 of the bill. I wish to inquire whether the law as it now stands provides for an inspector of plumbing who shall be an expert in that business, or a practical plumber. If it is not already the law I think the words "who shall be a practical plumber" ought to be inserted after the words "inspector of plumbing" and before the words "two thousand dollars." He ought to be a practical plumber, and I think it ought to be stated in the law, if there is not already such a provision.

Mr. GORMAN. I have not the act creating the District offices at my desk, but I am confident that the inspector of plumbing is required to be an expert. We have in the District, as the Senator from Illinois is perfectly aware, a board of plumbers who give a license to all people who perform that duty or engage in that business in the city. The chief inspector is a practical man, an expert.

Mr. CULLOM. The reason why I call the attention of the Senator to it is because I received some papers only a few minutes ago from a distant city in relation to that provision, and stating that the law ought to provide that the inspector of plumbing shall be a practical plumber and that the assistant inspector of plumbing should also be a practical plumber. Everyone can see the reason for it, if the law does not require it.

Mr. GORMAN. If the Senator will have an amendment prepared when we get through with the committee amendments I shall be very glad to accept it. There will be no objection to it.

Mr. CULLOM. I will not interrupt the progress of the bill at present.

Mr. GORMAN. Later on I shall be glad to accept that amendment.

The reading of the bill was proceeded with. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 3, line 7, after the word "each," to insert "one assistant assessor, at $1,400."

Mr. GORMAN. I ask that that amendment be disagreed to, as it is proposed to amend in line 10 by increasing the number of clerks from two to three.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. GORMAN. In lieu of the amendment just rejected, I move, in line 10, to strike out "two" and insert "three" after the word "each," so as to read:

Three clerks, at $1,200 each.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 3, line 18, before the word "hundred," to strike out "thousand two" and insert "thirty-four thousand six," so as to make the clause read:

For assessor's office: For assessor, $3,500; three assistant assessors, at $1,000 each; two assistant assessors, at $1,000 each; special assessment clerk, $1,500; two clerks, at $1,400 each; three clerks, at $1,200 each; draftsman, $1,200; three clerks, at $1,000 each; assistant clerk, $800; clerk in charge of records, $1,000; one clerk to aid of assistant assessors, $1,200; clerk, $800; license clerk, $1,200; inspector of licenses, $1,200; in all, $34,000.

Mr. GORMAN. I moved to change the total in line 18 by striking out "$34,000," and inserting "$34,400."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 3, line 24, after the word "dollars," to insert "deputy collector, at $2,000," and on page 4, line 3, before the word "thousand," to strike out "fourteen" and insert "sixteen," so as to make the clause read:

For collector's office: For collector, $4,000; deputy collector, at $2,000; cashier, $1,800; bookkeeper, $1,200; two clerks, at $1,400 each; two clerks, at $1,200 each; clerk and messenger, $1,000; messenger, $800; in all, $16,200.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 4, line 34, after the word "dollars," to insert "deputy coroner, $1,400, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay such officer while acting as deputy coroner at the rate not exceeding 85 per diem; in all, $3,200," so as to make the clause read:

For coroner's office: For coroner, $1,800; deputy coroner, $1,400, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay such officer while acting as deputy coroner at the rate not exceeding 85 per diem; in all, $3,200.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 5, line 7, before the word "dollars," to insert "twenty-five;" in line 8, before the word "dollars," to insert "and seventy-five;" and in line 9, before the word "dollars," to insert "and seventy-five;" so as to make the clause read:

For market masters: For two market masters, at $1,200 each; one market master, for five days of absence, for cleaning markets, at rate not exceeding $125 per market, 50¢; in all, $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, line 3, before the word "hundred," to strike out "seven" and insert "nine," so as to make the clause read:

Surface division: For compacting engines, $2,000; assistant engineer, $1,000; assistant engineers, at $1,200 each; three ordinaries, at $250 each; three chainmen, at $500 each; draftsmen, $1,200; inspector of streets, $1,000; two assistant inspectors of streets, at $1,200 each; superintendent of streets, $2,000; superintendent of courts, $1,200; superintendent of parking, $1,200; assistant superintendent of parking, $600; clerk, $800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, line 12, after the word "dollars," to insert "assistant superintendent of sewers, $1,500," and on page 7, line 1, before the word "hundred," to strike out "sixty-seven thousand one" and insert "sixty-eight thousand eight," so as to make the clause read:

Subsurface division: For purchases of asphalt and cements, $2,000; inspector of gas and sewers, $2,000; assistant inspector of gas and sewers, $1,000; messenger, $800; superintendent of lamps, $1,000; three inspectors of gas and electric lighting, at $900 each; inspector of sewers, $1,000; superintendent of sewers, $2,000; assistant superintendent of sewers, $1,200; general superintendent of sewers, $1,200; two assistant engineers, at $1,500 each; draftsmen, $1,200; leveler, $1,200; electric railway, at $200 each; three chainmen, at $250 each; clerk, $1,200; two clerks, at $1,000 each; two inspectors of property, at $600 each; two sewer tappers, at $1,000 each; permit clerk, $1,200; one assistant permit clerk, $800; in all, $88,482.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 7, line 17, after the word "appropriation," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are authorized hereafter, in their discretion, to grant leave of absence, not to exceed thirty days to any individual in any of the foregoing offices, and to exceed thirty annually, appointed directly by the Commissioners and paid out of general appropriations and whose service is continuous, but who receive no alien compensation.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, line 16, after the word "persons," to strike out "making autopsies," in line 18, after the word "and," to strike out "holding inquests" and insert "the necessary expenses of holding inquests, including stenographic services in taking testimony," and in line 21, before the word "dollars," to strike out "one thousand" and insert "eight hundred," so as to make the clause read:

For lively of horses or horse hire for coroner's office, jurors' fees, removal of deceased persons, ice, disinfectants, and other necessary supplies for the morgue, and the necessary expenses of holding inquests, including stenographic services in taking testimony and photographing unidentified bodies, $800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 10, line 5, after the word "advertised," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That hereafter there shall be charged and collected on all taxes in arrears interest at the rate of one per cent per month until paid.

So as to make the clause read:

For advertising notice of sales hereafter July 1, 1895, as required to be given by act of March 19, 1890, $10,000, to be reimbursed by a charge of $1.20 for each lot or piece of property advertised. Provided, That hereafter there shall be charged and collected on all taxes in arrears interest at the rate of 1 per cent per month until paid.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask that the amendment may be passed over. The junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] desires to be heard upon it.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be passed over.

The reading of the bill was continued. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 10, line 13, after the word "house," to strike out "one thousand two hundred and seventy" and insert "four thousand two hundred and fifty," so as to make the clause read:

For special repairs to market houses and erection of a garbage shed at Eastern Market, $4,320.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 11, at the beginning of line 1, to strike out "preparing a" and insert "completing the," and in line 6, before the word "thousand," to strike out "six" and insert "twenty-five," so as to read:

Extension of highways: To pay the expenses of completing the plan for the extension of a permanent system of highways in conformity with the plan of the District of Columbia, approved March 2, 1893, $25,000; to be repaid out of the revenues of the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 11, line 7, after the words "District of Columbia," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That of this sum $10,000 or so much thereof as may be necessary, may be expended by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia for the construction of plans, in part by contract with Frederick Law Olmsted, or other eminent landscape architect, on the said extension of a permanent system of highways. And the authorities in charge of preparing and plan for the said extension of highways, in conformity with the plan of the District of Columbia, made in compliance with the provisions of the act approved August 2, 1888, as they may deem advisable and practicable, for the purpose of connecting the subdivisions and for a better conformity to the general plan of the city of Washington.

Mr. ALDRICH. This provision strikes me as a pretty sweeping one. It practically gives to some unknown person authority to change the location of all streets in the city of Washington. I should like to know who the authorities are who are to complete this plan and why it is necessary to do it in this way.

Mr. GORMAN. The Senator from Rhode Island is correct in saying that the proviso is an important one.

Mr. ALDRICH. It is a very important one.
Mr. GORMAN. I was about to call the attention of the Senate to it so that it may be thoroughly understood before it is acted upon. The provision for the extension of the highways and for the completion of the plan of the extension as it came from the House of Representatives made an appropriation of $6,000 for that work. It will require $25,000 to complete it within a year, and the necessity for completion at the earliest possible day of course will be understood by every Senator.

In the consideration of the last district appropriation bill the distinguished Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMILLAN], acting in his own behalf and also on behalf of the Committee on the District of Columbia, brought in a proposition which was adopted, requiring the Commissioners to employ Mr. Olmsted to assist the District engineers in laying out the streets on the hills and in valleys of the suburbs. He performed that work in part, and the testimony of the engineers is that it is a very valuable contribution not only to the beautification of the city, but that it will save a great deal of expense. The bill came to me, and the provision was made for continuing that work under Mr. Olmsted or some other landscape gardener like him, and therefore we inserted a provision for that purpose.

Under the original act of March 2, 1893, authorizing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to approve the subdivisions which might be submitted to him by private parties, they proceeded to do it in a very disjointed way, taking up a subdivision at a time. It is now found that when the whole system is being completed and the streets extended they come to a point where the streets will not join each other, there being short spaces of half a square between the points where the streets which run at right angles about on the main line. This proviso has been inserted to enable the District engineers, with the assistance of Mr. Olmsted, in those necessary cases, and there are very few of them, to make the plan complete and to correct those little defects.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, it is the duty of the Chair to lay before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated.

THE SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 4609) to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed with the consideration of the District appropriation bill, not to displace the regular order.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland asks the unanimous consent of the Senate that the unfinished business be informally laid aside and that the appropriation bill be proceeded with. If there be no objection it will be so ordered.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, the Senator from Rhode Island will find by reference to the original act that this provision refers only to streets outside of the boundaries of the city, and not within the city. The Commissioners have no power to change the streets within the city, but in the new additions going on all around the city. The power we have given them is absolutely necessary, and it is limited to the purposes of connecting subdivisions and securing a better conformity to the general plan of the city only in such cases as they may deem it advisable and practicable. The increased appropriations which we provide enable the work to be done within a year, and hereafter we shall have no further trouble on this score.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask the Senator from Maryland to allow me to state that the District Committee have had this matter under consideration for the last year. They found that the engineers were preparing plans for the extension of the streets and avenues, and it occurred to the members of that committee that it would be advisable to have some eminent man like Professor Olmsted assist them in laying out the plans of the suburbs of this city. The appropriation of $4,000 was only inserted at that time to provide for a deficiency to pay bills which had been actually incurred by the appointment of Mr. Olmsted; and to enable Mr. Olmsted to lay out proper plans $10,000 was appropriated.

I am quite sure the Senator from Rhode Island and every other Senator will feel well pleased with the result of the employment of Mr. Olmsted. There is no doubt that he is being assisted by him as a great help to the engineers, and they, with the aid of the District Commissioners, are very much pleased with his work. I have no doubt that a great deal will be added to the beauty of the surrounding country by following the advice which he has given.

Mr. ALDRICH. I was not criticising the appropriation or the methods by which Senators propose to accomplish the work, but I was calling attention to the language employed in the last portion of the proviso, which reads:

And the authorities in charge of preparing and plan for the said extension of highways, in conformity with the plan of the District of Columbia, made in compliance with the provisions of the act approved August 2, 1888, as they may deem advisable and practicable, for the purpose of connecting the subdivisions and for a better conformity to the general plan of the city of Washington.

ance with the provisions of the act approved August 27, 1888, as they may deem advisable and practicable for the purpose of connecting subdivisions and for a better conformity to the general plan of the city of Washington.

I report that some unknown party—unknown so far as this bill is concerned, for there is no suggestion here as to who "the authorities"—are may undertake to do this work.

Mr. GORMAN. The law says that

Mr. ALDRICH. Upon whom does the law devolve that duty?

Mr. GORMAN. By the act of March 2, 1893, it is provided—

That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized and directed to prepare a plan for the extension of a permanent system of highways over all that portion of said District not included within the limits of the cities of Washington and Georgetown.

Mr. ALDRICH. Why would it not be proper to say "the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are authorized" rather than "the authorities in charge of preparing said plan are authorized," if you intend to give this power to the Commissioners? Otherwise the language might be construed to mean an engineer or somebody else. The appropriation is of minor consequence, but if someone has the right to make "essential changes," in the language of this provision in all the plans of all the streets in the District of Columbia, outside of the old city of Washington, it may involve the District and the Government of the United States in enormous expense.

Mr. GORMAN. I will make the correction the Senator desires, and will move to strike out, in line 13, on page 11, the words "the authorities in charge of preparing said plan," and insert "the Commissioners of the District of Columbia."

Mr. ALDRICH. Is it the intention to allow the Commissioners to practically make new plans for these streets and subdivisions and to open new streets?

Mr. GORMAN. In lines 14 and 15 the Senator will find the limitation "such minor and essential changes."

Mr. ALDRICH. That is the trouble. "Essential" means everything. If the committee had said "nonessential," I would have understood it, but "minor" and "essential" are words of opposite meaning. "Minor and essential changes" mean any changes.

Mr. McMIYAN. I think the Senator from Maryland will agree with me in the statement that the original act as it passed, regulating the extension of highways, gives the Commissioners large power. The intention now is to go on and open those beautiful avenues, and extend them instead of waiting until some time in the future, until it will cost millions and millions of dollars. The plan is to do it now, and to avoid the largely increased expenditures which will be necessary if the work is deferred to the future.

Mr. ALDRICH. I was only desirous that the Senate should understand exactly what is proposed to be done, and whether it is desirable to put into the hands of the District Commissioners the right to open streets anywhere in the District of Columbia where they see fit.

Mr. FAULKNER. The Senator mistakes the intention. This provision does not propose to open streets at all. It simply proposes to lay out, define, and mark lines in the subdivisions through which these roads will go. There is no appropriation for condemning land by any means.

Mr. ALDRICH. I understand that; but it is only the first step toward that.

Mr. FAULKNER. That is another thing. There is no obligation resting upon the District except to define the boundaries of these streets.

Mr. GORMAN. The Senator from West Virginia is quite right. All the power the Commissioners have in laying out subdivisions and the streets in the subdivisions is found in the act of 1893, to which I have referred. I say to the Senator—and I beg to call his particular attention to it because it is important that the matter should be understood not only in this body but elsewhere—that when the act of 1893 was passed, giving the Commissioners the power to make a general plan covering the whole District outside of this city, there was then upon the statute book, and had been for some time, authority for the Commissioners to approve any plans of subdivisions that should be presented. Several such plans for small amounts of territory had been presented and approved.

When the Commissioners came to make the general plan they found in a few minor cases that the streets would not connect, and this provision simply authorizes the Commissioners to change the existing plans in those few cases only for the purpose of making the streets uniform and to straighten them, if possible, where they curve.

Mr. ALDRICH. Then why do the committee use the word "essential," in line 15, if only minor changes are desirable?

Mr. FAULKNER. But the Senator will observe that there is a further limitation in lines 18 and 19, where it is said:

For the purpose of connecting subdivisions and for a better conformity to the general plan of the city of Washington.

Mr. ALDRICH. "A better conformity to the general plan of the city of Washington" might allow the Commissioners to change all the avenues and streets outside of the city of Washington. For instance, Massachusetts avenue, as I understand, is laid out, not in a straight line, but in a deflected line. Suppose the Commissioners should determine that for the general plan of the city of Washington it was better to lay Massachusetts avenue out in a straight line, there is certainly nothing in this provision that would prevent them from doing it.

Mr. LARRIS. The Senator from Rhode Island will allow me to say that unless the authority here proposed is given the Commissioners in carrying out the act of 1893 it will be necessary in more instances than one to condemn expensive, valuable, and excellent buildings, when, by a slight deflection, that necessity might be avoided, and for that reason, I apprehend, this language is incorporated in the bill.

Mr. GORMAN. And for that purpose only.

Mr. PLATT. The language here employed changes the law of 1893, and that, I imagine, is the object of it. The law of 1893 provides:

The Commissioners in making such plans shall adopt and conform to any then existing subdivisions which shall have been made in compliance with the provisions of the act of Congress approved August 27, 1888, entitled "An act to regulate the subdivision of land within the District of Columbia," or which shall, in the opinion of the Commissioners, conform to the general plan of the city of Washington.

That was a limitation on the power of the Commissioners in preparing plans for extending streets. The object of the provision now proposed is to remove that limitation, to do away with that section in the act of 1893, and to give to the Commissioners full power, not to conform to subdivisions, but to do anything they think is proper for getting a "better conformity to the general plan of the city of Washington." That is the explanation of it.

Mr. ALDRICH. I agree to the importance of having symmetrical and artistic plans for the development of the streets of Washington; I have no objection whatever to that, and I do not know that there is any way to secure that object unless by giving to some body arbitrary power to fix and change the lines of streets at their pleasure. But I desire to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that those changes would probably involve the District and the Government of the United States hereafter in enormous expenditures, because you can not possibly change all the lines of the main streets and avenues in the outlying territory without it being done at considerable expense to somebody.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. (The Senator in the chair). The question is on the adoption of the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maryland to the amendment of the committee, which will be stated.

THE SECRETARY. On page 11, line 13, after the words "and the," it is proposed to strike out "authorities in charge of preparing said plan" and insert "Commissioners of the District of Columbia."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the adoption of the amendment of the committee as amended.

Mr. CALL. I should like to hear the amendment read.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment as amended will be read.

THE SECRETARY. On page 11, line 7, after the words "District of Columbia," it is proposed to insert:

Provided, That of this sum $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, may be expended by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia for the preparation of plans, in part, and for reports by Frederick Law Olmsted, or other eminent landscape architect, on the said extension of a permanent system of highways, and the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are authorized to make such minor and essential changes in existing subdivisions made in compliance with the provisions of the act approved August 27, 1888, as they may deem advisable and practicable for the purpose of connecting subdivisions and for a better conformity to the general plan of the city of Washington.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 11, line 23, before the word "thousand," to strike out "fifty" and insert "seventy-five;" and in line 24, before the word "thousand," to strike out "sixteen" and insert "twenty;" so as to make the clause read:

For assessment and permit work, $155,000. Provided, That so much of this appropriation, not to exceed $250,000, shall be expended in widening the roadway of G street northwest, from Ninth street to Fourteenth street, to a width of 50 feet and paving the widened part; one-half the cost of this improvement shall be assessed against and collected from the abutting property, in accordance with the provisions of law governing assessment and permit work.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 12, line 9, before the word "thousand," to insert "and sixty;" so as to read:

For work on streets and avenues named in Appendix "C," Book of Estimates and Studies, to be expended in the description of the streets and avenues specified in the schedules named in said appendix and in the aggregate for each schedule as stated herein, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 12, line 13, before the word "dollars," to strike out "eight thousand" and insert "twelve thousand eight hundred;" so as to make the clause read:

Georgetown schedule, $12,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 12, line 15, before the word "dollars," to strike out "thirty-eight thousand" and insert "sixty thousand eight hundred;" so as to make the clause read:

Northwest section schedule, $60,800.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 12, line 17, before the word "dollars," to strike out "thirteen thousand" and insert "twenty thousand eight hundred;" so as to make the clause read:

Southwest section schedule: Twenty thousand eight hundred dollars.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 12, line 19, before the word "dollars," to strike out "nineteen thousand" and insert "thirty thousand four hundred;" so as to make the clause read:

Southeast section schedule: Thirty thousand four hundred dollars.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 12, line 21, before the word "dollars," to strike out "twenty-two thousand" and insert "thirty-five thousand two hundred;" so as to make the clause read:

Northeast section schedule: Thirty-five thousand two hundred dollars.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 13, to insert:

For paving Eleventh street between East Capitol street and Massachusetts avenue, $2,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRIS. I see that there are various increases of appropriation for street improvements, sewers, etc. Most of these questions have not been very carefully investigated, though they have been examined to some extent by the Committee on the District of Columbia. I should be glad to have the Senator in charge of the bill explain to the Senate the reasons for these increases of appropriation.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, the pending bill, as it came to the Senate from the House of Representatives, carried a total appropriation of $5,393,107. The Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, after very careful consideration, have recommended an increase of $642,024, leaving the total $1,183,803 less than the estimates of the District Commissioners.

In the items making up the increases recommended by the committee, which will be found stated in report No. 844, which is on the desks of Senators, there is a very small increase in the executive office and in the office of the collector of taxes. There is an increase of a street in the assessor's office, so that the revenues of the District may be more promptly collected, and there is a small increase for the repairs of market houses, which bring in a revenue, but the Committee on Appropriations, adopting the recommendations of the Commissioners, and practically the suggestions, or a portion of the suggestions, made by the Committee on the District of Columbia, of which the honorable Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] is chairman, made it their rule that they would first look carefully to the health of the city, make ample provision to complete the sewers in the densely populated regions immediately outside of the city of Washington proper, and complete the line of sewers running out in the direction of the Soldiers' Home as far as Eckington and Brookland.

The committee recommend an appropriation for the Eckington valley sewer, the Fifth street sewer, the Brookland, the Anacostia, and the Kenesaw avenue sewer, leading out to the park at Sixteenth street, between Kenesaw avenue and Grant avenue, and an appropriation of two hundred and odd thousand dollars to complete the sewer running down Rock Creek and to the Potomac River.

The next item involving a considerable amount of appropriation was that for the completion of the streets, for the repair and paving of the streets, not a very large sum, considerably below the estimates.

The next item of increase is in the appropriations for the public schools. The bill as it came from the House of Representatives to the Senate made no adequate provisions for the public schools. We have made a very large appropriation for the erection of school buildings. When that item is reached the committee will go more into the details of it; but I will say, in passing, that the appropriations in the last few years for the construction of public schools have been insufficient, and there are over 2,000 children in this city who now can not get a seat in the public schools, in the lower grade schools especially.

We have made the best provision that was possible for this year, in the matter of the appropriation for the contagious-diseases hospital, to care for the contagious diseases with which the city has been seriously troubled. We have largely increased that appropriation.

To sum it all up, I may say that the streets, the sewers, the public schools, and the public health have received the great bulk of the $642,024 increase recommended by the committee.

Mr. FAULKNER. I should like to ask the Senator from Maryland a question. I have heard it stated—I do not know whether it is true or not—that in Eckington and Brookland there is no system of sewerage which connects with the main sewerage of the city. The result of that is that the commissioners have prohibited bathrooms and other necessary conveniences in the houses erected in that section of the District. Is that statement correct?

Mr. GORMAN. I think the statement of the Senator from West Virginia, who is a member of the Committee on the District of Columbia, and who is perfectly familiar with the matter, is accurate. That is, as we understand, the exact case, which I tried to state briefly. It is proposed to extend sewers from the main sewer out to this important point, where to-day there are no sewers, and the appropriation we recommend will complete those sewers so that as the localities mentioned in the bill are concerned and will enable them to connect with the main sewers, one running into the Potomac and one running down Rock Creek. We have spent an immense amount of money beginning at the park, running along the west side of it. We have recommended an appropriation and authorized contracts to complete the entire sewer down to the P street bridge crossing into Georgetown, and to carry it down to the Potomac River.

I may say that every provision made in the bill is absolutely necessary for the health of the city and to complete the work so far as it can now be provided for.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 14, line 2, before the word "thousand," to strike out "forty" and insert "sixty-five;" so as to read:

For relief sewers and replacing obstructed sewers, $65,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 14, line 6, before the word "and" to strike out "thirty-four thousand" and insert "twenty thousand five hundred and thirty-six;" so as to read:

For suburban sewers, $20,536.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 14, after line 6, to insert:

For constructing in part the following sewers: Eckington Valley sewer, $17,000; Brookland sewer, $2,382; and Kenesaw avenue sewer, $10,000; in all, $29,382. Provided, That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are authorized to enter into contract for the construction of said sewers, not to exceed $4,000 for the Eckington Valley sewer, $1,500 for the Brookland sewer, and $2,000 for the Kenesaw avenue sewer, to be paid for from the District funds, and that the Commissioners are authorized to contract and sewers, where necessary, across lands belonging to the United States. Provided, That after the construction of said sewers the adjacent portions of said lands shall be restored to their original condition from the appropriation herein provided for.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, I have not been able to hear the statement made by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] in connection with this bill. I am not aware whether he has stated the motives which have led the Senate committee to make such large increases of the appropriations for sewers beyond those which the House of Representatives deemed necessary. I hope, if the Senator has not made such statement already, that he will make it now. If he has already made the statement, I do not ask him to repeat it.

It occurs to me, however, that the Senate ought to hesitate before it increases this District of Columbia appropriation bill $642,000, more than half a million dollars, over and above the expenditures of the District which the House saw fit to provide. The House of Representatives is the popular branch, as the Senator from Maryland is aware. It represents the last expression of the popular will; it is by the Constitution the great guardian of the public moneys. No appropriation bill can originate in this body. The fathers of the Constitution, who were wiser in their day, I think, in some respects than even the statesmen who now control the two Houses of Congress, deliberately decided that there should be no power of originating an appropriation bill in the Senate, and only allowed the subsidiary and incidental power to the Senate of proposing amendments to appropriation bills which had already passed the House.

Mr. President, I can not doubt that the true construction of that clause in the Constitution is that the Senate should confine itself to incidental and moderate additions and alterations in House appropriation bills, and that it never was.

Mr. HARRIS. Will the Senator allow me?

Mr. CHANDLER. When I finish my sentence.

It never was intended that an appropriation bill coming from the popular branch should be overruled with such huge additions as this Democratic Senate now proposes.

Mr. HARRIS. I should be glad to ask the Senator from New Hampshire to point me to the particular clause of the Constitution which prohibits the Senate from originating an appropriation bill. I am aware that there is a clause which requires that bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives, but I think the Senator will find it difficult to point me to a clause of the Constitution which prohibits the introduction or the amendment of an appropriation bill in the Senate.

Mr. CHANDLER. I concur entirely in theory with what the Senator now says. But I ask the Senator whether he would contend, practically, that the Senate has the right to originate an appropriation bill?

Mr. HARRIS. Absolutely.

Mr. CHANDLER. A general appropriation bill?

Mr. HARRIS. Absolutely. I have no more question about it than I have of the fact that it is daylight at this time. In respect of the merits of the proposition the Senator is discussing, if he will allow me.

Mr. CHANDLER. I should prefer to have the Senator allow me to go on.

Mr. HARRIS. I yield. The Senator is, of course, entitled to the floor.

Mr. CHANDLER. The Senator having stated his constitutional point, will please allow that to be discussed and hear me on the constitutional point before urging the merits of this specific appropriation.

Mr. ALDRICH. Would it interrupt the Senator from New Hampshire if I were to make a remark?

Mr. CHANDLER. I will yield in a moment, when the constitutional question is fairly stated. I have always been inclined to agree that an appropriation bill is not a revenue bill within the strict meaning of the Constitution; but the Senator from Tennessee knows very well that the persistent contention has been otherwise.

He knows very well that the House of Representatives, the popular body, has always contended that a bill to expend money is a revenue bill just as much as a bill to raise revenue by taxing the people. That contention has never been successfully resisted by the Senate, and never in the whole history of the Government has the Senate undertaken to originate a general appropriation bill. If I am wrong in that statement I shall be glad to be corrected by the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. HARRIS. As a rule, general appropriation bills originate in the House of Representatives, and they have done so throughout the whole history of the Government. A few years ago, however, the Senate did originate an appropriation bill—I believe it was a bill making appropriations for the expenses of the Army—and sent it to the House. The House has always contended that it has the sole right to originate such bills, and the House on that occasion passed a bill with that word, for the Army, figure for figure with the Senate bill, and sent it back to us as a House bill, maintaining the contention for which the Senator from New Hampshire contends. But my question to the Senator was that he should show me the clause in the Constitution which prohibits the Senate from originating an appropriation bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. Then the Senator from Tennessee admits all I contend for.

Mr. HARRIS. I admit that the House has always claimed the right, and as a rule the Senate, so far as I have known, has denied it.

Mr. CHANDLER. I agree with all the Senator from Tennessee has said, and my contention simply is that the other House has always insisted that an appropriation bill is a revenue bill, and the Senate never has successfully resisted that contention.

Mr. HAWLEY. Mr. President, I recollect, though I am not name the year, that a Judiciary Committee of the other House composed of very able men, took this question into consideration and decided that the Senate had a right, if it chose to exercise it, to originate an appropriation bill; that it could not be forbidden.

Mr. CHANDLER. That was merely the expression of opinion of the members of the House who composed the Committee on the Judiciary. The contention of the House, as the Senator from Connecticut knows—doubtless he joined in it when he was a member of the House—is that it alone can originate an appropriation bill.

Mr. HAWLEY. I do not remember ever holding that view. The first time my attention was drawn to the question was by the report of the committee, which I accepted.

Mr. CHANDLER. But the contention of the House has been the other way. It is true that some statesmen commence their political careers in the House, become thoroughly impregnated with the theories that prevail there, and then come to this body and surround the theories and take the side of the Senate on the same questions. But the fact remains that in the practical workings of this Government it is not within the power of the Senate to originate an appropriation bill, and my argument holds good that the Senate should not undertake to make large increases in House appropriation bills, but should confine itself within a very narrow margin in adding Senate amendments. Now I yield to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. ALDRICH. I desire to call the attention of the Senator from New Hampshire to the fact that the statement made by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] as to the increases made by the expenditures is incomplete. On the fourteenth and fifteenth pages, for instance, there are provisions for contracts to be made in addition to the amounts appropriated for. The contracts in those two cases amount to $358,000, which would make the total increase by the amendments which have been reported at least $1,000,000.

I do not know in how many other cases throughout the bill such contracts are authorized. Certainly from the inspection which I have made of it I have no doubt it is true in many other cases. The increase of expenditures authorized by the amendments is at least $1,000,000; I do not know how much more. I thought I should make this statement to the Senator from New Hampshire so that he might understand exactly what is proposed to be done.

Mr. CHANDLER. I must confess that, while I am not prepared to oppose any particular one of the increases reported by the Appropriation Committee of the Senate, I am alarmed when I find the Senator proposing to increase by half a million dollars more than $6,000,000; or, as the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] states, increase the appropriation nearly a million dollars.

Mr. President, I am alarmed; I am troubled about the question of economy. If the Senator from Maryland will indulge me, I will ask where is the economical administration of the Government that was to be inaugurated by the present party in power. The Senator is himself an economist, in theory at least. The Senator has over and over again promised the country that whenever the party of which he is the honored leader, indeed I may say the greatest leader outside the Executive Mansion, should come into possession of both branches of Government, there should be economical appropriation bills, and now he stands here as sponsor for amendments which carry these enormous increases over the bill as it came from the House.

Does not the Senator from Maryland realize that under his conduct of political affairs the Senate is to be charged with the same lack of economy, the same disposition to crowd up appropriation bills, that was so freely charged when the Republican party controlled the Senate? That was the contention frequently heard and maintained with great zeal and earnestness by many, that the Senate was an extravagant body, that it was continually increasing House appropriations and putting upon the country burdens which the popular branch had been unwilling to impose. That was a constant argument, and we were promised by the Senator from Maryland that whenever the time came when there should be an uninterrupted sway of Democracy—a Democratic President, a Democratic House, and a Democratic Senate—there should be reform.

The time has come; there is a Democratic majority in the Senate, such as it is; there is a Democratic President in the White House, such as he is; and I suppose there is no dispute at all that there is a genuine Democratic majority in the House of Representatives. Mr. President, where is the reform? Is there not a billion dollar Congress again about to expire? I may be mistaken, but I am afraid that the appropriations made by the present Congress, when they come to be footed up, will amount to a billion dollars.

Mr. ALDRICH and others. Much more.

Mr. CHANDLER. I am surprised at what Senators around me say, that the appropriations are to be more than a billion dollars. The very cry of Democracy by which the Republican party was stricken down in 1890, that we had a billion-dollar Congress, is to be hurled with tenfold more strength and justice upon the party of the Senator from Maryland than it was ever thrown against the Republican party. I am surprised that we do not see any prospect that the promises of the Senator from Maryland will be redeemed.

Mr. President, as our friends on the other side of the Chamber are soon to lose control of the popular branch, as they are soon to lose control of this body (I think within a very few days, if the resolutions which I shall have the honor to offer for the purpose of improving the political complexion of this body are adopted), and as in the course of two years they are to lose control of the executive department, I venture to say to them that they can render no greater service to the country than to set that example of stern economy which we were promised in the stump speeches of the members of the Senator's party, which we were promised by the Senator from Maryland himself upon this floor. Let him cut down appropriation bills and set an example of economy of administration, which I shall endeavor in my humble way to persuade the coming Republican Congress to follow.

These are general suggestions, I know, but it seems to me they are pertinent in view of the enormous increases carried by the appropriation bill, if it has been reported by the Senator from Maryland, and I should be very glad if the bill could be recommended to the Committee on Appropriations, and if the committee would take as their rule and guide in the consideration of this and all other appropriation bills the promises of the Democratic platform, that no more money shall be raised than is necessary for an economical administration of the General Government.

I beg to call the attention of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] who is rising and the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] who has already risen to the fundamental principle of the Democratic party, which is economy in public expenditures.

Mr. HARRIS, Mr. President, great as is my respect and the respect of the country for the opinions of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] upon economic questions, I beg to suggest to him that the carefully prepared estimates of the executive authorities of the District of Columbia are entitled to a much larger measure of my respect than his suggestions upon such questions. With the increases found in the Senate amendments the bill will fall about a million dollars below the estimates, carefully considered and carefully prepared, made by the District Commissioners and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury. The District Commissioners, whatever may be said about majorities in the House of Representatives or in the Senate or at the White House, is nonpartisan—absolutely so. Hence we may expect absolute impartiality and fairness from them, which we may not always expect at the hands of the Senator from New Hampshire, or myself, perhaps, because he and I are not nonpartisan by a large margin.

Now, so far as I, as a member of the District Committee, have scrutinized these amendments, and the committee have considered them largely (but perhaps not with the same care that the Committee on Appropriations, which has actually to deal with them), I have not seen one of them that I have regarded as in excess of the absolute necessities of the case. Least of all should we diminish the appropriations looking to sewer extensions and the condition of our sewer system, because the sanitary condition and the general health of the District depend very largely upon the extension and completion of our sewer system. I hope the Senator from New Hampshire will get his own consent to allow each of these amendments to be agreed to and the bill to pass including them.

Mr. CHANDLER, Mr. President, I fear my general propositions of economy, when they come to be practically applied, will go the way of all the resolutions of the Democrats for economy, in that they promise us that they will not reduce the expenditures of the Government if they ever obtained the power to do so.

The Senator from Tennessee says that more than he respects me (and whether he respects me or not I know that I have his undying affection) he respects the public officials of this Administration who submit to us these estimates, and he proposes to vote in accordance therewith.

If the Senator respects, as he says he does, the Secretary of the Treasury and the other public officials who, under President Cleveland, have submitted to us these estimates, which being largely cut down still bid fair to make this Congress one of larger appropriations than the billion-dollar Congress of which we heard so much, what respect has he for the Democratic orators and the Democratic newspapers who aroused the people of this country against the Republican party by talking about a billion-dollar Congress and promising that there should be no more such Congresses if the Democrats were put into national power? Mr. President, how much respect has the Senator for a political party which gains power under such promises and then is as false to its promises as the Democratic party in the appropriation of the public money seems likely to be in the present Congress?

I am glad, Mr. President, that the Senator from Tennessee has such profound respect for the President and the Secretary of the Treasury and the members of this Administration who submit their views to this body. I trust that the Senator who follows them in the matter of appropriations will be found earnestly supporting also the financial policy of the President and of the Secretary of the Treasury, who are the officials his party put in power in order to recommend to Congress, not only the expenditure of public money, but those measures of legislation which are necessary for maintaining the public credit and the public honor of the United States in connection with the currency and the public debt.

Mr. GORMAN, Mr. President, I regret exceedingly that the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] should, on the occasion of the consideration of this particular appropriation bill, bring up questions of party policy and party promises. I think, sir, that action upon appropriations for this District since the present District government was established has been taken in both Houses of Congress without regard to party. The District government has been conducted on the plan of nonpartisanship. The beautifying of this great capital of the nation is one in which party politics has played no part in the past.

I concede the right of the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire to arraign the Democratic party on any proper occasion. I can understand perfectly how much he has been troubled in the past because of the attacks of Democrats upon the stump and in Congress on the extravagance of Congress when his party had the entire possession of the Government. It did amaze and shock the people that the expenditures in the Fifty-first Congress ran up to a billion dollars. They have not recovered from that shock yet. But in all the partisan discussions and the extravagant statements if, you please, that were made then, I know of no partisan who failed to remember that this is the capital of the nation; that the appropriations made for it are for the benefit of the whole people; and that if they were not extravagant in the appropriations for this District in the first decade of the Fifty-first Congress, of the last Congress, or the present Congress.

When the Senator from New Hampshire went so personally as being one of the Democrats who condemned your extravagance and promised a reduction in expenditures when we came into possession of the Government, I say to him that I did make that statement upon this floor when you were in power, and I said that you had so legislated as to fix the expenditures of a Government for the next five or six years at a billion dollars a Congress, or $500,000,000 per annum; that when we came into power it would be impossible to reduce the expenditures except gradually; and that it would take five or six years before the Democratic party could bring the expenditures down within a reasonable amount. We have in the last Congress and in this reduced the expenditures where it could be done without impeding the operations of the Government; but what the distinguished Senator from Mississippi [Mr. CRAWFORD], the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, and myself said, in the face of the Presidential election of 1892, has proved true: that the reduction would be slow, and that unless we impaired the efficiency of the Departments it would not be more than $1,000,000 a Congress. That statement, made then in frankness, made without fear, gave offense I know to some of the extreme partisans within my own party, but the result has proved the truth of the prediction, and we do stand here enabled to reduce the expenditures over $500,000 per annum without crippling the Government.

Now, the Senator from New Hampshire comes with an attack upon the party in power, and he makes it on a bill making appropriations for what purpose, Mr. President? Appropriations for the support of the District government, where the people who reside in this District pay by taxes one-half of all the sums that we appropriate here. The Government, owning more than one-half of the property of this city, with the absolute ownership of every street, pays the other half. He twists the Committee on Appropriations with having increased these items over the bill as it came from the other House. We have increased them, sir; but for what purpose? To preserve the health of this District. To complete the great sewer system, which is recognized by every expert in those matters as being absolutely necessary. We have increased them that your streets may be made as clean and healthy as the streets of New York, which have never been improved—improvements necessary for the comfort not of the Senator from New Hampshire and myself, but for the benefit of the people of all this country. We have increased the appropriations in the bill greatly, and the great increase in the appropriations is for what purpose? To provide schoolhouses for the boys and girls of this District, 2,000 of whom can not get a seat in a public school within the District.

If the economy which the Senator from New Hampshire preaches is one that will permit the spread of epidemic diseases without provision for it, which will permit people to live in the suburbs without a sewer to carry off all that sewers are intended for, if it is economy for the purpose of preventing education, then I say to that Senator that I do not share his opinions and I have no sympathy with his views. I think this is a question beyond party. I do not care now, as I have not cared at any time, for the views of any man, whether Republican or Democrat, who would let this District, which belongs to the people of the whole country, would so economize as to permit the children to grow up in ignorance and the unfortunate to die because Congress had not made provision for their health. That is all there is in this bill, sir. If, as the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] has well said, the appropriations were increased twice the amount that we have provided for in these amendments, it would be doing but simple justice to the people in this District, from whom you and I have taken away the right of self-government, who if they had the right would do more than we have provided.

We have turned ourselves into contractors and contractors for this District, and I say, as to both parties, we have been too economical. We ought to have gone beyond the appropriations which have been made. When it comes to economy I happen to see the Senator from New Hampshire and the President and to see that they have not done in the past, nor are they doing now, anything elsewhere that may be stayed for the time without injury to the public.

Mr. CHANDLER, May I ask the Senator if he has any measure of economy which he wishes to see put in the bill to propose, and for which they solicit Republican votes?

Mr. GORMAN, As I said a moment ago, the appropriations in bills that have already become laws during the present Congress and in the one preceding it were reduced as far as the public service would admit of. But it is useless to attempt to play upon this question. As long as the present laws stand (and I know of no one who would disturb them), with the expenditures necessary to maintain the Navy and the Army, and with the other great expenditures of the Government, the appropriations can not in the next five years be greatly reduced.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator allow me to ask him whether the appropriation for pensions has not been very largely cut down already, and why, if it has been, there should be a necessity of appropriating during the present Congress more than $1,100,000,000 instead of less than $1,000,000,000?

Mr. GORMAN. I think the Senator's figures are all wrong. I do not believe that any man can to-day tell what the appropriations will be.

Mr. CHANDLER. One billion one hundred million dollars—$1,000,000,000 in excess of a billion.

Mr. GORMAN. I think the Senator will find, when appropriations shall have been passed at the present session, that the aggregate will be less than $1,000,000,000. Still, that is a matter to be determined after the 4th of March.

Mr. President, I repeat that these great expenditures can not be reduced in the next four or five years. The Senator would not reduce the pension appropriations, nor would I.

Mr. CHANDLER. They are being reduced.

Mr. GORMAN. Yes; they are being reduced, because last year by the report of the Commissioner of Pensions we reached the point of the highest payment. The old soldiers are dying off and the claims have been reduced in amount, so that we have reduced the pension appropriation ten or twelve million dollars; but it will remain at $140,000,000 per annum for some time to come, according to the estimates. It can not be reduced below that amount. You can not cripple the Navy; you can not cripple the Army; you can not cripple the Treasury Department, that collects the revenue; and the great payment of a billion dollars every Congress will go on.

I say to the Senator from New Hampshire again that when you were in power, and we were about to come into power I made that statement. I knew it to be true then; I know it to be true now. When you come into the control of both Houses of Congress, as the Senator says will be the case on the 4th of March, you will not be able to reduce the expenditures very much. You may follow the good example that we have set. Then in this Congress and the House of Representatives in the last Congress, and make a slight reduction of from ten to twenty million dollars; but beyond that, as you have fixed the policy of the Government for the last fifteen years, you must follow it to the end, and the people will be compelled to pay $500,000,000 a year for the support of the Government.

But on this measure, Mr. President, as I said before, this discussion has no place. There is not a man, woman, or child within the confines of the Union who has not a great pride in this capital. I know of no man so poor in my State who would hesitate to appropriate enough to educate the children in the District of Columbia. I know of no man or woman who has complained because this town has been beautified; and it can not be done without money. They have a pride in it. It is one of the things that they come here and see and enjoy, and they think more of their Government and of their representatives in Congress for having made a fair provision for the city. They ought to be proud. I have no doubt they do complain that there have been too much parsimony here. There is pending a bill to complete the sewerage of this great city, which will cost several millions of dollars. Is there a constituency anywhere in New Hampshire or anywhere in the West that would hesitate to permit us to complete that system and make this capital the one spot in the Union that is perfect in those appointments where the health of their representatives is preserved.

Mr. President, upon the matter of sewerage for the city, I speak with some feeling. Last year a defect in a sewer came near costing me my life. I know of other Senators and Representatives who came near passing away because Congress had not made ample provision in that respect. It is a demonstration that the defect exists. The distinguished Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON], who I now have in my eye, when chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, provided for a commission of great experts upon this question to see what was necessary to be done. If the Senator from New Hampshire were to read the report of that board of experts appointed by President Harrison he would not criticise the Committee on Appropriations for making provision, as far as they have gone, for the health and safety of the inhabitants of this District. The economy which would criticise such an appropriation is a parsimony for which I have anything but admiration.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. President, the Senator from Maryland deprecates any political or, as I think he said, partisan discussion upon the pending appropriation bill. I take the Senate and the Senator from Maryland to witness that so far as this side of the Senate is concerned two months have passed without any partisan discussion emanating from the Republican side of the Chamber. We have felt that the exigencies of the Government were such that it became us to be quiet upon political topics; that it became us to forbear and to withhold the criticism upon the acts of the Democratic party which their conduct and the course of events have so amply indicated it would be proper to make. We have felt that the necessity for such financial legislation as would protect the credit and honor of this Government was so great that it was imperative for political discussion.

Two whole months, with provocation and temptation every day to call attention to the conduct and acts of the Democratic party have passed without any political discussion emanating from this side of the Chamber; and if it were not for the fact that we know and the country knows that financial legislation under the lead of the Democratic side of the Senate has become an impossibility at this session, we would still refrain from any political discussion or criticism.

But, Mr. President, that is a fact. The immunity which the Democratic side has enjoyed for the past two months has been because we did not wish to embarrass the majority in proposing and bringing forward and endeavoring to pass the essential legislation without which we much fear that the financial integrity of the Government is to be dishonored.

But, Mr. President, that reason for silence has gone by. The Democratic side of this Chamber can not bring forward any financial legislation which it will be wise to pass; and, therefore, I think it entirely proper that some allusions of a political character should now be made.

Nospendthrift ever squandered his patrimony with such reckless haste and prodigality as the Democratic party has within the last two years dissipated the fruits of its victory and the reputation which victory gave to the party. That victory was won largely upon the cry of Republican extravagance and the promise of Democratic economy. It was the cry raised in 1890 of a "billion-dollar Congress" which changed the Republican majority of the House of Representatives into a Democratic majority at the next session. It was the promise of Democratic economy which as largely as anything else contributed to Democratic success in the Presidential campaign of 1892.

And now when we call attention to it we are charged with parsimony. By no means, Mr. President. We call attention to it for the purpose of showing that we have not been gained by the Democratic party by false pretences and the failure of that party to live up to its promises in this particular.

Far be it from me, Mr. President, to say that any needed appropriation shall not be adopted because it is proposed by that party which has insisted that Republican appropriations have been extravagant; but when appropriations emanate from that same party which are just as extravagant or just as large as the appropriations emanating from the Republican party which were called extravagant, it can not be out of the way to call attention to that fact.

They put it in their platform at Chicago. In relation to the tariff, they demanded that the collection of taxes should be limited to the necessities of Government when honestly and economically administered. They declared that "the necessity of the Government is the only justification for taxation, and whenever a tax is unnecessary it is unjustifiable."

But the Democratic party does not raise the money needed to meet expenditures by taxation any longer. In the days when we made the necessary appropriations, as I say they were, but when we were accused not only in the Senate and in the other branch of Congress but in every Democratic convention and upon every stump of extravagance, there was money enough to meet the expenditures with. They charged us with having a surplus in the Treasury, with swamping our appropriations in order to get rid of the surplus in the Treasury, and yet with a deficiency in the Treasury amounting now to $100,000,000 in this Administration up to date, supplied only by the borrowing of money upon the issue of bonds, they go on with the same appropriations to the same extent, indeed with increased appropriations, and call it economy, and take us to task because we are opposing necessary appropriations.

Mr. President, I well remember the speech which the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] made here. The cry had gone forth throughout the country that the Fifty-second Congress was to reduce appropriations. It had been heard in the other branch of Congress, it had been heard in every Democratic newspaper, that the Democratic House of Representatives was going to cut down appropriations from the mark of Republican extravagance of the former Congress.

When the Senator from Maryland said that that could not be done without injustice to the Government, he rose in his place and said it was impossible to reduce the appropriations to any considerable amount below those of that Congress, which had been called the "Billion-dollar Congress," but he promised—and it was a promise made for the campaign—that if the people would put the Democratic party into power in the House of Representatives, in the Senate, and in the White House, that party would proceed to repeal the Republican laws which made these appropriations necessary.

do not so well remember, Mr. President, that he said it would take ten or six years of Democratic Administration and power to reduce the expenditures. It is possible that he gave some hint of that kind, but the thing which remains in my mind is that he promised when the Democrats obtained entire control of the Government that they would proceed to repeal the Republican laws which made necessary the appropriation of so much money.

That promise has been kept in one particular, and in no other. They have repealed or nullified to a considerable extent the laws under which the appropriations of the Fifty-first Congress were made for pensions. In every pension appropriation bill since the Democratic party took power there has been an arbitrary reduction of pension appropriations amounting to millions of dollars. I think that in the pension appropriation bill passed this year the reduction was something like ten or eleven million dollars. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER], who is on the Committee on Pensions, can correct me if I am wrong. I think the reduction was ten or twelve million dollars in the pension appropriation bill preceding that of the Democratic party. He justified his promise to repeal Republican legislation in this respect; and I think it will be found that the pension appropriation bill of this year is $25,000,000 less than that of the Fifty-first Congress. That money is taken out of the pockets of the soldiers by the administration of the law in the Pension Office. I give the Democratic party credit, if it be a credit, for having in this respect carried out the promise which the Senator from Maryland made.

But in what other respect has that promise been made good? We are almost in the expiring hours of the Fifty-third Congress. In what other respect has a law requiring an appropriation been repealed or modified so as to provide for an appropriation of less money than under the Republican Administration? And with all the diminution of pension appropriations, I have watched the appropriations of this Congress, those of the last session and those of this session, until I think I can say, without the fear of successful contradiction, that the appropriations are less than by millions of dollars than they were at the Fifty-first Congress, which we were told all over the country was a "billion-dollar Congress."

Mr. President, if the people were prosperous, if the great shadow of adversity had not settled upon the country, if the prosperity of Republican administration were in existence, I think there would be no cause to criticise the appropriations which have been passed or suggested by this Congress, either at the former or at the present session. In a time of adversity, in a time of hardship, in a time when the hand of destiny is heavy upon every man in the United States, might we not well pause, might we not well inquire whether we could not in some respects keep these appropriations within the limits of the last year? Although the District of Columbia is a proper object for appropriation, although I should not be niggardly with reference to appropriations for this District, yet when the tale of destitution comes to our ears every morning and every evening, when people who have been living in comfort, if not in affluence, are stifling their pride and asking assistance from individuals, might we not keep the appropriation bill for the District of Columbia within the limits of last year's appropriation bill and within the limits of prior appropriation bills when we were having prosperity?

Oh, no, Mr. President, it is not the way to discuss this measure to inquire whether there is any item of appropriation here which ought not to be made, whether we desire that the schools shall not so well situated as they are, that $100,000 of appropriation for suburban sewers should not be made. This is the first great appropriation bill which has come here at this session. Others are to follow, and they are of the same character, and contain either an increase of appropriations over those of past years or fail to reduce according to the Democratic promise. Therefore, on this bill I think it is right and proper to call attention to this matter. We are not contending about the items of the bill, we are not saying that the District of Columbia should not receive the liberal support of the Congress of the United States, but we are calling attention to the fact—and we do not mean that it shall be lost sight of—that with all their vaunted economy, the Democratic party in this Congress is appropriating more money than was ever appropriated in any Congress in the history of the Government.

The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] tells us that the appropriations are not up to the estimates of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, as if that were a thing which was to govern Congress in its appropriations. In a time of distress and suffering, in a time when we can not raise by any taxation adopted by the party in power sufficient money to pay the expenses of the Government by $100,000,000 a year, we are told that it is the estimates of the Commissioners which are to govern! Mr. President, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia undoubtedly desire that the expenditures for the District shall be upon a liberal scale.

It is not the fact that distress is heavy, is great, that suffering is almost untold, that the difficulty of raising money by taxation, either in the District of Columbia or in the United States, is very great, that taxes are especially onerous—it is not this fact that I am looking at, whether they are to have fine drives and nicely smoothed pavements, that they are to make a capital city of fashion and elegance in all its appointments, and shall be the pride of the beholders who come here from all portions of the nation. I am not saying that is not right, but I say that the same liberal spirit of appropriation which is pursued for the District of Columbia, if applied to the whole United States, would make this a two-billion-dollar Congress rather than a one-billion-dollar Congress.

These appropriations for the District of Columbia are not limited by necessity; they are limited only by the aesthetic tastes of the Commissioners and of the people who have come here to reside, and the estimate of the Commissioners made in reference to them. I am not attacking any item of appropriation here; there is no item which I wish to attack; but I do wish that the Appropriations Committee of the Democratic Senate shall take some of the medicine which they administered to us when the Appropriations Committee of this body was composed of a majority of Republicans.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] entered into a defense of the appropriations contained in this bill. He stated the reasons why these additional appropriations by the Senate were required by the interests of the District. It was an explanation which he did not make, as I understand, when the bill was first submitted to the Senate, but he waited until his statements were called out by the inquiries and the criticisms which were made by Senators upon this side of the Chamber.

In the main I agree with the Senator from Maryland that the objects for which these increased appropriations are made are desirable for the welfare of the District. The question whether or not they ought to be made at this time, in this condition of the Treasury, and under the conditions, commercial and financial, in which the country finds itself, is another question, to which as yet no satisfactory answer has been given by the Senator from Maryland. The Senator has, however, by his argument convicted his political party of an unjust and false war cry against the Republican party. The Senator has admitted that the appropriations of the Fifty-first Congress, called "the billion-dollar Congress," were made necessary by the laws existing prior to that time, and he has asserted that the Republican party placed those laws upon the statute book.

The Senator, on a former occasion and to-day wholly omitted to note the fact that during nearly all the last twenty years the popular branch of Congress, the House of Representatives, has been under the control of his own party, and that the laws to which he referred as compelling a billion dollars of appropriation were concurred in, if they were not originated by, the political party to which he belongs in a Democratic House; and the Senator has not at any time pointed out the laws which can be repealed in order that the expenditures may be lessened.

Mr. President, I had two objects in view in the remarks which I submitted to the Senate. I wished to call attention to the fact that the hue and cry raised by the Democratic party in the year 1890 against the Republican party that it had needlessly originated a billion-dollar Congress and had wrongfully forced upon the country a billion dollars of appropriation was an unjust political outcry. That it was so is proved by the fact that the Fifty-second Congress made appropriations equally large. It is long past that the fact that the Congress was wholly Democratic in both branches, instead of reducing the expenditures of the Government below $1,000,000,000, is increasing them above the appropriations of either the Fifty-first or the Fifty-second Congress. The Senator has utterly failed to point out a single law which can be repealed. He is unable to point out a single act of economy which he proposes to the present Congress; and the Senator stands as a member of a committee which, in all human probability, will submit appropriations to the bill to be passed, the total of which instead of being for this Congress ten hundred million dollars, will be in the vicinity of eleven hundred million dollars.

Mr. President, it was in view of this prospect before me that I ventured to inquire where could be found the expected economy which was to come from the advent to power of the Democratic party. The Senator failed to give me a statement of any reduction of appropriations which is in the proposals to the present Congress. The Senator admits that no economy is to be practical upon this bill. The Senator advocates the $900,000 increase over the House appropriations in this bill, and again intimates that in some other bill yet to be brought before the Senate there may be an opportunity for Senators upon this side of the Chamber to vote for reductions in the public expenditures.

It would have been gratifying to me, and I doubt not it would have been gratifying to other Senators, if the Senator from Maryland had been able to give us a inkling of the economies which he intends, at some future time, to suggest. There are but four weeks remaining of the present session, and if these economies, which have been growing in the brain of the Senator for the last four years, are to be presented to the Senate, and we are to be asked to approve them by our votes, it certainly would be gratifying if we could have some suggestion of them beforehand, so that we might think of them and prepare ourselves, at last, to join in the redemption of the promise which the Senator and his party have made to the Congress and to the country.

But, no, Mr. President, they are not contained in this bill—not in this bill, but in some other bill, not at this time, but at some other time, the Senator says we are to have a fulfillment of his promises of economy.

My whole proposition originally was, that if there is to be any reduction in public expenditures under the auspices of the Democratic party, it is time it should begin. The Democratic party will not be likely to originate or propose any such economies in the next Congress. The next Congress will not have the Democratic majority which this Congress has, and therefore, if we are to practice economy under Democratic auspices and upon Democratic propositions, we must do so within the next four weeks.

Mr. President, I still ask the question, Why should we not begin? Will not the Senator name something, somewhere, that he can imprint upon the statute book of the United States as an economical reduction of expenditures devised and proposed by him?

Mr. GORMAN. Will the Senator permit me to ask him a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BLANCHARD in the chair). Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. CHANDLER. I do.

Mr. GORMAN. Does the Senator think it extravagant to make proper appropriations for the Eckington Valley sewer, the Brookland, and the Kensington avenue sewer? That is the item now under consideration, of which an explanation has been given. Is it, in the Senator's judgment, wise economy to strike out this particular provision of the bill?

Mr. CHANDLER. I am obliged to say that I have some confidence in the Appropriations Committee of the House of Representatives. I do not know whether the Senator from Maryland or the Senator from Tennessee has any confidence in that committee or in the majority in the House of Representatives; but the latter have omitted these appropriations. They are good Democrats, and certainly no safer, abler, or better than I live on the face of the earth than the present chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations. That committee has made no appropriation for the purposes named by the Senator.

Mr. GORMAN. I agree with the Senator about the ability, the standing, the integrity, and everything else good he can say of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives; but I ask the Senator, would he be willing to abdicate the right on the part of the Senate to make a proper amendment to an appropriation bill? Does the Senator say, because there is a Committee on Appropriations elsewhere, that the Senate ought not to revise and amend an appropriation bill which is sent to it?

Mr. CHANDLER. If I understand the Senator aright—I am always frank about these matters—I say that I think the Senate should on proper occasions increase appropriations; but does not the Senator think that the custom of leaving out in the House of Representatives necessary appropriations, and thus putting the odium upon the Senate of increasing every appropriation bill that comes to this body, is a bad custom?

Mr. GORMAN. I agree with the Senator there, and have so expressed myself; but the Senator must not forget that the Senate ought to revise every bill which comes here, to scrutinize it carefully, and to amend it where it is proper that it should be amended. The Committee on Appropriations think the particular provision now pending is a necessary appropriation; and I ask the Senator to state to the Senate candidly—because he is very familiar with the District—whether he does not concur with the Committee on Appropriations that the appropriation here provided for is a necessary appropriation?

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, I believe that the Democratic platform saying—

Mr. GORMAN. Oh, well, we are not discussing that.

Mr. CHANDLER. That the national expenditures ought to be reduced and that the Government should be economically administered, even if it is a Democratic platform, is correct.

Mr. GORMAN. Of course it is correct.

Mr. CHANDLER. And I want to see it carried out by the House, and if not so carried out, I want to see it carried out by the Senator from Maryland. Is not that an explicit answer to the Senator's question? [Laughter.]

Mr. GORMAN. No. I again put the question to the Senator, and I want him to give me a specific answer, whether he thinks the provision now under discussion is a proper one to be made? He is familiar with District affairs, as we all know.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, I do not know how far the sewer system of this city should be now extended. If it be true that the Senator came near losing his life or that the life of any member of his family has been imperilled by unsafe sewers, then I think the defect ought to be remedied, and it ought to be remedied at once; and I would agree that this particular item is not one to which to apply the Democratic doctrine of economy.

Mr. GORMAN. Let me appeal to the Senator to allow us to vote upon this particular amendment now, and we can go on with a general discussion when we come to some other point in the bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. Certainly, as soon as I finish.

Mr. President, I am now again approaching the inquiry, in the circle of debate with which I began, and that is, I wish to know when we are to have some economy and why we should not have it at this time. The Senator from Maryland very well knows that during the Fifty-first Congress, when these large appropriations were made, and down to a very recent period, the country was in the highest state of prosperity; the Senator knows that the Treasury of the United States was full to overflowing, and the country was then able to purchase anything which it needed. The nation was then in a condition to undertake all public works which it seemed wise to undertake; and it was expedient then to do many things which it is not safe to do now.

Within two years, Mr. President, a great change has come and a Democratic Administration has entered into power in all branches of the General Government. What has followed the advent to power of the Democratic Administration? The President has himself described the situation. He depicted it to us when he called Congress into extraordinary session on the 7th day of August, 1893. Distress and apprehension prevailed everywhere. The farmer, the manufacturer, all persons engaged in any industry were embarrassed, there was a depression of business in the country, and a condition of affairs as described by the President, which had never before existed in the life of the nation. The President called Congress together, and said the reason for the distressing condition of the country was the existence on the statute book of the Sherman law, so called.

We spent three long months here under the lead of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VORHEES] in endeavoring to bring prosperity back to the country by repealing the purchasing clause of the Sherman Act. I was very loyal to the Administration, to the President, whom the Senator from Maryland assisted so ably and so successfully in electing, whether the President himself appreciated the labors of the Senator or not, and we served faithfully under the distinguished Senator from Indiana, and at last, in the early days of November, the purchasing clause of the Sherman law was repealed.

Prosperity did not come. We were again brought into session—the regular session. After nine months a tariff bill was passed, and it was predicted that prosperity was to be restored to the country by its passage. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN], if I mistake not, announced with great confidence to the Senate that the sun of Democracy was about to rise above the horizon, and that the whole country was to be blessed by prosperity and Democracy. We have now lingered some months since we have had the full benefit of the Democratic policy. There is no purchasing of silver; there is a tariff bill upon the statute book.

I do not know by what name the Senators on the other side would prefer that I should call it. It has had a great variety of names. At first there seemed to be a desire on the part of Senators upon the other side of the Chamber to have their names affixed to the bill. Recently it has seemed to me that there has been a greater desire to get rid of the responsibility for the bill than to claim the credit of its paternity. We have had that act in operation, and yet the country is in a worse condition than ever. There is plenty of money for those who have the credit to borrow it; there is no longer a stringency in the money market, but the condition of the debtors of the country is worse than it has ever been. All branches of industry are nearer to prostration than ever. Incomes are cut off, debtors can not pay, failures are continuing, and very soon the burden of taxation, municipal, State, and national, will begin to bear with crushing weight upon the people of this country.

This is the evident situation. The dominant party present no solution of the currency question. They stand and wait for the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] to take the responsibility of some measure that will bring the currency of the country out of its present confusion. There is, therefore, nothing hopeful left for us except economy of expenditure, and if there ever was a time when some means should be devised by the majority of the political party in control of the National Government for cutting down expenditures it is now. If there ever was a moment when the active efforts of the Appropriations Committee of the Senate should be put forth to reduce expenditures to the lowest possible point it is now, and yet the same answer is made to us by the Senator from Maryland that he has given to us for the last four years, and that is that at some other time and upon some other bill this Democratic economy is to be applied.

Mr. President, I am entirely satisfied, as the result of the debate which has taken place, and after the explanations of the Senator from Maryland, that such economy is not now to be adopted. I am inclined to think he has convinced me that it ought not to be applied to this particular bill. Somewhere else, on some other bill, and at some other time we shall undoubtedly have the magnificent fruition of the Senator's promises to the country and the sun of Democracy will shine in noonday splendor.

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President, I agree with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] that the bill making appropriations for the District of Columbia is the last place to which an economical or narrow policy should be applied. Somewhere else, on some other bill, appropriations by Congress for sewers and streets and for everything else that tends to improve and beautify this city. It should be made, as I believe it will be, the grandest capital city in the world. But there is something in the pending bill which furnishes an indication of what is to follow, as has already been said by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER]. It means a large increase in the appropriations to be made by the present Congress. There can be no question about that.

Now, it is a very serious question for the dominant party in this Chamber to consider where the money is coming from to pay these expenditures.

Mr. STEWART. It will have to be borrowed.

Mr. ALDRICH. As I understand the Senator from Nevada, we have pretty nearly exhausted our borrowing power.

Mr. STEWART. We have never had that right.

Mr. ALDRICH. It is true that during the present fiscal year we have been borrowing money to pay current expenses.

Mr. CHANDLER. May I ask the Senator from Rhode Island whether the $600,000 will have to be borrowed?

Mr. ALDRICH. I presume that fund is to go into the general deficiency which is to be created by the expenditures during the current year.

I think it is incumbent upon the Senator from Maryland and his associates to tell us specifically where the money is coming from to meet these largely increased appropriations. I think at a time like this the country has a right to know from its representatives just what they propose to do when they are making these large appropriations. That is a matter certainly which should receive the serious attention of the Senate, and it should receive that attention at the beginning of these large appropriations for various purposes.

I do not object to these appropriations. I should vote for even larger ones if the Treasury were in a condition to warrant it. I believe some system of sewers ought to be adopted and the work of their construction ought to be commenced at once. I approve heartily the employment of Mr. Olmstead in the extension and improvement of the streets. I agree to everything that has been done, and I think both the Committee on the District of Columbia and the Committee on Appropriations should receive the thanks of the people of the District and of the country for their efforts in this direction. But when I am asked to concur in it is an important question to consider when we are making these large appropriations, appropriations largely increased over those of any year which has preceded, because it certainly will be found, when the present Congress shall have concluded its labors, that the appropriations made by the Fifty-third Congress will be much larger than any others in the history of the country.

If that is true, as I believe it is, and I think my suggestion will be approved by my friends on the floor [Mr. ALLISON], I say it is incumbent upon the dominant party in Congress, in the face of diminishing revenue and great business depression, to say where the money is coming from to pay those appropriations.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. President, I have listened to the remarks of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT], the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER], and the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH], and I was very anxious to learn whether the proposed appropriation is a proper one. If it is improper in the judgment of these Senators, I have so much respect for their financial wisdom that I should be inclined to vote against it, and think the Senate ought to defeat it. But if it is proper, I am utterly unable to comprehend what they have been talking about. The proposition is to make an appropriation for the extension of the sewer system of Washington.

Ought we to do it? Is it proper? The Senator from Connecticut says he does not object to any of the subjects of appropriation in the bill. I understand him to say that he does not object to the amount of any appropriation contained in the bill for any of the subjects. Then what is there in the discussion which would enlighten any of us? I am not on the Committee on the District of Columbia. I have not been able to give that attention to the affairs of the District which perhaps we ought to have done, but if the subject of appropriation is a proper one and the amount proposed to be appropriated is proper, I am really unable to comprehend what is the meaning of the speeches of the Senators to whom I have referred.

I have no disposition to go into a discussion of any question other than the immediate one before the Senate. It may be that the Democratic party made promises which it has not kept; it may be that when the Republican party comes to power, as it will in this department of the Government, it will diminish the expenses of the Government; but here is the particular subject which interests me. Am I correct when I understand the Senator from Connecticut, the Senator from Rhode Island, and the Senator from New Hampshire as admitting that the subject of the appropriation is a proper one, and that the amount proposed to be appropriated is proper? If that is the fact there ought to be no opposition to the amendment. If it is not the fact the Senate ought to defeat it. Assuming that the Senators really believe it is a proper subject for appropriation, and that this is a proper amount, understanding them to have conceded that, then relying upon their judgment and insisting that they shall be responsible for my vote, because I act upon the information I receive from them, I shall vote for the amendment.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, I have a few words to say in regard to the District of Columbia appropriation bill. It is a bill which is peculiar, and I do not think it ought to give rise to any of the subjects of discussion which usually excite debate in the Senate when the larger appropriation bills to carry on the Government of the United States are under consideration.

The District of Columbia is a corporation in which we are all interested, not only as a place of temporary residence but also for our pride in a great capital for the United States of America. It has always seemed to me that the appropriations asked for it being too large were too small. It is certain that from the taxation which has been levied upon the people of the United States and the people of the District there has always been a large surplus.

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] referred to the fact that perhaps there was some uncertainty as to where the money would come from. I can say to him that according to the public statements in the papers there is always in the treasury of the District between one and two million dollars above the amount they ought to have. According to the last statement it was $2,000,000. Then, besides that, we have by our laws levied taxes upon the people of the District, and we collect semiannually large sums of money, amounting to several million dollars. Yet the condition of the money affairs of the District is so favorable that the authorities passed over the ordinary collection of taxes due last November, and now they expect to collect those taxes, with the accruing taxes, in May. So far as the money on hand is concerned, it is ample. There is a large sum in the Treasury now to the credit of the District of Columbia.

I think the course of both the Senate and House of Representatives is constantly to restrict and meddle with a matter in which the people of the District are more deeply interested than are the members of Congress. I think myself that when the proper representatives of the District of Columbia, composed of citizens of the District and one army officer—men of two different parties and an independent one—have been asked to have any report submitted, recommend appropriations to be made, and point out the necessity for them, and they are printed in their estimates and referred to the various committees Congress should give them the utmost consideration. It seems to me that both the Senate and the House have been niggardly in complying with their requirements.

I believe that now a larger appropriation should be made. The amount of tax levied upon the people of the District of Columbia and upon the District Treasury for the last year was $2,000,000. There are appropriated in the pending bill, with the interest on the bonds of the Senate committee, only about $1,000,000, which would leave a surplus in the Treasury, including the amount paid by the Government, of about $1,000,000. It seems to me that the tax rate ought to be changed, or else appropriations should be more liberally made. That is the view I take of it.

Besides, it is to be remembered that this city is growing in the most extraordinary manner, and that the great cities of the West, but it is growing phenomenally. It has not been very many years since Washington was a poor kind of a town or village. I remember very well that at one time there was no street paved in this city except Pennsylvania avenue, and that with cobblestones. There were no street railroads at the time. It was the most ungodly city that I knew of. Vast spaces were vacant. Now it is being beautified and extended far over the District, and I have no doubt in a short period of time it will extend to the borders of the District.

We are not dealing with our money; we are dealing with the money of the people of the District, and the contributions made by the United States, not as a matter of gratuity, but because the United States owns more than one-half of all the property in the District. It has thousands of acres of land over to the south of us; it has great lands to the north of us; we have the Mall, and a vast property here, together with this building and all the public buildings here belonging to the United States of America. The United States, therefore, ought to pay its proportion of the cost of maintaining the District.

The United States is the chief owner of the property of the District and therefore it pays one-half. That was settled by a committee, after full deliberation, of which my honorable friend from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] was a member, and my former colleague, Mr. Thurman, was also a member. It was settled that the United States, as the owner of one-half of the property, should pay one-half of the taxes. That payment is not a gratuity to the people of this District. They would naturally resent it and say they ask no gratuity from the Government. It is paid because the Government is the great property holder of the District. The people here pay the other half; they pay over $8,000,000 of taxes.

Now, there never comes a complaint to us that we are appropriating too much for the District of Columbia. I have never heard of a petition or a complaint made by any citizen of Washington that Congress is too liberal in expending their money. I have heard many complaints made about the refusal of Congress to do work of public improvement here that ought to be done, that ought to have been done long ago, and has been postponed, not for want of money, but for want of the disposition to do it, because somebody in the Senate, or somebody in the House would say, "We will knock that street out; we will not extend the sewer now," not because the money is not there, but because they think it makes the appropriation bill amount to a little more than was appropriated the year before.

Sir, every year the amount of money expended in improving the city ought to be increased, because every year not less than 5,000 people are added to the population of Washington and the business of this District is growing. We should take into consideration the class of private buildings that are being erected and the private improvements made. Besides the amount of money that is expended under the operation of the District of Columbia appropriation bills, the citizens of the District are themselves making improvements on their own property to a large extent. Many streets in this city have been paved by voluntary contribution. Many have been graded by the adjoining proprietors. Many have been improved in various ways without asking the District government or Congress for any appropriation.

It seems to me that Congress ought to be liberal to the District of Columbia. I, for one, hope that the Senator from Maryland will not regard the lecture of my friend from New Hampshire too seriously, so as to disregard the wishes of the people of the District.

Mr. CHANDLER. I beg the Senator's pardon; my speeches are always as serious as his own, I think.

Mr. SHERMAN. Not quite so serious. The Senator mingles a great deal of fun with his criticism. I always like to hear him, because when the joke falls on one side or the other it is always a pleasant joke after all.

Now, Mr. President, I will leave this matter, for I do not wish to interfere with the progress of the bill. I think a liberal spirit ought to be shown to the people of this District. They take pride in this city and we ought to take pride in it. The people who come to this city from the State of Ohio want to visit every public building because they feel that it belongs to them in a certain sense. They have their partnership in it. They go around this vast building and admire it. I never heard a man complain that it was too expensive or too grand for the people of the United States of America. Everywhere this city is becoming a matter of pride to our citizens, whether from North or South, East or West, and to men who come from abroad.

The other day we had a member of Parliament admitted to the floor here and he expressed his amazement at the grandeur of our Capitol, at the beauty of our public buildings. The location of this city of Washington and everything about it excited his surprise.

Now, we want that feeling of admiration to continue. I trust that some of you at least may live long enough to see this capital, though not the most populous, yet the most beautiful, the most grand, the most pleasant of all the cities of the world.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 14, after line 24, to insert:

For constructing in part the Rock Creek and B street intercepting sewer, $55,000: Provided, That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are authorized to enter into contract for said work at a cost not to exceed $250,000, to be paid for out of the appropriations to be made by law, and that said Commissioners are authorized to construct said sewer, where necessary, across lands belonging to the United States: Provided further, That after the construction of said sewer the excavated portions of said lands shall be restored to their original condition from the appropriation herein provided for.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 16, line 10, after the word "dollars," to insert:

And the authorities in charge of preparing plans for the extension of streets are authorized to omit the circle hitherto required to be located at or near Morris street.

So as to make the clause read:

Removing Hancock Circle: For removing Hancock Circle from intersection of Sixteenth and U streets northwest, $2,500; and the authorities in charge of preparing plans for the extension of streets are authorized to omit the circle hitherto required to be located at or near Morris street.

Mr. ALDRICH. I should like to inquire about the proposed removal of Hancock Circle. How can a circle be removed?

Mr. CULLOM. By digging it up.

Mr. ALDRICH. I should like to have some statement from the Senator from Maryland on that point.

Mr. GORMAN. On Sixteenth street, at the intersection of U, there was a small circle laid out in the street, and a curb put around it, so as to designate the spot as a circle. It was found to be too small and inconvenient at that point, and it is proposed to authorize it to be removed and the curbing to be taken out, so as to leave the street in its ordinary condition. The act also provided for the location of a circle at a point farther out on Sixteenth street extended, on the hill. When the engineers came to grade the hill, which is a very steep grade, they found that the point of Morris street there was not sufficient room without condemning property on either side of the street, the cost of which would amount to over $50,000.

However, it was not the amount of money involved that was considered so much as the heavy grade, which made it an improper place for the circle; hence we provide, for the time being, that the circle at Sixteenth and U streets shall be removed and repeal the act requiring the improvement to be located at Morris street, as the House bill statute now provided for on Pennsylvania avenue, near Seventh street.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 16, line 23, before the word "thousand," to strike out "W street southward, eight" and insert "S to W streets, eighteen"; so as to make the clause read:

For paving First street extended from S to W streets, $18,000;

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 17, to insert:

For grading and regulating Sherman avenue, including widening opposite Garfield Hospital, removing buildings, terracing banks, and replacing fences, $5,000: Provided, That the authorities in charge of Garfield Hospital dedicate to the District of Columbia the ground for widening Sherman avenue on the side of the hospital, in accordance with plans on file with the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 17, after line 8, to insert:

For grading and regulating Kenesaw avenue, from Fifteenth street to the Zoological Park, $12,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 17, after line 11, to insert:

For grading and regulating Pennsylvania avenue extended and Branch avenue, $40,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 17, after line 13, to insert:

That the sum of $9,000 heretofore appropriated, but not expended, for grading and graveling Albemarle street, from Grant road to Connecticut avenue, be hereby reappropriated and made available for expenditure upon such portion of said street as may be required, and for the purposes of such purchaser condemned $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 17, after line 19, to insert:

The Commissioners of the District of Columbia are authorized and directed to extend and open Thirty-seventh street between Rock street and Tonawanda street, at or near S. Lincoln line, by condemnation or purchase, and are authorized and directed in extending and opening said street to curve it westerly to pass the house on part of lot 281, block 130, in Beaty and Hancock's addition to Georgetown, and for the purposes of such purchaser condemned $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MC MILLAN. If the Senator in charge of the bill will allow me, I should like to offer an amendment to come in at this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Michigan will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 18, after line 4, insert:

For paying Florida avenue from Connecticut avenue to Eighteenth street, $12,000.

Mr. McMILLAN. I will state that this appropriation has been recommended very highly by the District Commissioners and through some mistake the item was omitted. It is the street running from Connecticut avenue to Eighteenth street. The horse cars have their terminus there, and the street ought to have been paved some time ago. The people in that neighborhood find the street very defective. It is full of holes and very unhealthy. All the property owners join in urging that the appropriation shall be made. They will have to pay a certain proportion of the cost of the improvement. The Commissioners have written me a letter on the subject.

Mr. GORMAN. I suggest to the Senator to have the letter printed in the RECORD.

Mr. McMILLAN. Very well. I will send the letter to the desk. The letter is as follows:

OFFICE OF COMMISSIONERS OF DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
Washington, D. C., January 30, 1895.

DEAR SIR: The Commissioners have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your communication of the 28th instant with regard to an amendment to the pending District appropriation bill to pave Florida avenue from Connecticut avenue to Eighteenth street, and recommend that an appropriation of $12,000 be made for the purpose, as in the opinion of the Commissioners the proposed work is highly desirable.

Very respectfully,

JOHN W. ROSS, President.

Hon. JAMES McMILLAN,
United States Senate.

Mr. GORMAN. We are proceeding under an agreement to act upon the committee amendments first, but still, as the amendment has been explained and properly comes in at the point now under consideration, I have no objection to acting on it now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMILLAN]. The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALDRICH. There is considerable curiosity on the part of Senators around me to know why the street mentioned in the preceding paragraph is to be curved westwardly to pass a house which is described at very great length. What is the occasion for curving the street?

Mr. GORMAN. What is the item the Senator from Rhode Island refers to?

Mr. ALDRICH. What is the purpose, in the preceding paragraph, of curving the street so as to pass somebody's house to the westward?

Mr. GORMAN. That is a case concerning the extension of Thirty-seventh street. It is an important street, running through Georgetown and connecting with one of the main drives from the city, the Aqueduct road. Right on the line of the street some citizen of the District, with knowledge that that street was to be opened, although not actually condemned or provided for, built his house so that it runs over into the street, on a straight line, about 15 feet, nearly to the center of the proposed street. He did it, as is supposed, with a view to obtaining damages, and the amendment which has been agreed to simply provides for the opening of the street and making a small curve there, so as to get around that house without paying eight or ten thousand dollars as compensation, and it can be done without destroying the beauty of the street at all. I rather think it will add to the beauty of the street.

Mr. HAWLEY. It occurs to me that perhaps we are doing the greatest possible favor to this gentleman in giving him land on an open street and curving the street around his house.

Mr. ALDRICH. How much will the curve cost?

Mr. GORMAN. Very little, I imagine nothing.

Mr. ALLISON. I think this provision rather points a moral respecting some of the expenditures and appropriations for the District of Columbia. In the appropriation act last year, on the recommendation of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, the Senate Committee on Appropriations inserted a provision for the extension of Thirty-seventh street, it being a street in Georgetown of great importance and built for a considerable distance north and south. By extending it through the narrow strip of property for a distance of perhaps a thousand or fifteen hundred feet it would form a junction with the Tennallytown road at a point where the Tennallytown road is a wide country road, and where the street railway in that neighborhood, as is known, runs on the side of the road and not in the middle of it. It would enable people who might have a desire to go out on that thoroughfare to pass around by Thirty-seventh street extended, instead of passing through the narrow way now occupied by the street railroad.

The authorities of the District laid out that road upon a map and presented it to the Committee on Appropriations, and we proposed to authorize the extension and to make an appropriation of $10,000 for the purpose. Thereupon an owner of this land, the other House having failed to concur in the appropriation, applied to the District Commissioners for a permit, as every owner is required to apply for a permit, to build a frame building on one of the lots which would abut on this projected street. The Commissioners authorized him to build a frame house costing $1,500, and so located that it would be outside of the contemplated street already marked upon the map and known to him. Instead of the citizen building a house as his permit authorized him to build one, he built a frame house as has been already stated by the Senator from Maryland, practically in the middle of this projected street; and instead of building a frame house which could be easily removed to one side or the other, he built a costly and expensive brick house and abutted it in such a way as he desired. The street is to be located by a curve from an alley in another direction, so as to make it impossible for us to provide a direct roadway there without paying him the damages for the structure which he erected only last year.

Now, as this is a street running some 1,500 feet in a straight line it will be very easy so to divert it and curve it at that long distance as to escape entirely the citizen's property. That is the object we had in view, believing it to be the wisest and easiest way to get rid of the question.

Mr. CULLOM. He can get to the street if he wants?

Mr. ALLISON. I do not know, but I should think not. We got in the rear of this gentleman's property. That is the situation.

Mr. HAWLEY. Is the street to be disfigured by endeavoring to avoid that piece of property?

Mr. ALLISON. I do not think it will in any sense disfigure it. Indeed, I think it would be better if some of the suburban streets or roadways were curved a little. We have been in the practice of laying out too many streets upon straight lines. If we had curved some of the suburban streets in this city they would be much more beautiful, I think, and add to the adornment of the city.

The Senator from Maryland suggests to me the provision we have made here for the employment of Professor Olmsted, he being now in the employment of the city. He recommends and directs that the roadways shall be curved about the hills and in the valleys of the District of Columbia outside the corporate limits of the city of Washington.

While I am up, Mr. President, I should like to say one word or two more about the bill. Both the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] criticised the bill as respects the increase of appropriations made over the appropriations presented to us from the House. I had an opportunity of examining the bill with care, being a member of the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations which had the bill under consideration. I know of but one or two committee amendments that do not meet my personal approval. I had charge of the District of Columbia appropriation bill for some years when I was chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. We have endeavored so far as we could to meet substantially the pressing necessities of this District from year to year.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] is somewhat mistaken when he says that there is a large surplus in the treasury of the District over and above the expenditures. I think there is no such surplus, or, if there is, it is very small. I do not understand that there is such a surplus.

Mr. GORMAN. About $600,000.

Mr. ALLISON. There will be, but there is nothing now in the Treasury, no overlapping appropriations from the expenditures for past years.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question? I understood the Senator from Ohio to say that there were one or two million dollars of surplus, leaving the inference that there were one or two million dollars of cash in the treasury of the District subject to disbursement.

Mr. ALLISON. That is what I understood.

Mr. CHANDLER. Can it be possible that there is any such sum of money actually on hand subject to disbursement?

Mr. PLATT. That will not be needed?

Mr. ALDRICH. That will not be needed before the coming fiscal year?

Mr. ALLISON. I do not think there is any such surplus, or any surplus now.

Mr. CHANDLER. What did the Senator from Ohio refer to? What was the idea he had in mind?

Mr. ALLISON. I do not know precisely what he had in his mind unless it was that for the next fiscal year, after the new assessment comes into play, upon the estimated revenues to be derived from that assessment, and the amount included in the appropriation bill, there will be a surplus after the 1st of July, 1896, of $300,000. The Senator from Maryland has already shown in his report, if the actual receipts from taxation shall equal the amount estimated by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, but that surplus is provided for here and is gone to the payment of a portion of the debt of the District of Columbia. So there will be no money taken in the Treasury under this bill.

Mr. President, as was stated by the Senator from Ohio and others on this floor, the situation here in this District is peculiar. We have a system of government here wholly under the control of Congress. It is not within the power of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to expend one dollar unless it has been specifically appropriated for by Congress. The Commissioners, standing in the relation to this District that a city council does in the ordinary city corporation, can not under existing law employ an additional policeman without authority of Congress. They can make no expenditures, either temporary or otherwise, except as authorized in the appropriation bill.

As was truthfully said by the Senator from Maryland, Congress stands practically as the city council for this District. Therefore, it does become necessary for us to be reasonably liberal respecting the appropriation of money for the District. The money that is derived to pay these appropriations comes first from taxation in the District, and, secondly, out of the Treasury of the United States, so that one-half of the money appropriated by this bill is raised by taxation upon the individual property of the citizens of the District or persons owning property here. The other half appropriated in the bill, as is well known, comes from the Treasury of the United States, and is paid from the general fund raised by taxation in the United States.

I sympathize somewhat, I might say largely, with the rather pressing queries which have been made by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BLAIR] and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] as respects the aims and purposes of our friends when we come to speak of appropriations that are made out of the Treasury of the United States, but fortunately or unfortunately, as the case may be, the Committee on Appropriations has no more power over that question than any other Senators upon this floor. It has not the power over the question that the Committee on Finance has, of which the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] is a distinguished member. It is for that committee to originate and present to the Senate measures looking to the raising of revenue, and it is for the Committee on Appropriations to recommend the appropriation of money to carry on the Government.

Under the laws and under the practice of the Senate we are not authorized to present any proposition for the appropriation of money that has not been previously authorized by law. Therefore, when we deal with this great subject we are not so free as a committee dealing with the matter by Congress can be to throw the money shall be raised. We have bandied discussion back and forth in this Chamber now for four or five mornings upon that question, and yet there is not a Senator upon this floor who does not know that we have borrowed in the last year $100,000,000 at the rate of 5 per cent to carry on the ordinary expenditures of the Government.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. One hundred and eighteen million dollars.

Mr. ALLISON. We have borrowed $118,000,000, and the whole of it—I have not figured it up day by day—but every dollar which has been borrowed by the Secretary of the Treasury has been used not to maintain parity, as it is called, not for the distinct and separate purpose of keeping our money, whether it be gold, silver, or paper, upon an equality in circulation, but that money has been used to pay the current daily expenditures of our Government under appropriation made by Congress and under laws which have been passed by both Houses and by both parties. Does any Senator here assume for a moment that the amount of money which we have appropriated from time to time for the payment of pensions to our pensioners is to be withheld? Yet these pensions would not have been paid but for the fact that the Secretary of the Treasury went into the markets of our own country and borrowed money for that purpose.

That is the situation. We may walk at it as we may cover it up, we may omit to speak of it in our Presidential messages, we may have hearsay evidence on this floor coming from Secretaries of the Treasury, who do not communicate with us directly on this subject, we may have statements made upon one side or the other of the Chamber, but here is the fact: We have been running behind for the last year and a half, and we are running behind this month $10,000,000, and there is no human being in this Chamber, or occupying any public position, who does not know that as the months go on, certainly for this fiscal year, we shall continue to run behind. So it is a pertinent inquiry to be addressed not to the Committee on Appropriations, but to the Senate, who agree to the recommendations of the Committee from time to time, whether or not we shall go on and make these appropriations during the remaining hours of this session, as the law requires us to make them, for the purpose of paying out pensions and for conducting the great business affairs of our country, and our Government, whether we shall pay, pass, with equal step, provide beyond peradventure that we shall raise the necessary funds to pay these expenditures.

I submit to Senators, as I did only a few days ago upon this floor, that the primary duty rests upon the two Houses of Congress making these appropriations to provide money whereby they shall be paid, and it will not do to talk about a comfortable surplus of $63,000,000. If we had used the money for the purpose for which it was borrowed, the Government of the United States would be to-day in a condition of bankruptcy, and if the statements which are made here from day to day be true, the more gold that is taken out of the Treasury for the redemption of greenbacks the greater is our ability to pay the obligations and maintain the credit of this Government; for some million or ten millions of gold is taken out of the Treasury by the presentation of greenbacks under the methods which seem to prevail in the Treasury, those greenbacks are immediately transferred to the current money in the Treasury and become a comfortable surplus whereby we shall pay the debts and obligations of the Government.

Mr. GRAY. That can not be avoided, can it?

Mr. GRAY. I know.

Mr. ALLISON. What I wish to say is that we should not attempt to escape from the fact that every time a million dollars of gold is taken out of the Treasury a million dollars of greenbacks is put in, and that that is money for the purpose of paying the current expenditures of our Government. I repeat what I have said at least twice before on this floor at this session, that it is our primary duty to put money in the Treasury, not for the purpose of maintaining parity, but to put it in the Treasury for the purpose of carrying on the ordinary expenditures of our Government, and if we are obliged to borrow money whereby we shall keep all our currency at an equality, let us borrow it for that purpose, and keep it for that purpose, in order that there may be no possibility of misunderstanding the position that we occupy as to the question of maintaining the parity of our money.

Therefore, I say, it is a pertinent inquiry and covers the whole of this question, whether we shall make appropriations from day to day and from week to week to carry on the Government when we know, or at least have reason to believe, that, unless we trench upon the power and authority given for a wholly different purpose and upon money borrowed for a wholly different purpose, we can not pay the appropriations we make.

So I submit to Senators that we can not, if we would, escape our responsibility for the appropriations we make day by day as we make the appropriations and as we provide for the expenditures of the Government.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. President, I want to call the attention of the Senator from Iowa, to whom I listened with great pleasure, to the point he was last making, that where any Secretary of the Treasury had issued bonds, and brought thereby gold into the Treasury, that gold was taken out by the presentation of greenbacks constantly, and was now in the process of depletion, so that when these greenbacks came into the Treasury they were carried into the ordinary expenditures of the Government and used to pay the ordinary appropriations of the Government. It was about that I asked the Senator a moment ago. Is not this the mechanism, so to speak, of that process, that the gold being in the Treasury, the greenback is presented, and the gold is paid for it; therefore, the greenback is there and not the gold, and by law that greenback must be reissued, for the law says after it is redeemed it shall be reissued. I perfectly understood the Senator's statement, and I want to know if that is not obligatory upon the Secretary of the Treasury?

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, that is a question quite aside from what I have been discussing, and which can not be answered in a moment. To answer that question properly we must first decide what is a reserve.

In 1875 we passed a law which provided for the redemption of our greenback currency, and in that same law we provided that the Secretary of the Treasury might reduce that greenback currency to $300,000,000, and no more.

In 1878 we also provided that the greenback currency should stand precisely where it stood upon the day that that law was passed. We also provided in the law of 1875 that the Secretary of the Treasury might, either from the revenues or by sale of any of the bonds authorized to be sold by the law of 1870, have a reserve fund for what? For this purpose only: For the redemption of greenbacks, as I have noted. That reserve was not stated specifically as to its amount, but the Secretary of the Treasury did practically sell $95,500,000 of bonds for the purpose, for the distinct purpose of this redemption, and put the proceeds in the Treasury. Then, although he did not lay aside any specific sum in addition to that, he did provide that the gold in the Treasury at the time and not used for current purposes, paying the interest on the public debt, etc., should be also retained. So for some years, at least during the term of Secretary Sherman, and perhaps for some years afterwards, this reserve amounted to be more than $100,000,000, and sometimes it was as high as $130,000,000.

Now, the question arises, what was that reserve? It so hap-relieve the beneficiary of the bill from the penalties of the act on alienage in regard to holding real estate in the District of Columbia. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. Unless some gentleman desires an explanation I will ask for the previous question on the passage of this bill.

Mr. PAYNE. Is that the bill that was up before?

Mr. COBB of Alabama. It is a similar one.

Mr. HOPKINS of Illinois. How similar? That is pretty general.

Mr. HEARD. Vote!

Mr. COBB of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, gentlemen call for an explanation. The beneficiary of this bill is a native of Wales, and was brought to this country when an infant, forty years ago. She bought real estate in the District of Columbia before she was naturalized. She has since been naturalized, and now she simply asks to be relieved of the danger of forfeiture of her estate under the act passed in 1876. [Cries of "Vote!"]

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. COBB of Alabama, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

JONATHAN KIRKWOOD, DECEASED.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, I now ask the same privilege for the bill which I now call up—that it be considered in the House as the Committee of the Whole. It is the bill (H. R. 8604) for the relief of the heirs and devisees of Jonathan Kirkwood, deceased. This is a similar bill to the other.

The SPEAKER. Has the bill been reported?

Mr. COBB of Alabama. It was reported yesterday.

The SPEAKER. It has not yet returned from the Printing Office. If the gentleman has the report he will please send it up.

Mr. HEARD. I have not the report; but I handed it in yesterday. I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the report.

The SPEAKER. Perhaps the gentleman can get along without the reading of the report.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all real estate lying in the District of Columbia heretofore purchased by Jonathan Kirkwood, deceased, and devised by him to be released and extended from the operation of an act entitled "An act to regulate the ownership of real estate in the Territories to American citizens," approved March 3, 1857, and all forfeitures incurred by force of said act are, in respect to such real estate, hereby remitted to the American heirs and to the devisees under the last will and testament of said Jonathan Kirkwood, their heirs and assigns.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to consider this bill in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. Does any gentleman desire an explanation of this bill?

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. I think we ought to have the report on this bill read.

The SPEAKER. Of course the rule does not require that.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. I do not ask for the report. I ask to have it read.

The SPEAKER. It can only be read in the time of the gentleman.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. I understand. I would like to have either the report read or the gentleman to give an explanation of the bill.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. I will do that if the gentleman will allow me.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. Yes.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. The facts in this case, Mr. Speaker, are these: Jonathan Kirkwood was a citizen of the United States residing in the District of Columbia, and of foreign birth. He died here, and by will devised certain real estate which he had purchased in the District of Columbia to three parties who were at the time living in Scotland. Two of these parties have since died. One of them and the American heirs of these deceased parties have agreed together upon a distribution of this estate; and simply to remove this cloud from the title, so as to enable the distribution to be made according to the will, this bill is introduced. I ask for a vote.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed. On motion of Mr. COBB of Alabama, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

CONVEYANCE OF LANDS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up for consideration the bill (H. R. 6197) to amend the laws relating to conveyances of land in the District of Columbia.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the terms "heirs," or other words of like import, shall not be required in any deed or will hereafter made of land in the District of Columbia to convey or create an estate in fee simple, but every grant or devise of land in said District hereafter made shall vest in the grantee or devisee all the interest and estate, legal and equitable, of the grantor or devisee in the premises granted or devised, unless an intent to pass a less estate or interest shall be expressed or necessarily implied.

Sec. 2. That where two or more persons are named as grantees or devisees in any deed or will hereafter made, except when named or taking as trustees, such persons shall be deemed and held to take as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, unless the contrary intent is expressed. Any two or more tenants in common may be joined as plaintiffs or defendants in any suit or action hereafter brought relating to land held or claimed in common or coparcenarily.

Mr. HEARD. I now yield to the gentleman from Alabama, who reported the bill.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, the bill sufficiently explains itself. It simply asks to have done here what has been done in almost every State in the Union.

Mr. HEBURN. What is that?

Mr. COBB of Alabama. That it is not necessary to put the word "heirs" in a deed.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. COBB of Alabama, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed, was laid on the table.

INCLUDING "GEORGETOWN" IN "WASHINGTON."

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (S. 445) supplementary to an act entitled "An act to provide a government for the District of Columbia," approved February 21, 1871, and also an act entitled "An act for the government of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved June 30, 1874.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That from and after the passage of this act all that part of the city of Georgetown embraced within the bounds and now constituting the city of Georgetown, as referred to in said acts of February 21, 1871, and June 30, 1874, shall no longer be known by the name and title in law of the city of Georgetown, but the same shall be known as and shall constitute a part of the city of Washington, the Federal Capital; and all general laws, regulations, and ordinances of the city of Georgetown be, and the same are hereby, extended and made applicable to that part of the District of Columbia formerly known as the city of Georgetown; and all general laws, regulations, and ordinances of the city of Georgetown be, and the same are hereby, repealed; that the title and existence of said Georgetown as a separate and independent city by law is hereby abolished; that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, directed to cause the nomenclature of the streets and avenues of Georgetown to conform to those of Washington so far as practicable.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this bill is merely to abolish Georgetown as a separate city from Washington.

Mr. PAYNE. I notice that the bill repeals all the acts and ordinances of the municipal organization of Georgetown, while it contains no saving clause as to any rights arising under those acts and ordinances, and in respect to any litigation or suits that may be pending under them. Ought there not to be a saving clause in the bill?

Mr. HEARD. This is a Senate bill, and has the approval of the Commissioners of the District.

Mr. COBB of Alabama (reading from the bill). "And all general laws, regulations, and ordinances of the city of Georgetown be, and the same are hereby, repealed"—I do not think that that would operate retrospectively at all.

Mr. PAYNE. I think that if there was some man who was to be punished under the municipal regulations of Georgetown he would go scot free under the provisions of this bill.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. Well, let him go free. That would not do much harm.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. I will ask the gentleman in charge of this bill what the people of Georgetown and the corporation of Georgetown have to say to this proposed consolidation?

Mr. COBB of Alabama. There has been no protest against the bill except in one respect, and that has been provided for by an amendment. There was a protest against the passage of the bill unless it made provision for renumbering the squares in Georgetown, and such a provision is included in the bill by an amendment.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. In other words, the corporation of Georgetown have no objection and have assented to this bill?

Mr. COBB of Alabama. That is my understanding.

Mr. COOMBS. How long has this matter been agitated?

Mr. COBB of Alabama. For a long time. We have here this report of the District Commissioners recommending it. The protest to which I have called attention came from a very few citizens.

Mr. COOMBS. You must understand that we people who live in Brooklyn are very sore upon the question of consolidation.

[Laughter.]

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. Does the gentleman know whether this question has been presented to the citizens of Georgetown and whether they have assented?

Mr. HEARD. I will state to the gentleman that I understand that to be the case. The matter was fully considered by the Commissioners of the District, and the only objection that was made has been obviated by an amendment.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. But my question is whether the people of Georgetown have had notice of this attempt to abolish their separate organization.

Mr. HEARD. It has been pending for months and months. Mr. BELTZHOOVER. That is not an answer either. No matter how long it has been pending, my question is whether the people know that you are about to legislate their city corporation out of existence.

Mr. HEARD. Yes, sir. There has been ample notice given, in my judgment, to all the parties concerned. The bill was introduced in the Senate on March 22, 1894, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia. It came here on January 25, 1895, and was reported with amendments, referred to the House Calendar, and ordered to be printed. If the gentleman from Pennsylvania objects to the present consideration of this bill I will lay it aside rather than obstruct the business of the committee.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. I merely wanted to know whether the parties concerned have had due notice.

Mr. HEARD. I will say, Mr. Chairman, that every person who has spoken to me on the subject, or so far as I know, to any member of the Committee, has favored the bill with the amendment to which I have already referred, and the Commissioners also favor it. That amendment is in these words:

And the said Commissioners are also directed to have the squares in Georgetown renumbered, so that no square shall hereafter bear a like number to any square in the city of Washington. Provided, That nothing in this act shall operate to affect or repeal existing law making Georgetown a port of entry, except as to its name.

Those were the points about which objection was made to the original bill, and the objections have been met in this bill. So far as I know there is no other objection.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. All I desire to know is whether the committee that considered and reported this bill have knowledge that the citizens of Georgetown are satisfied with it.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. The Committee on the District of Columbia referred this matter to the Commissioners. The Commissioners reported favorably on the bill. They also transmitted to the committee a protest signed by four prominent citizens, the president of the Real Estate Title Company, the president of the Columbia Title Company, the president of the Washington Title Company, and the president of the District Title Company, protesting against the passage of the bill without some provision for the renumbering of the squares. This matter has been pending since December 1, 1893, when it was reported, and no other protest has been received. The committee recognized the propriety of the objections made to the original bill by the gentleman who made this protest, and amended the bill accordingly.

Mr. COOMBS. I ask that the report be read.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. Another question: I understand that the suggestions embraced in that protest made by four representative gentlemen of Georgetown have been complied with?

Mr. COBB of Alabama. Ever one.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. Now, another question: Will this bill increase the expense to the United States in connection with the government of the District of Columbia, in the payment of the one-half or whatever other portion the United States may be called upon to pay?

Mr. COBB of Alabama. I think not.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. Have you investigated?

Mr. COBB of Alabama. No; Georgetown is already a part of the District of Columbia.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Georgetown is already a part of the District of Columbia; and this bill does not change its relations in that respect.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. I understand that. I simply asked whether this bill will in any way tend to increase the expenses of the Government.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Not at all. The District of Columbia now embraces Georgetown.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. Very well. "Not at all" is an answer.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. I ask for a vote on the amendment. The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time.

The SPEAKER (having put the question on the passage of the bill). The yeas seem to have it.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. I call for a division.

Mr. HEARD. I desire to withdraw the bill. I do not want to have this day wasted over this matter, although I know it is one to which there is no objection. I desire to withdraw the bill.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the bill will be withdrawn.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. I object to the withdrawal. I think I have a right to object.

The SPEAKER. It occurs to the Chair that the gentleman has a right to withdraw the bill.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. I raise this parliamentary point: This bill has been read the third time; and the question having been put on the final passage, I called for a division. I do not think the gentleman can now withdraw the bill.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Does the objection of the gentleman from Pennsylvania go to the merits of this bill? If so, the Committee on the District of Columbia, in the interest of legislation for the District, would desire to take up some other meritorious bills to which there is no objection. I hope the gentleman will state whether he objects to this measure especially. It puts us in a very awkward attitude not to be able to legislate at all upon measures of very great merit.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. In reply to the gentleman, I would say that I represent here the great State of Pennsylvania, which for four years has begged of this House to give it simple consideration of a measure in which it is largely interested; and that opportunity has been denied us again and again for four years.

Mr. HEARD. But our committee has not had anything to do with it.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. But your committee has taken to-day for this business on your request—the very day to which we were entitled for the consideration of bills on the Private Calendar.

Mr. HEARD. I beg the gentleman's pardon; his statement is incorrect. This day was not assigned for District business on our suggestion.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Not only that; but the gentleman from Pennsylvania must have consented to the order fixing to-day for District business, because it was adopted by unanimous consent.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. No; it was not adopted by unanimous consent.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Yes, it was; and therefore the gentleman must have consented to it.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. It was by unanimous consent that Thursday was assigned to District business.

Mr. HEARD. But later we were assigned to-day by unanimous consent.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. No.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The gentleman who made the request can state what was the fact.

Mr. DOCKERY (to Mr. BELTZHOOVER). You are mistaken; this day was fixed for District business by unanimous consent.

Mr. HEARD. Undoubtedly it was; we are not to blame for the change which was made; we would have preferred Thursday.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. Well, if gentlemen are through, I wish to make a statement.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. Let me say to the gentleman—

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. There is no use in debating it. I do not propose to yield any of the rights I have. The Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar has been treated unfairly. Without their consent the only day they have has been taken over and over again.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. That is not the fault of our committee.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. An advantage was taken of my absence and the absence of other members of the committee to ask unanimous consent, when it was well known that we would have objected if we had been present.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I can state in a moment how this occurred.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. I do not care to learn. If it occurred when I was out, the gentleman who made the request knew that I would object if present.

Mr. CATCHINGS. No, I did not know that. I did not think of you at the time. We were discussing the consideration of that bill with reference to the differential duty on sugar, and by the order of the Committee on Rules the further consideration of that bill was fixed for Monday, and Thursday was assigned to the Committee on the District of Columbia. Then when the question of the discussion of the Pacific railroads bill came up, and the matter of this was being considered, the gentleman from Maine suggested that Thursday be dispossessed and Friday given to the Committee on the District of Columbia, so that that bill could go on yesterday. I asked unanimous consent myself for the substitution of this day, and no one objected.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. Because I was not here, and when consent was asked on Monday to fix Friday for the District of Columbia the gentleman [Mr. CATCHINGS] heard me object and asked me to withdraw the objection, which I refused to do.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. I want to appeal to the gentleman to allow the District of Columbia Committee to transact a little business to-day.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. Let the gentleman from Alabama address his appeal to the Committee on Rules, and if he is successful there then he can appeal to me.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. There are two things I want to call the attention of the gentleman to. One is that the Committee on the District of Columbia is not responsible at all for the condition of things existing. We did not want the change; we did not ask for it. We asked for Thursday, and that was assigned to us.

Another thing is that if the gentleman obstructs the course of the business from the District of Columbia Committee it will not be fit him in the least, because under the rule when we yield the floor to-day it goes immediately to the other business, that is, the Pacific railroads bill, and not to the Private Calendar.

Now, in view of that bill of facts I appeal to the gentleman to allow us to pass a few bills to-day to which no one can object, in the interest of the people of the District of Columbia. We have done nothing ourselves to bring about the condition of affairs to which the gentleman objects.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. I simply want to say in reply to the gentleman what I said when I commenced, and that is that for one I must object to this way of transacting business. We have been again and again dispossessed by the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. Not by our committee.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. Well, in some way or other they have often managed to take private-bill day and assign it to some other committee. On last Friday you took it against our wish and consent, because it so happened that none of us were here when the request was made.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. It is not our intention or desire to do so. Mr. BELTZHOOVER. Perhaps, but the permission is asked, by some strange coincidence, whenever we happen to be away for a moment.

A MEMBER. Why are you not here?

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. Because we did not suppose it would be necessary at every moment of the day to be on the watch for these requests.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. Let me ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. No; I can not yield.

Mr. TALBOTT of Maryland. Well, I will ask the gentleman anyhow. How in the world was the bill that he had charge of to be considered if he was not present?

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. It was not in order except on Friday, and the gentleman knows very well that I would be here to look after it. We have asked again and again to take it up, and it has been crowded out by some means or other.

Mr. GROUT. Let me ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BELTZHOOVER] if he does not think he has sufficiently emphasized his position, and whether he does not think we will get along better by letting the business proceed now?

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. No. I have made up my mind that the only way to get your rights is to assert them, and, if innocent men suffer, no gentleman has suffered more than we have suffered.

Mr. LOUD. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has allowed his bill to be passed over time and again. Why not allow it now?

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. I have accommodated all others as far as I could. Now I insist upon my rights.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. I appeal to the gentleman to withdraw his objection. I will join with him in an effort to get consideration of his bill if we can have this time for the District.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. I can not yield to the gentleman's proposition. I must resist all such appeals and insist on a quorum.

Mr. COOPER of Florida. Very well, let the House decide the matter.

Mr. HEARD. Yes; let the House decide it.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I ask a vote.

Mr. HEARD. I withdraw my request, and ask a vote now upon the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the yeas seemed to have it.

Mr. BELTZHOOVER. Division.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. The yeas and nays, Mr. Speaker. [Cries of "Oh, no!"] I withdraw it.

The SPEAKER. On this question the yeas are 100, the nays 1. Mr. BELTZHOOVER. No quorum.

Mr. HEARD. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will appoint as tellers the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HEARD] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BELTZHOOVER].

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 214, nays 3, answered "present" 6, not voting 136; as follows:

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolutions will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

STATE OF CONNECTICUT.

(General Assembly, January session, A. D. 1895.)

Resolution concerning the relations of the United States with the Republic of Hawaii.

Whereas many of the citizens of the State of Connecticut are personally interested in the financial and commercial affairs of the Hawaiian group of islands;

And whereas we believe that every true American citizen is interested in sustaining a republican form of government in these islands; Therefore,

Resolved, That we, the undersigned Senators and Representatives in Congress, do advocate and support all measures and resolutions looking to the stability of the Hawaiian Government, and that we deprecate the with-drawal of the American flag from Honolulu, and while heartily con-curring in the previous action of the President in his treatment of the strug-gling Republic, we commend his recent though tardy action in dispatching the battleship Albatross to Honolulu, in protest against any abrogation of the Hawaiian treaty which will give Great Britain a foothold or claim upon any island of the Hawaiian group, or which will allow any submarine cable that is not under the supervision and control of the United States or of the Hawaiian Government to be laid upon any of said islands.

We learn with profound regret and indignation of the sad death at Honolulu of Mr. Charles Carter, who was a recent graduate of one of our American colleges, and who was allied by blood and friendship to many of our citizens, and we extend to his bereaved family our sincerest sympathy.

That the adoption of these resolutions be transmitted to each of our Sen-ators and Representatives. Passed January 23, 1895.

House of Representatives. Passed January 23, 1895.

PROVISION FOR REVENUE DEFICIENCY.

Mr. McPHERSON. I send to the desk a resolution, for which I ask immediate consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Jersey asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a resolution, which will be read for information, and carry into effect the following:

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Finance be discharged from the further consideration of Senate bill 2598, a bill to provide for a temporary deficiency of revenue, and that said bill be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. VEST. The chairman of the Committee on Finance is not in the Chamber, and I do not think the resolution ought to be considered in his absence.

Mr. COCKRELL. I object to the present consideration of the resolution. Let it go over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection being interposed, the resolution will go over under the rule, and be printed.

Mr. McPHERSON. I give notice that I shall call up the resolution to-morrow morning.

FORT TOTTEN MILITARY POST.

Mr. HANSBROUGH submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, directed to furnish for the use of the Senate all information in his possession relative to the establishment and maintenance of the military post of Fort Totten, upon the Crow and Sioux Indian Reservation in the present State of North Dakota. This information shall be furnished in writing, and shall include the date of the establishment of said post, the cost of the construction of the original buildings as well as those now standing, the extent of the military forces stationed there from time to time, and the relative to contracts for material to be used in the construction of post buildings, and contracts for fuel and levy for the use of the military forces stationed at said post.

COLLECTION OF INCOME TAX.

Mr. HILL. I offer a resolution, which I ask may be considered at this time.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be directed to transmit to the Senate copies of all blank forms which are now being distributed to be filled out and sworn to as returns of the existing income, and also to transmit a statement showing what parts of such blanks, including the interrogatories therein, are based upon specific provisions of law, and what part are additional requirements of the Secretary.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. VEST. Let the resolution go over.

Mr. SHERMAN. The resolution should be addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury, and not to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. I have no other objection to it. The information called for should come from the head of the Department.

Mr. CHANDLER. I suggest to the Senator from New York to modify his resolution in accordance with the suggestion of the Senator from Ohio, by calling upon the Secretary of the Treasury for the information. With that modification I do not see how there can be any objection to the resolution.

Mr. HILL. I will accept that suggestion, and modify the resolution accordingly. It is probably better that the resolution should be addressed to the head of the Department.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. VEST. Let the resolution go over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection being interposed, the resolution will go over, and be printed.

EMPLOYMENT OF STENOGRAPHER.

Mr. HILL submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay out of the contingent fund of the Senate the sum of $100 to Herman Paul for reporting and transcribing the statements of W. G. McAdoo, J. H. Barr, David McKim, Robert F. Pratt, Foster V. Brown, and Tully R. Clark before the subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate in the matter of the confirmation of Charles D. Clark, nominated by the President to be United States district judge for the middle and eastern districts of Tennessee.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL—CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I submit at this time the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, and move its adoption.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The report will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8236) "making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, and for other purposes," having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 7 and 13.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 12, and 14, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 11, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out in line 15, page 13, in the bill the words "and cost of transportation" and insert in lieu thereof "cost of transportation, and the interests of the Government;" and the Senate agree to the same.

J. O. C. S. BLACKBURN,

F. M. COCKRELL,

H. M. TELLER.

Managers on the part of the Senate.

JOS. H. OUTHWAITE,

O. LAFAYETTE,

J. A. T. HULL.

Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. MITCHELL, of Oregon. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator from Kentucky in charge of this bill what has been an amendment of the Senate providing that the forts at Wallawalla and Vancouver shall not be interfered with in view of the provision for the establishment of a fort or forts at Spokane? It will be remembered that the Senate, after a lengthy discussion, agreed by a very large vote that a provision should be inserted in the bill to the effect that nothing therein provided looking to the establishment of a fort at Spokane should be construed as authorizing the abandonment upon the part of the War Department of the fort at Wallawalla and the fort at Vancouver. I should like to be advised by the Senator in charge of the bill as to what has been done with that amendment of the Senate.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I will answer, Mr. President, and say that the Senate did put in the amendment, as stated by the Senator from Oregon. That paragraph of the bill authorized the War Department to establish military posts at or near Spokane upon certain conditions, on the conveyance of a thousand acres of land upon certain limitations as to location by the Government. It authorized the Secretary of War to establish military posts of such capacity and character as, in his judgment, might be proper at or near Spokane. To that, upon motion of the Senator from Oregon, the Senate added that nothing contained in the paragraph authorizing the establishment of a new military post at Spokane should on and take the whole matter in charge. The Appropriations Committee would welcome the cooperation of the District of Columbia Committee in this matter, and would like to have (I think I can speak for the committee) this great subject taken up as if nothing had been exploded heretofore. The question whether you are serious about the old plan is nothing. What we are interested in is a new plan, something that shall give us water.

My object was not to find fault with one committee or another. That is easy enough for anybody to do. It is the part of good legislation to suggest a plan. My main object in saying what I did was to bring before the Senate, and especially before the minds of the Senator from Tennessee and other members of the District Committee, the importance of something being actually done on new lines in the direction.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, it is pleasant to be able unqualifiedly to commend the proposed action of the Senate Committee on Appropriations on this subject, and I think the Senator from Tennessee will concur in what the committee propose to do.

Mr. HARRIS. I do very thoroughly.

Mr. CHANDLER. It is true that it might be well enough to provide the $125,000 for raising the dam at Great Falls at this time, but it is not absolutely essential. The plan proposed as an alternative by the Senate Committee is more comprehensive and will result, I believe, in entirely remedying the faults in connection with our water supply, of which the Senator from Maine has spoken.

Now, the House committee began a good work. It has appropriated $37,500 to be immediately available under the direction of Colonel Elliot, who is to be kept upon the active list for that purpose, for the improvement of the Dalecarlia receiving reservoir. That I understand to be the reservoir in the hills beyond Georgetown, which is now filled with soft earth and holds muddy water, and is so surrounded by earth hills that the washings from those hills pollute the water and make it useless. It stands there, as I understand, as a useless reservoir to-day. So the House committee has wisely provided that that reservoir shall be cleaned out and that we shall have a better settling basin for the water of Potomac than we now have. So that, to some extent, the muddy water we see in such abundance in the winter and in the spring season (indeed we are likely to see it at all seasons of the year) shall be remedied. That is the first thing which the House committee did; and the Senate committee propose that the Senate shall concur, and the Senate has already concurred in the adoption of that amendment.

Now, the House, as I said, provided $125,000 for raising the dam at the Great Falls. That ought to be done, and unquestionably it will be done. I think it is not material whether it is done this year or next. But in addition, the Senate Committee have taken up the important question of the water supply and propose to have it exhaustively treated between now and next December by a suitable investigation by the proper officer of the Government, with whom, by the special directions of this act, General Casey is to be associated, and their report is to cover not only the question of the raising of the dam (upon that point there can be no doubt it will be done), they will report that the dam ought to be raised), but they will also take up the feasibility and propriety of completing the tunnel conduit.

The predecessor of the present junior Senator from Vermont in the report which he made I always thought too summarily condemned as useless the tunnel conduit. That Senator was strong in all his conclusions, vigorous in all his utterances, and because he found some frauds had been committed and that there were some questions connected with the usefulness of the tunnel, he thought it prudent to condemn it. I think that is only what he should do.

I think, Mr. President, I thought at the time, that a mistake was made. That tunnel had been completed at a very great expense. It was adapted to carrying the water from the aqueduct beyond Georgetown under Rock Creek to a very large new reservoir out near Howard University. I am not aware of the name of that reservoir, but it is a broad, large, and capacious reservoir, and, as I understand, the reservoir itself was substantially completed. If I am not mistaken, the Senator from Maryland will correct me.

But there is an immense reservoir, and if the Dalecarlia reservoir were completed, and this reservoir completed, and the water should enter it, my judgment may be worth but little, but in my judgment there would be gain in these reservoirs, in connection with the existing settling reservoirs at Georgetown, ample provision for giving the city of Washington not only enough water but clean and pure water. The water is pure enough now for that reason, because the pollution is only slight. It is not seriously defective. We wash in the course of our lives, but we wash or less dirt anyway, and the little that we get in this water is not particularly harmful, although it makes the water unpleasant to the sight.

Now, the amendment proposes that the proper officer of the Government under the War Department, General Casey, shall reinvestigate this whole subject, and I have no doubt at all that the large amount of money that has been expended on the tunnel conduit can be utilized. I do not know how much has been expended on it. Can the Senator from Maryland inform me?

Mr. GORMAN. A little over $2,000,000.

Mr. CHANDLER. I have no doubt that expenditure of over $2,000,000 can be utilized. It may be that the tunnel can not be lined with brick that the water can be turned directly into the tunnel, but it can be lined with pipes, and within two years from now we can have the whole enterprise revived and have an abundant supply of water in the city of Washington. So that we shall not have the Senator from Maine again complaining of the insufficient water supply or again complaining of the Senator from Tennessee because he does not furnish a sufficient water supply for the District of Columbia.

I therefore gladly decided approval to this scheme. I think the Committee on Appropriations are to be commended for having taken up this subject and having reached the conclusion that the $2,000,000 heretofore expended shall not be wasted and thrown away, as it stands wasted and thrown away to-day.

Mr. McMillan. Mr. President, I should like to say just one word. The amount of money now in the Treasury belonging to the District funds which has been appropriated for this very purpose amounts to $150,000. That amount is ready to be applied to completing the tunnel whenever it is decided that the work shall be prosecuted.

Mr. PROCTOR. Mr. President, the Senator from Maine [Mr. Hale] wishes to have comprehensive and thorough action taken by the District Committee. I suppose, in reference to the water supply. That committee did consider the question and presented a report, and the bill is now on the Calendar. The report from Colonel Elliot is very full and able and strong, insisting that the first step should be to acquire the whole water right at Great Falls. The committee were fully satisfied that that is the true initial point to get an ample supply of water.

The pending bill as it comes to us from the House provides an appropriation of $125,000, I believe, for raising the dam there. The committee in its investigation, guided mainly by Colonel Elliot, of course, were satisfied that it was an expensive policy to take that water right by piecemeal. We shall certainly be taking in the next twenty-five years several bites from the cherry, and at every bite we shall have to pay practically for the whole cherry. The water right might now be obtained at probably half or less than half what it will cost us in a few years to obtain it by piecemeal. We should then know that we would have an ample supply for all time. That bill, presented late, has not been called up in this short session, but I hope it may be acted upon at the next session of Congress.

Mr. HUNTON. I sympathize very fully with what has been said by Senators in regard to the necessity for an ample supply of pure water for the people of the District of Columbia; but I do not sympathize with the assaults which have been made upon the Committee on the District of Columbia, and I feel sure that nobody will consider the criticisms upon that committee just after the remarks which have fallen from the Senator from Vermont [Mr. Proctor]. So anxious am I to have this work completed in the shortest possible time that I desire to see this bill perfected so that there will be no delay growing out of the imperfections of the bill.

It does seem to me that this provision is liable to the same criticism which I made upon the preceding clause. This provides that General Casey shall be associated with the engineer officer, and shall sign the report. If General Casey should die or suffer disability, he could not be associated with the engineer officer and could not sign the report.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator allow me?

Mr. HUNTON. Certainly.

Mr. CHANDLER. I sustained the Senator's prior objection, because if Colonel Elliot did not do the work nobody could do it; but in this case there is another and proper officer of the Government who will make an investigation and make the report. We simply require General Casey to join in that report. If he is dead and can not do it, then he will not, but the other officer of the Government will go right on and make the report, and we shall take it for what it is worth. We can not prolong General Casey's life or his physical and mental ability to do this thing by our legislation. We have another officer to do the work if General Casey is not able to join in it.

Mr. HUNTON. I should be very glad to unite with the Senator in prolonging the life of that distinguished officer.

Mr. CHANDLER. I should like to see the bill passed. I think Mr. HUNTON. But while I am thankful for the concurrence of the Senator from New Hampshire in my first amendment, I still insist upon the second, notwithstanding his nonconcurrence. While he is right in saying that General Casey should be associated with the bill is peremptory that General Casey shall be associated with him.

Mr. CHANDLER. But it does not stop the other officer from doing the work if General Casey dies.

Mr. HUNTON. Of course not; but when the result of the work comes to us in the shape of a report under this bill, some gentleman who is critical to some extent, like the Senator from New Hampshire, will say: "This is not the report provided for; we want the report of General Casey." I propose to remedy that; so that there can be no possibility of delay on that account. It is very easily done, and I think the Senator from Maryland will hardly object.

Mr. GORMAN. I think such a provision as the Senator suggests is not necessary.

Mr. HUNTON. I should say:

Provided, That in the preparation of this report Gen. Thomas L. Casey, United States Army, shall, if practicable, be associated, etc.

Then I would say in the seventeenth line—

And if so associated, his signature shall be attached to the report.

Mr. CHANDLER. I think the amendment is entirely reasonable. I did not know but the Senator was going to insist upon prolonging General Casey's life by some act of legislation.

Mr. HUNTON. Oh, no. I wish I could. I offer the amendment. Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GALLINGER in the chair). The amendment of the Senator from Virginia will be stated.

The Secretary. After the word "shall," in line 15 of the amendment, on page 24, it is proposed to insert the words "if practicable;" and after the word "and," in line 17 of the amendment, to insert the words "if so associated."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President—

Mr. ALDRICH. I desire to speak on the general proposition. I do not care to speak upon the amendment which is pending.

Mr. GORMAN. I will give way to the Senator if he desires.

Mr. ALDRICH. I do not care to speak now. I am perfectly willing that the amendment suggested by the Senator from Virginia to the amendment of the committee shall be adopted.

Mr. GORMAN. I trust the amendment will not be adopted. I think it mars the whole structure of the provision. I think, with the Senator from New Hampshire, that there is no earthly necessity for an amendment at that point, and with all due respect to any distinguished friend from Virginia, I trust he will withdraw his amendment and let the provision stand. It is perfectly clear, as stated by the Senator from New Hampshire, that if Gen. Thomas L. Casey shall be then living and in good physical condition he will be required to join in the report, and we want his report and examination; but if he passes away or becomes disqualified in any way, we should, of course, lose his services, and they would be a very great loss to the country. I trust the Senator in this case will withdraw his amendment to the amendment, and permit the amendment to stand as reported by the committee.

Mr. HUNTON. At the instance of the Senator from Maryland, I withdraw the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. GORMAN. Now, if the Senator from Rhode Island desires to speak, I have nothing to say at this point.

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President, I am in full sympathy with the Senator from New Hampshire in regard to this amendment, and I am only surprised that that Senator should agree with the committee which proposes to strike out the provision inserted by the House of Representatives. The bill as it comes from the House of Representatives provides for the appropriation of $125,000 for the raising of the dam at the Great Falls and for the immediate prosecution of that work. If there is any question as to who shall have charge of that work, let General Casey be associated with the engineer in charge, and let the work proceed. The suggestion of the members of the Committee on Appropriations means a delay of one year, and probably a delay of several years. There have been all kinds of reports upon this question by all kinds of officers under all sorts of conditions. It seems to me that in justice to the people of the District of Columbia this work should now be prosecuted.

The Senator from New Hampshire, with his acute mind, has been criticising the pending bill from its inception to the present time, and when we have reached the first questionable item in the bill I am very much surprised to find him unqualifiedly supporting the committee.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator allow me at that point?

Mr. ALDRICH. Certainly.

Mr. CHANDLER. My criticisms were economical criticisms. I find the committee here strike out an appropriation of $125,000 and substitute for the appropriation of $125,000 in these hard times a proposition to investigate, which I have favored, and the Senator says I am therefore inconsistent.

Mr. ALDRICH. There is already in the Treasury $300,000 which can be used for this very purpose; so there is no question of economy involved. It is only a question whether the money shall be expended now or at a later time.

Mr. CHANDLER. The Senator is very absurd when he speaks about there being $300,000 in the Treasury. There is an unexpended appropriation of money made several years ago, and the Senator knows very well an appropriation is not money in the Treasury. The $125,000 must be provided just the same.

Mr. ALDRICH. If it is simply an unexpended appropriation, there is nothing to be done except to spend the money.

Mr. CHANDLER. It can not be expended under the existing state of things without new legislation.

Mr. ALDRICH. However that may be, I think the House provision should be insisted upon by the Senate, and if it is necessary to have the work in charge of other officers, then associate General Casey with the engineer in charge, and have the work proceed at once without these vexatious delays.

There is another question involved in this amendment of the Senate Committee to which I desire to call the attention of the Senate, and to show that if the delay which is suggested here is continued it will lead to endless trouble on the part of the Government of the United States. For the first time, I think, in my knowledge of legislation it is proposed here to inquire what it is to cost private corporations to raise the banks of a canal. If that means anything at all, it is an implication that the Congress of the United States is bound to raise the banks of that canal.

It certainly would go very far in that direction. I do not know that there is any claim here that we are bound to take care of everybody else on the Potomac River if we raise that dam. There must be other people interested beside the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company, and why is that provision inserted in the bill? If it is a necessity to have this work done, let us do it; and if there are any damages which the Government of the United States is legally bound to pay, let us pay them; but let us not in advance, before any work is accomplished at all, take the ground by indirection that we are bound to pay the cost of raising the banks of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal. It seems to me that we, representing the Government of the United States, have but one duty to perform in view of all these vexatious delays, and that is to order this work to proceed at once, whatever may be the consequence, and any damages which the Government of the United States is legally bound to pay, we shall take care to pay in time.

There is another matter, Mr. President, that I think arises from the House of Representatives makes an appropriation of $125,000, out of the amount which has heretofore been appropriated on account of the completion of the tunnel, for the raising of the dam at the Great Falls. It is a direct appropriation, and under that provision the work, as a matter of course, would be at once begun. That is true, but the statements of the distinguished Senator from Maine and of the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island and that the Committee on Appropriations have made a mistake in the interest of the health and welfare of the District of Columbia in presenting that amendment puts the Committee on Appropriations in a position where an explanation is necessary. I am quite confident that if the Senator from Maine or the Senator from Rhode Island had examined the whole question as it is now presented and must be dealt with they would have concurred with the Committee on Appropriations in the action which we have taken.

The Senator from Rhode Island, usually accurate in his statements, in this case unquestionably has not examined the question. I want to say one word, however, before going into details in regard to the question which has arisen here by the suggestion of the Senator from Maine as between the action of the Committee on the District of Columbia and the Committee on Appropriations. It so happened when I first entered the Chamber as a Senator that I was appointed a member of the Committee on the District of Columbia, and was associated on a subcommittee with the distinguished Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS], who was chairman of that subcommittee, and the then Senator from Kansas, Mr. Ingalls, who was chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia. We three undertook to examine the entire question of the supply of water for Washington. The Senator from Tennessee, as the chairman of the subcommittee, and the other two of us spent days and weeks and months in a most thorough and complete examination of the whole subject, and it is due to the Senator from Tennessee to say that possibly we are more indebted to him than to any other one man in Congress for the action which was taken, and the attempt which was made to provide a permanent water supply for the District of Columbia.

Afterwards the question which has been alluded to came up, how was the water to be supplied? There were four faults, and the action of Congress was taken to absolutely suspend work on the tunnel from Georgetown to the Soldiers' Home, and the stoppage of the completion of that great reservoir which has been described. In lieu of that we appropriated over $400,000 to bring a 48-inch main from the reservoir at Georgetown across the heights

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. As at present advised I do not spective of age, sex, or condition, was bled and dosed with "blue mass."

It is also on record that after that practice had run its course, some of the leading physicians of this country declared that "blood-letting had destroyed more lives than war, pestilence, and famine combined."

There is a very instructive lesson, which I will commend to every member of this honorable body, in the first short story, of recent publication, of Dr. A. Conan Doyle, entitled Round the Red Lamp. If I remember correctly, the title of the story is Behind the Times. He goes on to tell a story of three physicians in a certain town, two of whom were bacteriologists. They were up in their profession with every modern discovery or every modern suggestion of a discovery, while the third physician was a man who had been in practice long time and who was giving his daily rounds, with his saddlebags or his old-fashioned medicine case, dispensing old-fashioned remedies to the people in that community.

The two modern physicians almost every day met and talked about the poor old doctor who was behind the times, and deplored his want of skill. But on a certain occasion, when an epidemic prevailed in the town, the two young modern physicians became sick, and they discussed with their families the direction in which they would seek relief. One young man first suggested that he thought he would send for his friend, the physician of modern ideas, but, after thinking it over carefully, concluded that he would send for the old doctor and see if he could not give relief. The messenger was dispatched: the old doctor was found; the message was delivered; and the old doctor's reply was, "As soon as I get through prescribing for Dr. So-and-so"—the other physician of modern ideas—"I will go and see the man who has just sent for me." [Laughter.]

There is a lesson contained in that story which is worthy of the attention of the Senate and of the advanced thinkers and writers on medical science at the present day.

The modern idea in medicine is that most diseases are due to bacteria, bacilli, spores, and various other causes undiscoverable except in the laboratory of the chemist and the bacteriologist. Of late years we have had all sorts of pretended discoveries in the line.

We have a distinguished surgeon in this city, formerly connected with the medical department of the Government, who advertises some most remarkable discoveries, the remedies being composed of ingredients that remind one of the time when preparations from lizards and snakes and toads occupied a prominent place in the medical pharmacopoeia of that day, and were even used by the so-called "regular" school.

A few years ago Dr. Brown-Sequard's "Elixir of Life" was a seven-day wonder when it disappeared from view.

Koch's lymph, which was recently heralded as a cure for consumption, was indorsed by leading members of the medical profession in this country and Europe, but was soon abandoned as worthless; and many other illustrations could be given.

If we believed what is now being said by modern scientists on the subject of bacteria we would neither eat, drink, nor breathe, but would incase ourselves in hermetically sealed coverings in self-defense from the ravages of these enemies of human life.

I sympathize with an item which I recently found in the Portland (Me.) Advertiser, purporting to be an examination for admission to the first grade of the public schools in the year 1905. It may be somewhat extravagant, but not much beyond what may be expected if we go on at the present rate. Let me give it:

Teacher (to applicant for admission). "Johnnie, have you got a certificate of vaccination for smallpox?"

"Have you been inoculated for crump?"

"Yes, sir."

"Been treated with diphtheria serum?"

"Yes, sir."

"Had your arm scratched with cholera bacilli?"

"Yes, sir."

"Have you a written guaranty that you are proof against whooping cough, measles, mumps, scarlet fever, and old age?"

"Yes, sir."

"Have you your own private drinking cup?"

"Yes, sir."

"Don't promise not to exchange sponges with the boy next to you and never use any but your own pencil?"

"Yes, sir."

"Will you agree to have your books fumigated with sulphur and sprinkle your clothes with chloride of lime once a week?"

"Yes, sir."

"Johnnie, you have met the first requirements of the modern sanitary and may now climb over yonder rail, occupy an isolated aluminum seat, and begin making P's and Q's on your first lesson."

[Laughter.]

It is, indeed, incident, diphtheria antitoxine is the remedy that is now engaging attention of the medical profession; and it is for the manufacture of this preparation that the present appropriation is proposed. Beyond a doubt a large proportion of the medical profession believes that this so-called discovery has great merit. For myself, I prefer to wait before giving it unqualified indorsement. Many other "discoveries" have been heralded with equal confidence, and have been abandoned after a fair trial.

There is even now a grave question as to what diseases are contagious. No physician can positively say that diphtheria, typhoid fever, cholera, and many other diseases of a zymotic nature are really contagious, but that most of those diseases are the result of unhealthy surroundings, notably such as bad drainage and impure water, is disputable and anything that looks to a correction of filth conditions should be encouraged.

It is proper that I should say that as regards the activity of antitoxine there is already a difference of opinion. It is despised of no value by some physicians of world-wide reputation. At this point it is interesting to know that a paper of the greatest interest and importance was read at a recent meeting of the Berlin Medical Society by Dr. Hansemann. The paper carried especial weight because the author is announced as an assistant to Professor Virchow, and his work and conclusions are presumably indorsed by the dean of modern pathology.

Dr. Hansemann comes out in that contradiction of the alleged properties and powers of the Berlin immunizing serum. He asserts that in Brechtman's diphtheria the Loeffler bacillus is not always present, and is not its sole cause. This view will appeal to some clinicians and bacteriologists at least, for it is admitted that the Loeffler bacillus is present in some very mild cases of diphtheria as well as in apparently healthy throats, while, on the other hand, it is also known that a streptococcus diphtheria (or some throat) is sometimes extremely severe and dangerous.

Dr. Hansemann asserts that Loeffler's bacillus is found constantly in rhinitis fibrosa, without producing diphtheria; and that these alleged pathogenic microbes may multiply in the throat without modifying the course of the diphtheria. All this, we believe, will have to be admitted by pathologists who have without bias studied the disease. Dr. Hansemann assumed further that in the case of animals an injection of a Loeffler bacillus culture caused, not diphtheria, but a disease sui generis, the Loeffler bacillus disease; that epidemic diphtheria had never been observed in animals; that guinea pigs, in contact with diphtheria patients, had never taken diphtheria; but that a case is known where a cat, with which a child suffering from diphtheria had played, had developed all diphtheria symptoms without, however, any bacilli being discovered.

He then proceeded to describe the three qualities claimed for the antitoxin—namely, its therapeutic action, its harmlessness, and its immunizing power. He said that the present statistics give an erroneous impression (as already shown by Gottstein in his recently published pamphlet), as many children suffering from lighter forms of throat complaints are now sent to the hospitals to be treated with serum, thus swelling the proportion of cured cases, which would, he said, otherwise not be higher than the usual average. He said that the serum triadema could, no means be considered harmless, as affections of the kidneys had frequently followed, in one case more severe in type than had ever yet been observed after diphtheria. He said that it was clear, from Behring's new directions to increase the immunizing dose from 60 to 150 units, that no results have yet been achieved as far as immunizing goes.

The Medical Record, one of the leading medical journals of the country, in commenting on the views of Dr. Hansemann, has this to say:

"The final criterion of the efficacy of the antitoxin treatment is clinical experience. Even if Hansemann's pathology be correct, therefore, it will make no difference, provided the diphtheria patients do so well. The immunizing effect, which is entirely correct, of the new therapeutic procedure, which comes kindly heralded and safely indorsed, are very great. Unsatisfactory is said to every patient greater weakness and, thus, each supervising, old doctor diagnosed the serious triadema. The factor must all be considered in estimating the results of the serum treatment."

It would be not only a disappointment to all well-wishers of humanity, but would be a serious blow to the rising prestige of medical science if, after all, the serum treatment should fall short of its high expectations.

Mr. President, while I shall vote for the amendment of the committee, I have thought it due today what I have on this important subject. I trust antitoxine may become an established cure for diphtheria (a disease, by the way, which, under favorable conditions and intelligent treatment is far from being as fatal as has sometimes been represented), but I feel bound to express grave doubts on that point. On the contrary, I expect to see in this time relegated to the tomb that already contains thousands of boasted medical discoveries, which, after fair trial, have been declared worthless, if not absolutely harmful.

Mr. GOLEMAN. Mr. President, I think very frankly that it would be impossible for me and I, for any other physician of the South to fully understand much of thousands of the South from New Hampshire, dealing, as he has, in technical terms and phrases, and using the language of physician when a convincing together.

I merely wish to say a word in a plain way about the matter. I do not profess to know whether or not the remedy presented is specific in the case of diphtheria, but the committee had before them a very distinguished physician, Dr. J. J. Kinyoun, of the Marine Hospital Service, who made a statement to the committee in regard to this matter, in connection with a very intelligent young gentleman who has been recently appointed the health officer of this District. We found, beyond dispute, this to be the condition of affairs: We had raging in this city the horrible epidemic of smallpox, and there was absolutely no provision here for a hospital in which to put a patient afflicted with that disease. We had nothing but a miserable temporary structure down near the Eastern Branch of the Potomac. There were no facilities for disinfecting the bedding, the clothing, or other paraphernalia in houses where the disease was found to exist, and it was necessary to destroy all the property of the people in the houses where the cases occurred, and, as a rule, a large majority of them were people who could ill afford to bear such a loss. In some cases clothing, etc., has been taken to some of the steam-heating establishments located here, and the owners of those establishments were practically compelled to disinfect such clothing in the same buildings where carpets of citizens had been sent for the purpose of being cleaned. The committee regarded it as such an extraordinary case that we did not hesitate a moment to make provision for a place where such clothing and other articles could be disinfected. Every large city has such provision, and it has become an absolute necessity here.

In connection with that Dr. Kinyoun called attention to the fact that we could, by a very small expenditure, furnish antitoxine, which is now beyond the reach of the poor and practically beyond the reach of anyone in this city. In other places private subscriptions have been made by public-spirited citizens, and the material has been imported; but in connection with this disinfecting arrangement, antitoxine can be produced by the use of half a dozen horses. This will be not only a great boon to the citizens of the District of Columbia, but these physicians insist that it can be used in the Marine Hospital Service, and if it can be manufactured here it can be distributed. We regarded the condition as so serious and the expenditure so small that we thought the experiment ought to be tried.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment reported by the committee which has been read. The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 39, after line 24, to insert:

For the erection and equipment by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, on the eastern part of reservation 13, city of Washington, of a hospital for the treatment of persons suffering from smallpox, including a disinfecting plant and all necessary equipment, to be completed and ready for use immediately available: Provided, That no building for use as a public or private hospital for contagious diseases shall be erected or maintained in the District of Columbia within 40 feet of any property owned by a private individual or any other party than the one erecting the building.

Mr. GORMAN. After the word "That," at the beginning of line 6, I move to insert the word "hereafter," so as to read:

That hereafter no building for the use of public or private hospital, etc.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GORMAN. In line 7 of the amendment, after the word "erected," I move to strike out the words "or maintained."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President—

Mr. McMILLAN. Mr. President, I should like to say a few words in relation to this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Maryland yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. GORMAN. Certainly.

Mr. McMILLAN. The proviso reads:

That hereafter no building for use as a public or private hospital for contagious diseases shall be erected or maintained in the District of Columbia within 40 feet of any property owned by a private individual or any other party than the one erecting the building.

I can understand why it might be well to have a smallpox hospital set apart from other buildings, but why such a provision should be applied to an ordinary contagious diseases hospital I cannot understand. The contagious diseases hospitals in other cities are erected in localities which are convenient for public use, and there is not considered to be any danger arising from such location so far as other buildings in the vicinity are concerned. I mean hospitals where diphtheria, scarlet fever, and measles, for instance, are treated. In Boston there is a contagious diseases hospital building within 40 feet of a schoolhouse, and in my own city we have been trying to raise money to erect a contagious diseases hospital in connection with a hospital in which I am interested, in the very heart of the city.

It seems to me as if already voted money for a contagious diseases hospital in this city, and as a guild here has raised some $10,000 for that purpose, I fear, if the amendment was proposed by the committee shall carry, it will simply mean that we shall not have such a hospital established. It is impossible to get a piece of land convenient for such a purpose 300 feet away from any dwelling. That would mean sending such a hospital out into the country where it could not be used to advantage.

I think there must be some mistake on the part of the committee in suggesting that there should be a space of 300 feet between such a hospital and other buildings. That would necessitate the purchase by the contagious diseases hospital of property which probably might cost $50,000 or $75,000 simply for the land, and that land so situated that it would be almost impossible to send patients there.

I hope the Senator from Maryland will change that provision of the amendment so as to make the distance from other buildings a reasonable one. I would suggest making the distance 100 feet. I think that would be entirely sufficient.

Mr. GALLINGER. From other buildings?

Mr. McMILLAN. Yes, from other buildings.

Mr. GORMAN. The amendment was prepared by the health department. As the Senator is perfectly well aware, Congress within the last two years appropriated money to purchase a site for a hospital for contagious diseases, and I think the District Commissioners selected a site in the northern part of the city, in the vicinity, I think, of the Garfield Hospital; but the citizens in that section of the city entered protests against it, and the work has been practically suspended. It is true that there was a general belief that that hospital was also designed to provide for smallpox patients as well as those having other contagious diseases, like typhoid, etc.

The best authorities upon this question I think agree with the Senator that for the diseases of scarlet fever and diphtheria, possibly such a limitation as that provided in the bill is not absolutely necessary; but, owing to the feeling and excitement which has existed here recently, we have been pressed not only to keep the building 300 feet distant from any other, but to make the distance 600 feet, and I was about to offer an amendment to increase the distance. These are simply the facts of the case, but there are some physicians here who disagree as to the number of feet at which such a hospital should be located from any other building that the committee thought they would make the distance 400 feet.

Mr. McMILLAN. That would simply mean that a contagious diseases hospital could not be built in the District of Columbia. There are cases happening here almost every day, which show the total necessity for such a hospital, but such a hospital is not so provided, and I hold in my hand a communication from the health officer, in which he states the facts in regard to it, which I ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

HEALTH DEPARTMENT, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
Washington, February 2, 1896.

GENTLEMEN: Referring to the erection of a hospital for contagious diseases in proximity to premises occupied for other purposes, I am of the opinion that a free space of 40 feet between such premises and any portion of the hospital buildings or grounds used by patients prior to recovery will prevent the spread of infection to the occupants of these premises. The location of such a hospital at a point remote from the city will materially interfere with its usefulness.

The report of the commission to inquire respecting smallpox and fever hospitals in the metropolis (England) in 1861 says:

"It is therefore extremely fortunate that all evidence goes to show that well-conducted fever hospitals involve no appreciable risk to the neighborhood. This is the testimony as well of the medical superintendents of the asylums and other fever hospitals as of the officers of health who are in charge of the districts in which the hospitals are placed. No one here we received any statements of an opposite tendency."—See Reason and Murphy Treatise on Hygiene, Volume II, page 738, Philadelphia, 1881.

In the supplement to the tenth annual report of the local government board (England, 1882) Dr. Thoms writes:

"I would in no general terms say that under any circumstances it (the hospital) should be reasonably available for its purposes, in the case of a town not be much more than 2 miles, and in the case of a rural district not more than 4 or 5 miles from the more populous portions of the districts concerned."

Experience, however, such as was culled at Fodmure, shows that when a hospital is situated within but 1 mile of a town as the crow flies, but can only be reached by medical practitioners as the result of a circuitous and somewhat difficult journey, they are, though urgently needed for purposes of isolation, may entirely fail to effect its intended purpose.

* * * * *

"Very special attention was directed during the course of my inquiry into the influence of hospitals for infectious diseases upon the neighborhood in which they were situated. With respect to infectious fevers other than smallpox, and especially with respect to scarlet fever, typhus, and enteric fever, I have been unable to ascertain that any special danger, that of spread of infection has resulted in the vicinity of any of the hospitals treated, except apart from an attack resulting from a visit to patients under treatment, as in any way it has been caused, as in the case of the contrary, many instances have been met with in which the existence of cases of these fevers near the hospitals in question could not fail to have become known, and yet these very instances it so happens that there has been a marked immunity from the diseases of the localities referred to.

* * * * *

"These instances, which may be taken as characteristic of the experience gained during the course of my inquiry, will tend to show that in well-administered hospitals, and in the case of the hospitals open to the public, on the wards and any neighboring thoroughfares or dwellings, no risk of the spread of infection from scarlet fever, typhus, and enteric fever need be apprehended.

"With regard to some other infectious fevers, such as diphtheria, measles, etc., no sufficient information was obtained to warrant any decided conclusion as to the question of the infection of the jail arising from the results of this inquiry, but there can be little doubt that these diseases may be judged of in the light of the experience gained with respect to those which have already been considered.

Very respectfully,

WM. C. WOODWARD, M. D.,
City Health Officer.

To the honorable COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. McMILLAN. I move to amend the amendment of the committee so as to make the proviso read:

Provided, That hereafter no building for use as a public or private hospital for contagious diseases, excepting smallpox, shall be erected in the District of Columbia within 100 feet of any building owned by a private individual or any other party than the one erecting the building.

I think that will be more than ample and will enable us to have a properly constructed contagious-disease hospital.

Mr. GORMAN. The Senator from Michigan does not want to put in the words "excepting smallpox."

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, a few months ago there was great excitement in all the northern part of the city of Washington lying west of Seventh street when it was announced in the papers that two lots had been bought quietly, without it being known to the people at large, for the purpose of erecting a hospital for contagious diseases, and especially for smallpox, in a very populous region of the city very near the German Park, which is one of the most beneficial hospitals, if not the best hospital, in the city of Washington. It was proposed to be located in a region that is rapidly being populated, only a short distance from Seventh street and near what is called the German Park. It was to be erected in a region which is rapidly being filled up, and west of Seventh street is being built over with residences.

The proposition created a great state of alarm, and not only affected the value of property, but arrested the erection of buildings in process of construction. It prevented the starting of many buildings that would have been erected. It is perfectly apparent that that part of the city lying in the northwest is to be probably thickly populated, perhaps more so than any other part of the city outside of the limits of the old city of Washington. The result was that public meetings were held. I did not attend them, but the papers gave accounts of large public meetings and remonstrances from prominent citizens against the location of the hospital at that place.

It seemed perfectly apparent that the District Commissioners made a mistake in proposing to locate a smallpox hospital in that part of the city, and in a short time they seemed to have abandoned the proposition, so strong was the feeling of resentment. The Commissioners then proposed to look for a site out in the far east, east of the jail, where the Government is in possession of many hundred acres of land lying in the region where the jail is and where there are other hospitals. Beyond their reach, more than 300 feet, more than 500 feet, as I am told, perhaps more than 1,000 feet away, they found a place which they thought suitable for a smallpox and other contagious diseases hospital. That was supposed to have been settled.

The pending amendment, I suppose, is reported by the Committee on Appropriations. I did not see it until it was brought in here, and it seems to cover the point. It authorizes the erection of a building for the treatment of persons suffering from smallpox, including a disinfecting plant, etc., on the site that is proposed in the eastern part of town. It seems to me that the proposition now made by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMILLAN] is not only faulty in its terms, but I think it would only point to the erection of a smallpox hospital in a very populous part of the city, and probably soon to be one of the most populous parts of the city.

The provision that the hospital shall not be erected within 100 feet of a building will practically condemn to disuse all of the land around. Much of it is now vacant. The site which was selected is within a square that has been withheld from the market and is now built upon. The result is that the whole of that square would practically be condemned; the owners of it—I do not know who they are; a great number of persons, no doubt—would practically lose their land, and the patients at the Garfield Hospital would naturally feel the danger of the proximity of a hospital of this kind. It would destroy in a great measure the usefulness of that great institution. There is a place where a person with any kind of disease, except infectious diseases, can be taken and cared for with the utmost attention; it has grown very rapidly until now it is a great building; it has been extended and it is proposed still further to extend it; and to destroy its usefulness it seems to me would be wrong.

I think, therefore, that the amendment as it stands should be retained, and that the number, instead of being 300, should be 500 feet. But it would be better in my judgment, to prohibit absolutely the erection of the hospital on the ground selected by the Commissioners formerly, and leave the matter stand as it is now provided for.

Hospital for contagious diseases.

There is none more contagious than smallpox; there is no disease more violent, more offensive, more dangerous in every respect than smallpox. I can not imagine any disease, except the famous disease of which so many Chimuans sometimes suffer, that is worse than the smallpox. To allow even the threat or the supposition that a smallpox hospital will be put in any neighborhood where people propose to build is not only unjust but it is dangerous, and I think it ought to be prohibited. Unless the Senator from Maryland should see proper to extend the distance to 500 feet, I think that provision had better stand. It would prevent the erection of the proposed hospital in the northwest part of the city and would provide for one in another part where there is no danger of contagion, where the distance is so great that it could not even affect the jail or the hospitals in that part of the city.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator from Ohio will allow me, I should like to call his attention to the phraseology in line 8. I may be mistaken as to the interpretation that I put upon it, but it says:

Within 300 feet of any property—owned by a private individual.

Not a building—

Would not that compel us either to go absolutely to the country outside of the District of Columbia or to put the hospital on Government land?

Mr. SHERMAN. It ought to be put on Government land. The Government has land all about this city. There seems to be a want of knowledge in regard to the vast possessions of the Government about this city. For instance, we have a thousand acres, I believe, across the Branch, where the insane asylum is, and where there are large and extensive farms. That would be a much better place for the hospital than even the site proposed in the neighborhood of the jail. Then, the city of Washington has in all parts of the District large possessions. The new grounds that have been selected for a park contain 2,000 acres, and there are quiet places off the park that might a great deal better be taken for this kind of a hospital than any other part. The Government has ample land and facilities for building a hospital in regions where it may be seen from the surrounding population and not endanger the life of the people of the District.

Mr. McMILLAN. In reply to the Senator from Ohio I will state that I am not alluding at all to the smallpox hospital. I think that is provided for.

I wish to call the attention of the Senator from Ohio and the Senate to the fact that the smallpox hospital is arranged for in the first part of the paragraph and is entirely independent of ordinary contagious diseases, such as scarlet fever, diphtheria, and so on.

Mr. SHERMAN. Does the Senator from Michigan know where reservation 13 is?

Mr. McMILLAN. It is a Government reservation, I understand.

Mr. SHERMAN. Where is it?

Mr. McMILLAN. Across the eastern part of the city. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] knows the exact location.

Mr. GORMAN. It is on reservation 13, where the jail is located, and where the present hospital, a temporary building, is now. There are 40 acres there, so there will be ample room, and as the Senator will see by reading the amendment, the hospital is to be located on that reservation, with a wall all around it. It is away from all private property and buildings.

Mr. McMILLAN. So that disposes of that last. I was not alluding at all to smallpox. All the hospitals in the different cities take care of smallpox, and generally provide for it outside the limits of the town. I am now talking about the matter of ordinary contagious diseases. For instance, a man is taken with diphtheria in a hotel here—

Mr. SHERMAN. The amendment provides for a smallpox hospital—

Mr. McMILLAN. I do not refer to smallpox. I simply speak of the ordinary contagious diseases. I will move to amend the amendment so that it will read:

Provided, That hereafter no building for use as a public or private hospital for contagious diseases, excepting smallpox, shall be erected in the District of Columbia within 100 feet

That is all the health officer says is necessary—of any building owned by a private individual.

The amendment which I propose does not affect smallpox at all. Mr. SHERMAN. The term "contagious diseases" includes smallpox.

Mr. McMILLAN. That is excepted because there is a building provided for smallpox alone.

Mr. HUNTON. Mr. President, it seems to me if the views of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] are to prevail it would be impossible under the law now would have it framed correct in the District of Columbia a hospital for contagious diseases. It is agreed that the smallpox hospital shall be isolated. The place for it is already designated, and I do not see much objection to that.

The provision under consideration is for the establishment of a hospital for contagious diseases other than smallpox. I understand it is the object and desire of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to locate this hospital in the northern part of the city, where there are present scarcely any houses; I am told only one. It seems to me that if you remove a hospital of this character 100 feet from any building it is sufficient. I am told by experts in this matter that 20 feet between a hospital for diseases of this sort and other buildings are quite sufficient. But the Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMILLAN] proposes by his amendment to require it to be 100 feet distant.

Mr. McMILLAN. I will say to the Senator from Virginia that I changed my amendment so as to reduce it to 40 feet.

Mr. HUNTON. I think that is quite enough, sir. It is enough for all practical purposes. If the idea advanced by the Senator from Ohio should be carried out it seems to me there could be no hospital, because if it is to be erected and maintained five or six hundred feet or even 300 feet from other property, in the language of the committee's amendment, it would be impossible to find a place in the District of Columbia where it could be erected.

Mr. President, it is important that this hospital shall be erected in some part of the city that is reasonably convenient and accessible, because if a patient breaks out with one of these diseases, diphtheria, for instance, and is exposed in transportation to the hospital, it may be the cause of his death. Therefore, the hospital for such diseases as are provided for here should be accessible, and every reasonable care should be taken that the diseases of the patients in the hospital might not be communicated to persons in that neighborhood. As my friend from Michigan says, 40 feet is quite enough for that purpose.

Now, the District Commissioners have selected a building for this hospital very far up in the suburbs of the city. I believe there is only one building within 300 feet of the lot that they have selected for the hospital. But if you are to prohibit them from putting it anywhere near where a person may erect a building it seems to me that would entirely prevent the carrying out of the law. I hope, therefore, after careful examination into this matter with the District Commissioners, that the amendment of the Senator from Michigan to the amendment of the committee will prevail.

Mr. GORMAN. I understand that my amendment to insert after the word "that," in line 6, the word "hereafter," has been agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That has been agreed to. Mr. GORMAN. And the words "or maintained," in line 7, have been stricken out. Am I correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. GORMAN. So the question is on the amendment of the Senator from Michigan to strike out "three hundred" and insert "forty" before the word "feet," in line 8.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the pending proposition. Mr. McMILLAN. I also propose to insert "building" instead of "property," in line 9.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Chair understand the Senator from Michigan to insert the words "except smallpox?" Mr. McMILLAN. No; these words are left out.

Mr. ALDRICH. If that amendment is adopted could a person erect a private smallpox hospital within 40 feet of a building?

Mr. GORMAN. Oh, no!

Mr. ALDRICH. What would prevent it?

Mr. GORMAN. The health department would suppress it. No hospital of that kind could be erected in this city without the consent of the authorities, as a matter of course.

Mr. SHERMAN. But it would read:

That hereafter no building for use as a public or private hospital for contagious diseases—

The term "contagious diseases" includes smallpox and a great many other diseases; and it is provided that no such building shall be erected within 40 feet of a man's house. It may be erected within 3 feet of his lot. I think that it would be cruel to the last degree to adopt the provision in that form.

Mr. GORMAN. The Committee on Appropriations of this body have had to adopt very vigorous measures in regard to the hospital for smallpox. Congress made the appropriation and put it in the hands of the Commissioners to secure a proper lot and erect a building for that purpose. They have attempted to select a site in various sections of the city, and they have met on each occasion the earnest protest of the property owners and all the citizens who reside in the vicinity where they proposed to erect such a hospital. I am bound to say that they have shown a weakness about the matter that is most extraordinary. I would not like to express myself in the Senate as I did to them personally in regard to the dilly-dallying with this matter. Finally the Committee on Appropriations determined that this matter should be settled, and to allay all apprehension of citizens in every section of the city we inserted herein provision that the smallpox hospital shall be on the Government reservation east of the Capitol and practically on the site where it is now located, away from all private property; and that in our judgment is the best location in the city of Washington for it.

Now, if that provision is agreed to it disposes of the question of a smallpox hospital and locates it there. There can be no other hospital erected or maintained by the District Commissioners on any other lot for that purpose. But for diphtheria, typhoid, and all the contagious diseases other than smallpox, the Commissioners may erect a building on a lot that they have already purchased, or select another. The contention is only as to the latter class of hospital, whether it shall be within 40 feet of another building or within 300 feet of another building. That is the only question now before the Senate, the question as to a smallpox hospital having been absolutely disposed of by the previous provision.

Mr. PASCO. May I ask the Senator from Maryland the location of the hospital which he says has been selected?

Mr. GORMAN. It is the identical spot where it is now, east of the jail.

Mr. PASCO. Not the smallpox hospital, but the other one.

Mr. GORMAN. It is out in the northern section of the city, near the Garfield Hospital, I understand. I am not familiar with the exact location. But the citizens in that immediate section of the city, indeed in all that part of the city, supposed, and I think rightly, when the Commissioners, under the provision of the act of Congress to which I have referred, selected that lot, that it was intended for smallpox as well as all the other contagious diseases, and they protested against it. I think they very properly protested against it, for it would be in the line of the march of improvement and near people of all classes living out there. However, they are now relieved from any such apprehension by the stand the Committee on Appropriations have taken in keeping the smallpox hospital over in the east, where nobody can object to it. Since the Senator from Michigan read the communication from the health officer of the District, I have found here—any attention was not called to it before—the identical statement which Dr. Billings, an expert and an authority upon these matters, makes that it is to be for all contagious diseases except smallpox 50 feet is a sufficient length. That is true.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMILLAN] to the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. SHERMAN. I call for a division upon the amendment to the amendment. I think it presents a serious question.

Mr. PASCO. I ask that the amendment to the amendment be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. In line 8, on page 40, after the word "within," strike out "three hundred" and insert "forty," and at the end of the line strike out "property" and insert "building" so as to read:

That hereafter no building for use as a public or private hospital for contagious diseases shall be erected in the District of Columbia within 40 feet of any building owned by a private individual or any other party than the one erecting the building.

Mr. GALLINGER. I suggest to the Senator from Michigan (I am sure he will not object) that after the word "disposes," in line 7, the words "other than smallpox" shall be inserted. That will settle the smallpox question completely.

Mr. McMILLAN. Very well.

Mr. GORMAN. Will that amendment satisfy the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. SHERMAN. It would improve it; but I think all hospitals for contagious diseases ought to be placed on a reservation farther away. I should be perfectly willing to vote for the amendment proposed by the Committee on Appropriations making the distance 300 feet. It will be no hardship for the Government to purchase adjacent property in order to have a clear space around the hospital. There are many very dangerous diseases—diphtheria and many others—that are now known and admitted to be contagious that were not formerly so considered. It would introduce this danger, I think, into populous parts of the city when there was no occasion for doing so.

Mr. ALDRICH. I suggest that the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] would allow smallpox hospitals to be erected anywhere in the District, even adjacent to a building owned by a private individual.

Mr. GORMAN. Unquestionably.

Mr. ALDRICH. That would make the condition worse than it is now.

Mr. GORMAN. The only question presented is the amendment of the Senator from Michigan whether the hospital shall be within 40 feet or 200 feet of other property.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment I suggested, which I think was accepted by the Senator from Michigan, be withdrawn.

Mr. CHANDLER. I suggest that the object sought to be accomplished can be brought about by striking "no other building." Then it would read literally: "There is provision made for a small-pox hospital. It would then read: "No other building for use as a public or private hospital for contagious diseases shall be erected in the District of Columbia within 40 feet." Then it is perfectly clear and there is no unpleasant sound about it, as there was with the amendment as it stood. I therefore suggest that the words "no other" be put in before "buildings," so as to read "no other building."

Mr. GALLINGER. That would accomplish the same purpose as the amendment I suggested, and I think it very much better.

Mr. CHANDLER. I move to insert the word "other" after "no," in line 6.

Mr. McMILLAN. I will accept that.

Mr. ALDRICH. I ask that the amendment to the amendment be read as modified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Michigan to the amendment of the committee will be read as modified.

The SECRETARY. After the word "no," in line 6, insert the word "other;" so as to read:

"That hereafter no other building for use as a public or private hospital for contagious diseases, etc., other than small-pox—"

Mr. GORMAN. No; strike out the words "other than small-pox."

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to make the clause read:

"That hereafter no other building for use as a public or private hospital for contagious diseases shall be erected in the District of Columbia within 40 feet of any building owned by a private individual or any other party than the one erecting the building."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, shall the amendment to the amendment be agreed to as modified?

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, before the vote is taken I want to put myself on record as at least raising a question as to the propriety of this amendment. The medical profession to-day—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will suspend a moment. The Chair desires to announce that under the unanimous agreement of Saturday, after 4 o'clock the debate is to proceed under the five-minute rule. The Chair will enforce that agreement.

Mr. GALLINGER. I shall not occupy half of the time allowed by the agreement; so it will not interfere with me. I wish to say that the medical profession of to-day, both in this country and in foreign countries, are divided as to what diseases are contagious. Some of us do not believe that diphtheria is a contagious disease. Some of us absolutely combat the idea that typhoid fever is a contagious disease. The question as to whether consumption is hereditary or a contagious disease is to-day agitating the medical profession all over the world. I have my well-defined views on that question, which are not in accord with the most advanced notions of bacteriologists and men of that class in the profession.

Again, we establish a hospital here for the treatment of diphtheria and typhoid fever. Are we, by giving our assent to it and voting away the public money, to agree to the proposition that the health officer of this District can enter our homes and remove from our homes our children or our wives or ourselves who may be suffering from what they call diphtheria, a disease diagnosed erroneously perhaps by a percentage of the cases? If we have typhoid fever or a disease that is diagnosed as such, are we to have them taken to our homes to a hospital for treatment? I do not know that that conclusion would necessarily follow, but I venture to say that it is rather a dangerous notion to incorporate into law if we confer upon anybody a power such as that.

This is all I care to say on the subject. I shall not vote against the amendment if the committee think it desirable to have it incorporated into law; but I want to say that when the question as to whether a given disease is contagious or not is solved it will be some years after the present time, because it is so strikingly in controversy to-day by the medical profession of the world that I know for myself that it is not a settled question by any means.

Mr. McMILLAN. I will state that we have already provided a sum to put up this building and the money is now ready in the Treasury. I will also state that in one of our hotels here a short time ago a man was taken with diphtheria; that they would not take him in one of the hospitals here, and he went to New York. While on the way there he undoubtedly communicated the disease to other people. There is a case now in the District where a poor man has a child with scarlet fever at his house. He is put under quarantine and can't get out of his house to earn his wages. If we had a contagious hospital here the man would, of course, send his child to it. He has not the means to provide a nurse for the child. The hospital is intended for the poorer classes and for strangers who may be passing through the city. I certainly hope the amendment to the amendment will be agreed to.

Mr. WHITE. I ask the Senator from Michigan if I am correct in supposing that the effect of the amendment which he proposes will be to allow the erection of all sorts of hospitals wherein all the kinds of contagious diseases shall be treated except small-pox within 40 feet of any private house. Is that the effect on the amendment?

Mr. McMILLAN. Within 40 feet of any private building. No, the amendment gives permission to erect contagious hospitals within that distance.

Mr. WHITE. I suggested that it might become: "That is, no hospital wherein any sort of contagious disease is treated except small-pox may be erected, under the amendment, within 40 feet of a private dwelling."

Mr. McMILLAN. Yes.

Mr. CHANDLER. That leads me to ask the Senator from California whether he has knowledge as to whether a license is required now for a private hospital in the city?

Mr. WHITE. I think not; but if it be true that a license may be issued it would not alter my view. I think it is a menace to private property. I am not scientifically versed in this matter; I can not tell whether there is any danger in it; but I do know that personally I should hate to have within 40 feet of my home a hospital wherein a contagious disease other than small-pox was treated.

Mr. CHANDLER. I should like to ask any Senator who knows whether, as the law now stands, it is necessary to have a license to establish a private hospital within the District for contagious diseases.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. McMILLAN] as modified to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment to the amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HARRIS. Let the amendment to the amendment be read. The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be again read.

The SECRETARY. On page 40, line 6, after the word "no," insert "other;" in line 8, strike out "three hundred" and insert "forty;" and in the same line strike out "property" and insert "building;" so as to make the proviso read:

"Provided, That hereafter no other building for use as a public or private hospital for contagious diseases shall be erected in the District of Columbia within 40 feet of any building owned by a private individual or any other party than the one erecting the building."

Mr. HARRIS. I wish to ask the Senator from Michigan a question which has neglected to inform myself on the subject. Under existing law could a private hospital for the treatment of contagious diseases be erected now in any part of the city within 40 feet of any private building?

Mr. McMILLAN. I think it could.

Mr. HARRIS. Under existing law the Senator says a private hospital for the treatment of such diseases could be erected contiguous to and in less than 40 feet of any private building?

Mr. McMILLAN. That is as I understand it.

Mr. HARRIS. I am not much inclined myself to grant the authority to erect such a hospital within 10 feet of a private building.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMILLAN] to the amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TUNNICLIFFE].

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. MITCHELL], who is unavoidably absent from the Chamber. He gave me before he left his permission to vote on all questions connected with this bill and I will vote "yea."

Mr. GORDON (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON] who is not in his seat from Indiana [Mr. TUNNICLIFFE].

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY].

Mr. WHITE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. SINGER] on political questions. Not regarding this bill—well, I will vote. I vote "yea."

The yeas and nays were concluded.

Mr. HARRIS (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORGAN] who it appears, is absent. The Senator from Illinois [Mr. CULUM], has a general pair with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. COVINGTON].

So the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin. I offer an amendment to the pending bill, and in offering it I say that I have submitted it to the committee and it has received their sanction.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The SECRETARY. On page 40, after line 10, it is proposed to insert:

All private hospitals shall be required to secure a permit from the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Mr. GORMAN. There is no objection to that amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. I desire to move the same amendment as the one submitted by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMillan], by striking out, in line 8, on page 40, the word "forty" and inserting the words "one hundred and fifty."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire to the amendment of the committee. (Putting the question.) The yeas appear to have it.

Mr. SHERMAN. I call for the yeas and nays on the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. GORMAN. I trust the Senator will be satisfied to have the Senate divide again on that amendment, and that he will withdraw his call for the yeas and nays. Let us simply have a division on the question, and let the question be put to the Senate.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have no objection to that.

Mr. GORMAN. Do I understand the Senator's amendment to be to insert "150 feet" as the distance the contagious diseases hospital shall be located from any building owned by a private citizen?

Mr. GALLINGER. Yes, sir; that is my amendment.

Mr. GORMAN. I trust the vote will be again taken on a division, without the yeas and nays.

Mr. GALLINGER. Some other Senator called for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, the vote will be again taken. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was on page 41, line 1, before the word "thousand," to strike out "five" and insert "six," so as to read:

For witness fees, $6,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 41, line 9, before the word "thousand," to strike out "fifteen" and insert "sixteen," so as to make the clause read:

For compensation for jury, $8,000, in all, $16,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 41, line 21, before the word "thousand," to strike out "three" and insert "six," and on page 42, line 4, after the name "Abert," to strike out "and his associates," so as to read:

Compilation of District laws: To pay William Stone Abert for services in preparing annotations, judicial citations, and appendix to the statutes in force in the District of Columbia not sum exceeding $8,000, as the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia shall deem reasonable, which sum shall be paid wholly out of the revenue of said District, and his name upon the order of the said court, and said amount shall be added to the cost of the compilation and the price for which the same shall be sold; Provided, That the sum hereby appropriated shall be in full of all services rendered by the said Abert for services herein described, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 42, line 5, after the words "herein described," to insert:

Namely, in preparing said annotations, judicial citations, and appendix. And the District of Columbia shall be reimbursed by the United States in the said amount of $8,000 from the proceeds of sale of the compilation after the amount arising therefrom shall equal the cost of its publication at the Government Printing Office. The Public Printer is hereby directed to deliver to the Secretary of the Interior the 5,000 copies of the compilation of the statutes in force in the District of Columbia recently compiled by William Stone Abert, and under authority of the act of Congress approved March 2, 1889, the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to sell, at the price of $1.50 per volume, to any person wishing to purchase the same, copies of said compilation which are not required for official use; Provided, That not exceeding 50 copies be sold to any one person applying for the same; and the proceeds of all sales shall be paid into the Treasury. There shall be distributed by the Secretary of the Interior for official use copies of said compilation to the following Justices, Judges, and officers, as to the President of the United States 4 copies, each of which shall be for the library of the Executive Mansion and 1 copy shall be for the use of the commissioner of public buildings; to the Vice-President of the United States, 1 copy; to each of the Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, 1 copy; to each of the Justices of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, 1 copy; to each of the Justices of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, 1 copy; to the chief judge and each of the judges of the District of Columbia, 1 copy; to each of the judges of the police court of the District of Columbia, 1 copy; to each court room in each of the said courts and to the clerks of each of said courts, 1 copy; to each of the Justices of the peace of the District of Columbia, 1 copy; to the librarian of the Senate for use of Senators, 5 copies; to the librarian of the House for use of Representatives and Delegates, 10 copies; to the Library of Congress, 5 copies; to the Library of the House of Representatives, 10 copies; to the Department of State, including those for use of legations, 50 copies; to the Treasury Department, 10 copies; to the Department of the Interior, 10 copies; to the Post-Office Department, 10 copies; to the Department of Justice, 10 copies; to the Department of Agriculture, 5 copies; to the Smithsonian Institution, 5 copies; to the Government Printing Office, 5 copies; to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, 10 copies; to the coroner and deputy coroner, 1 copy each; to the surveyor of the District of Columbia, 1 copy; to the attorney for the United States for the District of Columbia, 5 copies; to the attorney for the District of Columbia, 5 copies; to the register of wills and the recorder of deeds, 2 copies each; 10 copies to each of the Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States for the District of Columbia; Provided, That all of the copies issued as above said shall remain the property of the United States and be delivered to the successors in office of each and every of the Justices, Judges, and officers aforesaid.

Mr. SHERMAN. No provision is made there for a copy of this compilation for each Senator and Representative, and it seems to me that one copy of this book ought to be furnished to each Senator and Representative. There will be a constant need for this work, and it will be necessary for each Senator and Representative to have a copy. I suggest that the Senator from Maryland make no objection to the adoption of an amendment to that effect?

Mr. GORMAN. I have no objection to inserting the words "a copy for each Senator and Representative." The provision here is ample for the library of each house and for the Library of Congress.

Mr. SHERMAN. That is true, but still I think it will be very necessary for each Senator and Representative to have a copy. I suggest that there should be inserted the words "one copy to each Senator and Member of the House of Representatives of the Fifty-fourth Congress."

Mr. HARRIS. I suggest to the Senator from Ohio, if that provision is incorporated, it will have to be independent of the last provision of the committee's amendment, because when a copy is sent to each Senator and each Representative it will be regarded as his own document, and will not be a copy of the property of the Government. Every Senator and every Representative will have ample opportunity to refer to this compilation, for the libraries are to be abundantly supplied; the Committees on the District of Columbia are to be abundantly supplied; and those documents remain here in the Capitol as the property of the Government for reference by every Senator and every Representative in the present Congress and those who may come after them. I do not think there is any necessity for adding the clause the Senator suggests.

Mr. SHERMAN. If the Senator from Tennessee does not think it necessary that we should be furnished with the compilation of the local laws, I have no objection. We can buy copies, of course. I withdraw the amendment I suggested.

Mr. GORMAN. In line 17, on page 42, of the amendment which has just been read, after the date "1889," I move to insert a period, and then begin the next word with a capital "I."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 44, line 21, before the word "thousand," to strike out "five" and insert "fifteen;" so as to make the clause read:

To be expended only in case of emergency, such as riot, pestilence, public insurrection, conditions, calamity by fire, flood, or like character; and in all other cases of emergency not otherwise sufficiently provided for, $15,000; Provided, That in the purchase of all articles provided for in this act no more than the market price shall be paid, and all bids for any of such articles above the market price shall be rejected.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 45, line 5, before the word "thousand," to strike out "thirty-five," and insert "forty-five;" so as to make the clause read:

Support of convicts: For support, maintenance, and transportation of convicts transferred from the District of Columbia, to be expended under the direction of the Attorney-General, $45,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to the end of line 15, on page 45.

Mr. GORMAN. On page 45, line 15, after the word "dollars," I move to insert what I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GALLINGER in the chair). The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 15, on page 45, after the word "dollars," it is proposed to insert "to be expended under the direction of the Attorney-General;" so as to read:

Court-house, District of Columbia: For the following force necessary for the care and protection of the court-house in the District of Columbia, under the direction of the United States marshal of the District of Columbia: One clerk, $1,200; three watchmen, at $70 each; three firemen, at $70 each; five laborers, at $60 each; and seven assistant messengers, at $70 each; in all, $12,900, to be expended under the direction of the Attorney-General.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to the end of line 17, on page 45.

Mr. GORMAN. After the word "dollars," in line 17, on page 45, I move to insert what I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After the word "dollars," in line 17, on page 45, it is proposed to insert "to be expended under the direction of the Attorney-General;" so as to read:

Warden of the jail: For warden of the jail of the District of Columbia, $1,800, to be expended under the direction of the Attorney-General.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 49, line 1, before the word "soldiers," to insert "ex-Union;" so as to make the clause read:

For temporary home for ex-Union soldiers and sailors, Grand Army of the Republic, $2,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 49, line 7, before the word "thousand," to strike out "twelve" and insert "fifteen;" so as to make the clause read:

For Central Dispensary and Emergency Hospital, maintenance, $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. next amendment was, on page 49, line 9, before the word "thousand," to strike out "twenty" and insert "twenty-two;" so as to make the clause read:

For the Columbia Hospital for Women and Lying-in Asylum, maintenance, $25,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 49, after line 9, to insert:

For heating apparatus and fitting up and furnishing the new building, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 49, line 16, before the word "thousand," to strike out "eight" and insert "nine;" so as to make the clause read:

For the National Homeopathic Hospital Association of Washington, D. C., for maintenance, $9,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 49, line 24, before the word "thousand," to strike out "fifteen" and insert "seventeen," so as to make the clause read:

For salaries and compensation of the surgeon-in-chief, not to exceed $3,000; two assistant surgeons, clerk, engineer, and matron, nurses, laundresses, cooks, teamsters, watchmen, and laborers, $17,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 50, line 8, before the word "thousand," to strike out "fifty-three" and insert "fifty-five," so as to make the clause read:

For reading matter for patients, $5; in all, $55,025.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 51, after line 21, to insert:

For Young Woman's Christian Home, $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GORMAN. In line 25, on page 51, I move to strike out "nineteen thousand nine hundred" and insert "thirteen thousand four hundred."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 25, on page 51, it is proposed to strike out "nineteen thousand nine hundred" and insert "thirteen thousand four hundred;" so as to read:

For the Industrial Home School: For maintenance, $13,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 51, line 25, after the word "dollars," to insert:

Provided, That the board of managers of the Industrial Home School, on or before the 30th day of June, 1895, shall select the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and said Commissioners shall thereupon appoint a board of trustees of said school, consisting of nine members, whose terms of office shall be, for the first appointment, three members for one year, three members for two years, and three members for three years, and thereafter all appointments shall be for a term of three years except appointments to fill out unexpired terms. The board of trustees appointed by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, all designated for employment in said school shall manage the school under such regulations as now exist or hereafter be made by said board, subject to the approval of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia. All disbursements for the school shall be made by said board of trustees, and in the event of disapproval by said Commissioners of any selection by said board of trustees, the said Commissioners shall make the appointment. All supplies for said school shall be obtained by requisition upon said Commissioners, and all moneys received at said school as income thereof from sale of products and from payments for board and instruction, or otherwise, shall be paid over to said Commissioners. Provided further, That wards of the board of children's guardians committed to the Industrial Home School shall be supported by said school without charge to said board.

Mr. MC MILLAN. I call the attention of the Senator in charge of the bill to line 7, on page 53, where it is provided that the salary of the agent of the board of children's guardians shall not exceed $1,500.

I will say that I do not wish to increase the total amount for the expenses of this organization, but I ask that that provision be stricken out so that the board may have the power to pay its agent. Mr. Lewis, $1,800 instead of $1,500. The reason for that is that I have a letter from one of the members of the board informing me that Mr. Lewis has been offered $2,000 a year to go to a neighboring city. This man has had two years' experience here; he is of great value to the board, and it would be a great pity, it seems to me, to lose his services now. It is not everybody who understands the placing of children in these institutions, who knows where the homes are located, and knows the people. If this provision is allowed to stand we should be simply losing the services of a very competent man, and probably get someone who might cost us a great deal more. I ask the Senator in charge of the bill to accede to the amendment I propose.

Mr. GORMAN. The Senator moves to strike out "five hundred" and insert "eight hundred." I understand.

Mr. MC MILLAN. To strike out "not to exceed $1,500." That will enable the board to pay Mr. Lewis $1,800. That was the original agreement.

Mr. GORMAN. If the Senator will move to strike out "five" and insert "eight," so as to make the salary of the agent $1,800 instead of $1,500, I shall not object.

Mr. MC MILLAN. That will be satisfactory.

Mr. GORMAN. That does not increase the total amount of the appropriation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Michigan will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 52, line 17, it is proposed to strike out "five" and insert "eight;" so as to read:

Board of children's guardians: For the board of children's guardians, created under the act approved July 23, 1892, namely: For administrative expenses, including salary of agent, not to exceed $1,800, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to the end of the clauses making appropriations for the militia of the District of Columbia, on page 54, line 13.

Mr. ALLEN. For the purpose of bringing out some information in reference to the appropriation for the militia of the District I move to strike out all of page 53, from and including line 16 down to and including line 13 on page 54. I do not understand that this is a part of the regular military force of the United States, but that it is merely a local militia which exists here in the District of Columbia, the same as the militia exists in the various States and Territories.

I should like to inquire of the Senator from Maryland who has the bill in charge what change there is for the maintenance of a distinct military force in this city apart from the Regular Army of the United States, a part of which is always here or convenient to this District? I ask why this sum of money should be appropriated, and what is the necessity for it?

The total appropriation to be made for the military force is $33,750. The first item is "for rent, fuel, light, care and repair of armories, $14,000." The next is "for furniture for armories, $800."

Then "for lockers, gun-racks, and furniture for armories, $800." For prison and stationery, $300. These provisions convey the impression I am not at all familiar with the matter that the Government is renting certain buildings as armories for the different local military companies, paying quite a sum for rent and light of the armories, fuel, etc.

Now, I should like to know from the Senator from Maryland whether this is a part of the national military force of the United States, or whether it is an organization created in the District, the same as the different States create military forces within their borders. What particular office does this military forces perform that we should appropriate the sum of money proposed.

Mr. GORMAN. The military force in the District is organized under a special act of Congress. The government of the District is in the hands of Congress. There is no authority here except Congress. A few years ago an act was passed authorizing the organization, and the chief officers are appointed by the President of the United States. It is in its general makeup, of course, in line with the militia of the States, except here the forces are directly under the command of the President of the United States, there being no governor and no mayor of the city. Therefore it can not be exactly compared with the militia of any State.

It is a splendid organization. They have spent a great deal of money themselves. Once they had a hall at Albion's Theater, which it owns. But the government, that is to say, the city of Washington, renders them the aid provided for in the bill, and like all other appropriations one-half comes out of the Treasury of the United States, the other half the Government owns one-half of the property in the District. That, as the Senator from Nebraska knows, is the organization of the District of Columbia.

Mr. ALLEN. With the Senator's permission, I ask how many soldiers of this kind are there?

Mr. GORMAN. I think there would be about twelve or fourteen hundred effective men in case of emergency, and the President of the United States has the right to call on them for their service at any time.

Mr. ALLEN. So they are really, as a matter of fact, a part and parcel of the Regular Army?

Mr. GORMAN. They are, so far as their services are concerned.

Mr. ALLEN. What reason is there for the existence of this military force distinct from the Regular Army, a portion of which is always stationed in the vicinity of the city of Washington?

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator from Nebraska allow me?

Mr. ALLEN. Certainly.

Mr. CHANDLER. The Senator from Nebraska will notice that all the expenditures provided for in the bill, unless it is otherwise provided, are made one-half from the revenues of the District and one-half from the Treasury of the United States. If there were not this provision for a militia of the District of Columbia, then the District of Columbia would be the only place in the United States where there is no militia, for the Senator very well knows that every State has a militia. Every State enrolls its inhabitants and provides for a military force, greater or less. If it were not for the enrollment of this small military force in the District there would not be any militia of the District. The Senator from Nebraska certainly approves of the organization of the militia of every State. There is an organization of the militia in his own State, and he certainly would want some enrollment of the able-bodied men of the District of Columbia and a small military force here corresponding to the militia in all the States.

As the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] very well says, although it is in form an organization of the militia of the District, it is in reality a part of the United States forces, because here it is at the capital. I know the Senator from Nebraska would not want to have the District of Columbia without any military force except that of the Regular Army.

Mr. ALLEN. Perhaps I might as well direct my questions to the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER] as to the Senator from Maryland. One question which I desire answered is, What necessity is there for the existence of a distinct military organization of the District, independent of the Regular Army, and why should the enormous sum of $28,750 be appropriated for maintaining it?

Mr. CHANDLER. To provide for a small militia force in the District corresponding to the militia of the States.

Mr. ALLEN. For the purposes of parade or actual service?

Mr. CHANDLER. For the same purposes as the militia of the States—for drill and discipline, and use when needed.

Mr. GORMAN. Here are some provisions in the act organizing the District of Columbia militia, which I will read if the Senator from Nebraska desires it:

That the President of the United States shall be the commander in chief of the militia of the District of Columbia.

That there shall be appointed and commissioned by the President of the United States a commanding general of the militia of the District of Columbia.

That the President may assign an officer of the Army to act as adjutant-general of the militia of the District of Columbia.

That the enrolled militia shall not be subject to any duty except when called into the service of the United States or to aid the civil authorities in the execution of the laws or suppression of riot.

Those are some of the provisions of the act.

Mr. ALLEN. I certainly think this organization is entirely superfluous. If the citizens of the District of Columbia want to indulge in a distinct military force, they should sustain it themselves. I think the taxpayers of this nation have a right to complain of the maintenance of a distinct local military organization here at their expense.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Nebraska has expired. The Senate is acting under the five-minute rule.

Mr. GORMAN. I trust the Senator from Nebraska will have an opportunity to complete his statement. I ask unanimous consent that he may proceed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection the Senator from Nebraska will proceed. The Chair hears none.

Mr. CHANDLER. I should like to have the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. ALLEN] to the amendment again stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The Secretary. Strike out all after line 15, on page 53, of the bill down to and including line 15, on page 54.

Mr. CHANDLER. If the Senator from Nebraska will allow me, he can not really mean that he wants to abolish the little militia force of the District. I ask the Senator whether there is not a military force in Nebraska, and how large is it?

Mr. ALLEN. If I am not speaking out of order—

Mr. CHANDLER. The Senator from Nebraska has the floor. I am talking by his consent.

Mr. ALLEN. We have a larger military force in the State of Nebraska than the District of Columbia militia, but I wish to state to the Senator from New Hampshire that it does not cost $20,000 a year, so far as any expenditure on the part of the State government is concerned. That is my recollection. It does not cost that amount. In fact, I think we pay very little. The people of Nebraska have some pride in the organization of a military force of this kind. Nebraska is quite a large State, territorially, and we perhaps need a military force fully as much as one is needed in the District of Columbia. But the young men who enter into the militia force of the different States are men who mutually bear their own expenses. It is a source of pride to a great many young men to become members of military companies. I have this same pride. I have no objection to the District of Columbia having all the militia it wants. Every man and boy may be enlisted in the service, so far as I am concerned, but I do not think the Government of the United States ought to be required to pay such a sum of money as is proposed to be appropriated for maintenance of the militia.

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator from Nebraska again state the cost of the militia to the State of Nebraska?

Mr. ALLEN. I do not think it costs to exceed $2,000. I am guessing at it, however.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask the Senator from Nebraska whether, in addition to the payment by the State, the towns and cities of the State are not paying out sums of money for armories?

Mr. ALLEN. Not a dollar, except by private subscriptions.

Mr. CHANDLER. Do not the towns and cities pay anything?

Mr. ALLEN. Not a nickel—not a cent. Enterprising citizens who desire to encourage this display, because it is a mere display, contribute to some extent.

Mr. CHANDLER. So the total public cost to the State and to localities in the State of the militia of Nebraska, so far as the payment of money raised by taxation is concerned, does not exceed $2,000.

Mr. ALLEN. I do not think it exceeds $3,000. It may be that in exceptional instances, where the militia force has been called out, the cost has been greater. There have been one or two instances of that kind, notably during the Indian war a few years ago, when a number of thousands of dollars were paid to cover transportation and a few matters of that kind. But I am speaking of the annual expenses. My recollection is that at the present time we have no law, or at least no tax levy, to meet any military expenses.

Mr. CHANDLER. The Senator from Nebraska will notice that the proposed appropriation here is about $20,000.

Mr. ALLEN. Thirty-three thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars I believe the appropriation amounts to.

Mr. CHANDLER. I do not see so large a sum. The largest appropriation is $14,000. It amounts to about $20,000 in all.

Mr. ALLEN. Probably.

Mr. CHANDLER. Half of it only will be paid by the United States, and the other half by the District of Columbia. The United States pays it half because it is supposed to own half of the property in the District of Columbia.

I wish to state to the Senator from Nebraska that there is a very fine militia here. It is a credit to the city of Washington. It is a militia which well deserves it, if he does see it. I do not think he will want to despise it. Certainly this is not a very large sum of money to be expended in the capital city of the nation for the militia of the District of Columbia, with its large population and great wealth.

Mr. ALLEN. I have no objection whatever to there being, in the District of Columbia, all the military display imaginable or lyn Bridge and such will be Aqueduct Bridge if the proposed legislation is adopted.

The cost of the proposed change is very small when compared with the advantages that will result, and the Government will in a very short time be reimbursed. One hundred and thirty million dollars will be saved to the Government. It is that which allows the cars of any street-railway company terminating at Rosslyn to use the track on the bridge. This prevents a monopoly such as has been proposed by various companies calling for a change in the law. It is to the proposition submitted to the Commissioners by one company to make the change at its own cost if in return it was granted exclusive permission to use the track.

Does not the legislation recommended by the Commissioners offer a practical solution of a vexed problem by accomplishing a much needed improvement without injury (or ultimate cost) to the public?

L.

Mr. DANIEL. I do not know upon what grounds the committee of this body have not seen fit to recommend this measure. It can not be because they were not in liberal mood toward other improvements somewhat of a similar nature. If anyone will read the bill he will perceive that the Appropriations Committee, and those who have had it in charge and shaped it, have had a very liberal view toward the improvement of this city in all directions. Streets and avenues away out upon the suburbs, in territory which is by no means thickly crowded, and indeed which might be said to be thinly settled, are to be provided in the contemplation of this bill with magnificent avenues and with lines of sewers, and the needs of future generations, who we may anticipate will inhabit this territory, are very considerably regarded.

Mr. President, I shall not criticize nor make any unkind animadversion upon that order of statesmanship which shows so patriotic and so affectionate a regard for posterity, posterity ought to be considered in the contemplations of the statesman of to-day, but at the same time I have a little more appreciation of that statesmanship which considers the generation of people who are now upon the theater of action, and to supply their real and pressing wants, to meet their reasonable demands, and to provide for them fair accommodations while they are bearing the burden of the taxes which are to support the appropriation. That appeals to me in a much stronger light than provision for the generations who are to come and who will find, at least, a very ample opportunity afforded them for their own labors.

I see in this bill just above the point at which I have offered my amendment, that there is the following provision made by the Committee on Appropriations:

Bridge across the Eastern Branch: To enable the Secretary of War to make a survey, plan, and estimate of the cost of the construction of a substantial and suitable bridge with a main approach from the south of the Capitol street, or below it at the most available point across the Eastern Branch of the Potomac River, in the District of Columbia, and to report thereon to the Congress of the United States with such recommendations as he may deem proper, $35,000.

Mr. President, while we are reaching out to construct bridges collaterally to the city of Washington across the creeks and minor streams which pass through the District of Columbia, I can not see why it is not good policy to improve the bridges which we already have, and to build bridges where we have them not, to that community south of the Potomac River, which so much desires to have easy access to this city, and to those points south of the Potomac river which are situations of attraction, not only to the people of this city, but to the people of the entire country.

When I have heard from Senators who oppose this amendment some of the objections which they may urge to it, I may have something more to say; but, Mr. President, it does seem to me, from my comprehension of the subject-matter as gathered from the official communication and from the actual situation, that there is no appropriation of public money made by this bill which can be so economically made, or one which will more surely return a suitable and commensurate public accommodation.

Mr. FAULKNER. Mr. President, I do not propose to go into the details of this proposed amendment to any extent, because the subject before the Senate is not the merits of the appropriation, but the question of order which has been made in reference to the amendment being an improper one to a general appropriation bill. I may, however, refer to some remarks which fell from the Senator from Virginia, and say that this subject has been as thoroughly considered and with as much deliberation and care for two or three Congresses by both the District Committee and the Committee on Appropriations as any one subject which has come before those committees, and in every instance in which the subject has been brought before those committees an adverse decision to the proposition contained in the amendment of the Senator from Virginia has been had.

The Senator referred to the bridge across the Eastern Branch. I know of no appropriation in this bill, or in any other bill, in reference to bridges except those lying fully within the District of Columbia, and which are for the advantage and interest of citizens living in different sections of this District. That is a proper subject for consideration by Congress, and one which of course it is necessary should be considered.

I wish to say further, Mr. President, that we have given, or offered to give, every facility for the transportation of passengers and freight from the Virginia side of the river into the District of Columbia. We passed at the last session a bill which allows a Virginia railroad to come up to a point opposite Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue. We have frequently expressed the sentiment and the opinion to the railroad corporations desirous of coming into the District from the Virginia side of the river—

Mr. DANIEL. Will the Senator state what company that was?

Mr. FAULKNER. The Mount Vernon Railroad Company.

Mr. DANIEL. A ferry?

Mr. FAULKNER. Yes, a ferry was provided by which the gentlemen in charge of the company said to us that they could make the transportation across the river in from five to seven minutes without inconvenience.

We have also made propositions to the railroads seeking to come into the District from the Virginia side, or we have announced our willingness to do so, to allow them to construct a bridge just above the Aqueduct Bridge, at what is called the Three Sisters, and enable them to make a bridge there, to be open to all railroads, and require tolls to be paid upon it by all railroad companies other than the companies that should construct it, but the proposition is not satisfactory to those gentlemen, simply because they want the Government to furnish them the means of transportation across the river, and do not want to invest their own private funds in these improvements from which they are to derive the great benefit.

The Aqueduct Bridge is not a very strong bridge, and we had to appropriate last year $54,000 in order to save it from falling, in addition to $30,000 two years ago.

Mr. DANIEL. Did not that make the bridge strong?

Mr. FAULKNER. I hope it did, but the $30,000 we at first appropriated did not, and we had to make an additional appropriation of $54,000.

Now the proposition of the Senator is that this private corporation, by the expenditure of the funds of the District and the funds of the United States Government in equal proportion, shall come in and take that bridge, the only outlet to Arlington and Fort Myer, and place adjacent to the walkway a street railway-bridge, building it on the abutments which are now there, and adding, I suppose, of course, some additional width to those abutments.

I think, Mr. President, so far as the merits of this case are concerned, that the Committee on the District of Columbia and the Committee on Appropriations have acted wisely in both the instances in which they have refused to grant this privilege.

I desire now to refer to the question which is really before the Senate, the question before the Senate is the point of order. This item has been estimated for by the Secretary of the Treasury and an estimate made by the District Commissioners, and therefore the point of order that it was not estimated for under the first clause of Rule XVI would not have been good, but no one can read the pending amendment and come to any conclusion other than the one that the point of order made under the third clause of Rule XVI is well taken, which is that:

No amendment which proposes general legislation shall be received to any general appropriation bill, nor shall any amendment not germane or relevant to the subject matter contained in the bill be received.

The amendment proposed by the Senator from Virginia opens up an entirely new subject of legislation. It provides that any railroad company coming from Virginia not using steam power shall have the privilege not only of crossing that bridge, but shall have the charter, right, and franchises to go over certain streets in the District of Columbia, or adjacent to the M street, to the general station which has been established at that point. That is general legislation, and it strikes me that this point of order having been submitted to the Senate, there can be no question but that the Senate is bound to hold that under the point of order raised the amendment is not in order and should not be now considered.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I should be entirely willing that the Senate should pass upon the merits of this amendment, and I have no doubt that it will so vote. It is a tradition in the Senate, as old Senators will bear me out in saying, that when the question of an amendment being in order is submitted to the Senate, Senators vote upon the merits of the question. That is one way of getting at it. In fact, there are many cases where appeals have been taken from the decision of the Chair adverse to amendments, where the amendments have been put on the bill by the Senate, it being understood in such cases that the Senate votes upon the merits of the particular amendment.

Certainly, Mr. President, if there ever is to be any resistance made to the efforts of railway companies to confiscate every avenue of travel into this District, this is the most pertinent, the most salient point for making that resistance which I have known in my experience here.

We have already practically destroyed the road upon the land below and in giving the railroad companies the right to run tracks alongside of it, and they frighten people away. Protests were made against it, but it was done in a stealthy way, when no opportunity was given to defeat the proposition, in order to bring these companies to the river. Having got to the river, we have given them authority to build their bridge as any other railroad company builds its bridge across a stream, and come into Washington, but they are not content with that.

The only avenue that is left for anybody seeking in a modest way to drive over to Arlington is across this bridge. As has been said, it is not a very strong bridge. There have been fears about it and it has been strengthened to the extent that the travel for which it was built is safe over it. But it is proposed here to erect a structure right alongside for the cars, sloping and growing higher and higher, a patent device for frightening everybody and every horse that goes over. As the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. FAULKNER) said, the company, instead of building its bridge as it is seeking now to take control of and use this bridge and drive the public from the last place over which it can drive to Arlington.

Nobody is for the proposition; no committee is for it. It has not gone through the crucible of the District Committee. I understand the committee is opposed to it. The Senator from West Virginia, who is a leading member of the committee, so states, and the chairman of the committee has just told me the same thing; and the gentleman from Maryland, who is the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. DANIEL) for representing his constituents, and seeking to improve their property. He is in that condition where whatever he may see about the intrinsic merit of the proposition he is compelled, as I should be in his case, to advocate, but the rest of us feel differently. I should be very glad to see a vote on the merits of the proposition; and I move to lay the amendment on the table.

Mr. DANIEL. I hope the Senator from Maine will withdraw that motion and allow the case to be presented.

Mr. HALE. I withdraw the motion for the present.

Mr. DANIEL. It will not take long.

Mr. HUNTON. Mr. President, in addition to what has been so well said by my colleague [Mr. DANIEL], I desire to detain the Senate but a moment in discussing the matter now pending before the submission to the Senate by the President of the Senate of the point of order raised by the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER].

In regard to the point of order, I beg leave to call the attention of the Senate to the rule on the subject:

All general appropriation bills shall be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, except bills making appropriations for rivers and harbors, which shall be referred to the Committee on Commerce; and no amendments shall be made to any general appropriation bill, or to any bill which to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add a new item of appropriation, unless it be made to carry out the provisions of some existing law, or to amend or to repeal an act or resolution previously passed by the Senate during that session; or unless the same be moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate, or proposed in pursuance of an order of the Senate.

So if the amendment is in pursuance of an estimate made by the head of a Department it is in order under the rule. I beg to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that in the Book of Estimates, to which my friend referred in his opening remarks, there is an estimate for this very amendment almost in totidem verbis, the sum of $26,200. So the amendment, being founded upon an estimate of the Secretary of the Treasury, comes directly within the rule that I have just read to the Senate. Therefore it seems to me that technically the point of order raised by the Senator from West Virginia is not well taken. But as it has been said by several, when the point of order has been submitted to the Senate by the Chair, it goes to the Senate to a very great extent upon the merits of the proposition, and on that I desire to say a word or two.

It is true, as stated by the Senator from West Virginia, that the Committee on the District of Columbia of this body has made no report on that proposition in favor of it, but I desire as a member of that committee, to state that I believe it is one of the most meritorious measures that has been before the Committee on the District of Columbia. While the Committee on the District of Columbia is opposed to the proposition, almost everybody else is in favor of it. The District Commissioners are in favor of it, the people of the District of Columbia are in favor of it, and it is believed, but not asserted as a fact, that both the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of War are in favor of it. We know that the Secretary of War has direct charge and control of all bridges that lead into the District of Columbia. Besides these, the people outside of the District residing in my own State, I can not undertake to state the number, but more than the people of two counties, Alexandria County and Fairfax County, in the State of Virginia, are interested in this very proposition, because they come to Washington daily with provisions for the people of the District of Columbia. Thus it is not only a matter of interest to a great many people in Virginia, but of interest to the people of the District of Columbia, because their marketing is to a very great extent brought from the other side of the river.

Mr. President, if this is a popular measure, which I have described to be, then it seems to me that it ought to be favorably considered, unless there be controlling reasons against it. I see none whatever. In the first place, there is now no means of access by street railway service to the other side of the river. The adjacent territory of Maryland has been penetrated by street railways, organized and incorporated, so far as the territory of the District is concerned, by laws of Congress enacted for the District of Columbia and emanating from the Committee on the District of Columbia. But not one has been provided to penetrate the adjoining territory in the State of Virginia.

Now, my friend a while ago alluded to the fact that Congress passed, during its last session, I believe it was, a bill to authorize a street railway, or a railway whose motive power is not steam, to come into the District. We will look at that for a moment. The act provides that the Mount Vernon and Washington Street Railway Company shall have the privilege of passing over the river by a ferry and entering the city at the end of the Long Bridge. The road comes to Arlington; then it has to come down to the Long Bridge, where it takes to a ferry, and, going clear around what is called the island, comes up and lands at this end of the Long Bridge.

It is therefore a long ferry. The original plan of the company was to come from Arlington straight to the river, cross the river in a short distance, and have street-railway accommodations on this side of the river. But that the committee refused, and finally reported the bill as I have described it. With the exception of that, which does not accommodate, there is no railway accommodation between the city of Washington and the State of Virginia. When I say railway accommodation, I mean other than steam, because we know that the Pennsylvania road runs over the Long Bridge. We also know that there is a proposition, which was favorably considered, to build a bridge across the river at the Three Sisters, but that was for a steam road. There is no accommodation provided for the entrance into this city from Virginia of cars propelled by any motive power other than steam.

My friend from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER] says that the company has the right to build a bridge at the Three Sisters. We all know that that is a virtual denial of the right to have railway accommodation between the State of Virginia and the District of Columbia, because there is no street-railway company able to build a bridge at the Three Sisters. But here is a bridge already built which everybody that I know of, except the members of the District Committee, have said is eminently fitted for a street railway without interfering at all with the travel across the bridge by persons in carriages and on foot. The Aqueduct Bridge was originally a bridge built for the accommodation of the canal. It was the aqueduct bridge, and the aqueduct transported the canal boats from this side of the river to the other. During the war a suspension structure was placed upon the bridge over which carriages and foot passengers passed. Since that time the Government has taken control of the bridge and has reconstructed it and it is now a very fine bridge.

My friend from West Virginia says the Government has already had to spend money in strengthening the piers. That is true, but it was because the river had undermined one of the piers. Everybody who has examined the piers of the Aqueduct Bridge knows that since the repairs have been made it is one of the best constructed and strongest bridges in the United States, and no man can look at those piers without saying they are among the best he ever saw. The Commissioners of the District of Columbia, the Secretary of War, and his engineer say the bridge is eminently fitted for a passway for street cars, cars not propelled by steam; and if it be, is it not wrong to withhold the privilege of putting a street railway on the bridge which would not interfere with the foot passengers and passengers by carriages across the bridge?

If the amendment is not amenable to the point of order, or if the question is submitted to the Senate by the Chair in order that the merits of the amendment may be tested by voting upon the point of order, then I say there is everything to commend the bridge to the favorable consideration of the Senate. I seek nothing against it. Senators talk about an appropriation. This is not an appropriation which will be charged upon the Treasury, because the District Commissioners are authorized to charge so much per head for the passengers who cross the bridge by railway, not less than 1 cent. If 1 cent is charged it will bring a revenue over and above the expenses for the care and repair of the bridge. So, while it is an expenditure of $26,200, according to the estimate, there is a provision in the amendment that will result in more than the Treasury more than 10 per cent interest upon the investment.

I sincerely hope the Senate will pass favorably upon the amendment.

Mr. MCMLLAN. Mr. President, I do not know that I would anything to what the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER] says, who is a member of the District of Columbia Committee, has said in regard to the proposed use of the Aqueduct Bridge as a street railway. The committee have had the matter under advisement several times during the last four or six years, and every time it has been voted down. They have considered that it would be dangerous to the life of the people who are traveling by the hundreds and thousands to Fort Myer and Arlington to have any kind of cars run across the highway. Moreover, the committee did not consider the pier equally to the additional strain; and they had reports from the Commissioners to that effect. The method proposed under the amendment is even more objectionable than prior propositions, for it involves building an overhead structure on which the cars are to run.

I hope the proposition may be tested on its merits. The committee by a large majority has always been against the use of the bridge for street-railway purposes, and the members would like to have the judgment of the Senate.

Mr. PLATT. What is the question before the Senate?

Mr. THE VICE-PRESIDENT. An amendment was proposed by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL], and the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER] interposed a point of order.

Mr. PLATT. What is the point of order; that the amendment is general legislation?

Mr. THE VICE-PRESIDENT. That it is general legislation on an appropriation bill.

Mr. HARRIS. I rise for the purpose of appealing to the Senator from West Virginia to withdraw his question of order and let us come to a direct vote upon the merits of the amendment. While I am unalterably opposed to allowing the bridge to be used for railway purposes, I am quite ready to come to a direct vote upon the merits of the proposition, and I hope the Senator from West Virginia will withdraw the question of order that he raised in respect to it.

Mr. GORMAN. I unite with the Senator from Tennessee in requesting the Senator from West Virginia to withdraw the point of order, so that we may vote directly upon the question. I trust the same course will be pursued as to another amendment to be offered which is important, provided we can have a vote in a reasonable time. If not, of course after reasonable debate I shall move to lay the amendment on the table, as it is absolutely necessary to pass the bill to-day.

Mr. FAULKNER. In response to the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GORMAN] I will state that I, too, think it is proper that we shall come to a direct vote on the merits of the proposition. In order to get a direct vote I will withdraw the point of order and allow the amendment to stand on its merits.

Mr. BATE. I ask to have the amendment again reported.

The Secretary again read Mr. DANIEL'S amendment.

Mr. DANIEL. Mr. President, it is true that some of my constituents are interested in the amendment. That is patent; that is professed. But it is also true that the constituents of the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], and the Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMILLAN], and the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER] are interested in the amendment; for the bridge in the case connects the District of Columbia, which is under the sole jurisdiction of the Congress of the United States, with extended property of the United States on the south bank of the river, also exclusively under the jurisdiction of this Government, and with which the State of Virginia is not permitted to interfere.

Alexandria County is the immediate political community across the river. It is a small county, and the largest landholder in the county is the Government of the United States. As matters now stand this large landholding of 1,100 acres, the Arlington estate, is an impediment to the stimulus to progress. It assumes to me that if there is any situation which could commend to the Congress of the United States legislation to fit it, it is that one in which the Government of the United States has its jurisdiction over the whole, or nearly the whole, of the immediate people and territory affected by it.

I shall examine the objections to the amendment which have been stated by the distinguished gentlemen who have opposed it. I do not think the strength of the objections will by any means be increased by an analysis of the considerations which those Senators have suggested. The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. FAULKNER] considers that the bridge accommodation ought not to be provided, first, as he said, because an act was passed last year authorizing a ferry at another point. This is not the age of ferries. That is a slow-going, difficult means of access from one territory to another, which does not suit the spirit nor the improved means of communication in this age.

It may suit some river in the mountains of West Virginia; it may suit some small stream here or there, but I do not think the capital of the United States and the thickly populated community upon its suburb ought to be dealt with according to the ancient rural methods in the West Virginia mountains. I think we are entitled to have quick transportation and transportation by the most improved methods which are known to modern municipal government and civilization, and the suggestion from the Committee on the District of Columbia of a ferry seems to be more ludicrous than argumentative.

In the next place, Mr. President, the gentlemen of the committee emphasize the fact that they do not mean please to recommend the amendment. That is a consideration entitled to respect, but I do not know that either the Senator from Michigan or the Senator from West Virginia is more expert as to the strength of bridges, which is so often suggested by them as a makeshift against the amendment, than the expert, accomplished engineer who is a member of the District Commission. He has been before the committee, and has testified to the committee in my presence that there is no question about the strength of the bridge. The State reminds us that $54,000 was expended last year to make the bridge strong.

The engineer of the District testifies that it has made it strong, and yet the gentlemen, neither of whom will undertake seriously to put his opinion against the expert testimony of an accomplished engineer, constantly introduce into the debate the statement that this ought not to be done because the bridge is too weak. Those rock piers in the river were constructed to bear a canal with the boats on it, and they have been recently strengthened by the expenditure by the Government of $54,000. They are shown to be strong by the expert testimony we have, and no element of weakness appears about the bridge except in the imaginative arguments of the gentlemen of the Committee of the District of Columbia, who say they have not recommended it, and therefore Congress ought not to consider it.

I have the utmost respect for those Senators within their appropriate jurisdiction and according to their standards and their knowledge, but are they not asking a little too much of the Senate of the United States when, with all the proof on one side, without a suggestion of infirmity save their own suggestion of a possible weakness, they state that piers which were built to carry the immense weight of a canal with boats upon it might not bear the additional weight of a street car on the bridge? This argument had evidently better be put on the retired list, though I hardly think that in that situation it would deserve to command a pension.

Mr. President, the next objection we have is that somebody or some horse or other might be frightened. That is to say, the cable cars can penetrate the main avenues of Washington City without creating any apprehension in the minds of the distinguished custodians of the District of Columbia that any horses or people will be frightened; the merry trolley cars can sing all through the populous districts of northern Washington, admitted by the ladies and gentlemen of the District of Columbia, and they do not at all apprehensive that in the populous, thickly crowded streets of Washington horses or people are going to be frightened by the electric wires or by the rush and swing of the cars.

Every manner of street railway communication is admitted by those gentlemen into the very heart of populous Washington and right around its Capitol, but when we propose upon a bridge, broad and strong, to let a street car pass, they are immediately consternated by the apprehension that some of the horses that have traveled 10, 15, 20 miles alongside of these cars all through the city will suddenly get frightened. I beg to state that I think the apprehensions of the gentlemen as to the frightening of horses when they arrive at this particular point is based rather upon some other argument against the proposition than on any solid basis.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMILLAN] says the street railway ought not to be permitted to go along the bridge because it will be a hindrance to a walkway. Is there any street railway, cable, trolley, horse car, or any other method of street-car communication in the District of Columbia that is not adjacent to a walkway? Is there anything remarkable in the fact that when the street cars go across the bridge there will be near by a walkway, which of course will be protected from the cars? In my observation of street cars I have seldom seen them anywhere except adjacent to walkways and highways. That is the place for them, that is the purpose of them, and that is the place to which the District Committee has continuously and systematically admitted them. Horses are not going to be any more frightened when they get into that drive than they are here in the populous city of Washington. The walkways to the south bank of the Potomac are no more dangerous than those that gentlemen walk on when they come to the Capitol or stand upon for the purpose of hailing a street car by their side.

The Senator from West Virginia says these street-car lines want a bridge built for them by the Government of the United States. He postures them in the attitude of asking something which other companies have not asked, and of asking some gratuity from the District or from the Government which ought not to be granted. Have any of these gentlemen ever charged anything for the many franchises which they have recommended through the valuable highways of this city? Have they ever recommended that the street-car lines which they continuously admit and charter shall pay for the privilege of going upon those broad and frequented highways which are most valuable and rich franchises? Is there

Mr. GORMAN. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments disagreed to by the House of Representatives and agree to the conference asked for by the House.

The motion was agreed to.
By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. GORMAN, Mr. COCKRELL, and Mr. ALLISON were appointed.

WILLIAM MCGARRAHAN.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the request of the House of Representatives to send to the House a duplicate of the engrossed bill (S. 341) to submit to the Court of Private Land Claims, established by an act of Congress approved March 3, 1891, the title of William McGarrahan to the Rancho Panoche Grande, in the State of California, and for other purposes; and by unanimous consent the request was ordered to be complied with and a duplicate of the engrossed bill sent to the House.

SURVEY OF KALAMAZOO RIVER.

Mr. CULLOM. I am directed by the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the joint resolution (H. Res. 269) authorizing the Secretary of War to make a survey of Kalamazoo River from Lake Michigan to Saugatuck, to report it favorably without amendment. It is a very simple little joint resolution, consisting of a few lines, and I ask for its present consideration.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

Mr. CULLOM. I will state that the cost of the survey will be only $850, to be taken out of an appropriation already made.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RULES OF NAVIGATION ON INLAND WATERS.

Mr. FRYE. I am instructed by the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8563) to adopt special rules for the navigation of harbors, rivers, and inland waters of the United States, supplementary to the act of August 19, 1890, entitled "An act to adopt regulations for preventing collisions at sea," to report it favorably with amendments. I submit a written report thereon.

It is a bill which must be a law before March 1 on account of the proclamation of the President putting into force the international rules of the sea. Therefore I ask that the bill may receive present consideration.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The first amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, in section 1, line 3, before the words "forty-four hundred and twelve," to strike out the words "forty-two hundred and thirty-four," and in line 7, after the word "be," to strike out "obeyed by vessels of the merchant marine of the United States, other than vessels coming from or departing for the high seas," and insert "followed;" so as to make the section read:

That on and after March 1, 1895, the provisions of sections 4233, 4412, and 4413 of the Revised Statutes and regulations pursuant thereto shall be followed by the harbors, rivers, and inland waters of the United States.

The provisions of said sections of the Revised Statutes and regulations pursuant thereto are hereby declared special rules duly made by local authority relative to the navigation of harbors, rivers, and inland waters as provided for in article 30 of the act of August 19, 1890, entitled "An act to adopt regulations for preventing collisions at sea."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to add as an additional section:

Sec. 2. The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized, empowered, and directed from time to time to designate and define by suitable bearings or ranges with light-houses, light vessels, buoys, or coast objects the lines dividing the high seas from rivers, harbors, and inland waters.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to add as an additional section:

Sec. 3. Collectors or other chief officers of the customs shall require all sail vessels to be furnished with proper signal lights. Every such vessel that shall be navigated without complying with the statutes of the United States or the regulations prescribed, and that may be lawfully made thereunder, shall be liable to a penalty of $20, one-half to go to the informer; for which sum the vessel so navigated shall be liable, and may be seized and proceeded against by way of lien in any district court of the United States having jurisdiction of the offense.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to add as an additional section:

Sec. 4. The words "inland waters" used in this act shall not be held to include the Great Lakes and their connecting and tributary waters as far east as the regulations prescribed, and this act shall not in any respect modify or affect the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate navigation on the Great Lakes and their connecting and tributary waters," approved February 9, 1895.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read a third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to adopt special rules for the navigation of harbors, rivers, and inland waters of the United States, except the Great Lakes and their connecting and tributary waters as far east as Montreal, supplementary to the act of August 19, 1890, entitled "An act to adopt regulations for preventing collisions at sea."

Mr. FRYE. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. RANSOM, Mr. WHITE, and Mr. FRYE were appointed.

LOUISIANA OR HONDURAS LOTTERY COMPANY.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, on the 19th of December I submitted a resolution asking for the appointment of a special committee to investigate the Honduras Lottery Company in its operations in Florida. By unanimous consent the resolution was laid upon the table without prejudice, subject to be called up at any time. I now ask for the consideration of the resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be laid before the Senate.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. CALL December 19, 1894, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate, That a special committee be, and is hereby, created, who shall be charged with the duty of inquiring and reporting to the Senate whether the Louisiana or Honduras Lottery Company has been established and now operating in the State of Florida and engaged in business there and in the use of the mails and of the interstate-commerce corporations or companies in violation of the laws of the United States and of the State of Florida. The committee shall also inquire whether the Louisiana or Honduras Company, its owners, managers, directors, or agents, have entered into a combination with any person or persons or corporations for the control of the elections and the legislature and the members of Congress and the executive officers of the State of Florida. The committee shall also inquire and report whether the Louisiana or Honduras Lottery Company, or any person connected with it, or any corporations in any way connected with such lottery company, expended money in the late elections of the State of Florida for members of Congress or members of the legislature, and whether they or it, either directly or indirectly, any interests in newspapers published in the State, and whether they or any of them, have contributed money for the establishment of newspapers or for subsidizing newspapers.

The committee shall also inquire and report whether the political conventions or the elections for Congress and for members of the legislature of the State of Florida have been influenced or controlled by the Louisiana or Honduras Lottery Company, and if so, to what extent, or by any corporation or persons connected with or in combination with it or with the persons who were expended in the late elections by the Louisiana or Honduras Lottery Company, or by any person or corporation in any way connected, combined with, or interested in such lottery company, or in persons connected with it, and in what way and by what person such money was expended, and by what persons it was contributed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution of the Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL].

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to ask the Senator from Florida to make some little explanation of the resolution. I do not object to its consideration.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I shall object to the consideration of any resolution or bill that is to elicit debate. It is my purpose to move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill as soon as the routine morning business shall have been completed. I shall object to the consideration at this time of any matter that is calculated to lead to debate.

Mr. HARRIS. I wish to ask if the resolution has been referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It has not been so referred, the Chair will state.

Mr. HARRIS. I think the resolution is obliged to go to that committee.

Mr. CALL. The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] was in the chair when the resolution was introduced. This very question was then raised, and he decided that as the resolution involved no expense it was in order without reference to the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

Mr. HARRIS. I am advised that the original resolution submitted by the Senator from Florida provided for the payment of the expenses of the committee out of the contingent fund of the Senate. To avoid the reference I now withdraw the Senator from Florida withdrew the original resolution and introduced this one, which does not provide for an expense against the contingent fund.

Mr. HOAR. Let the resolution be read again for the information of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will again be read.

The Secretary again read the resolution.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, the Honduras Lottery Company, formerly known as the Louisiana Lottery Company, is a foreign corporation domiciled in a foreign country. It is perhaps the most powerful corporation in the world. It assailed the form of government in the State of Louisiana for years. It proposed, as has been stated in the public prints, to pay the entire debt of the State of Louisiana for the privilege of continuing its operations there. It is believed to have been essentially dangerous to the continuation of government by the people of that State. It is now known to have established itself in the State of Florida, claiming to conduct its drawings outside the jurisdiction of the United States, and to find a place of distribution and a place of publication within the limits of that State.

It is believed by the people of Florida that in connection with others it has expended great sums of money toward perpetuating its existence in that State, eluding the operation of the laws of the United States, which seek to prevent its continuance within any State. A foreign corporation finding a location within the United States and seeking by the most powerful influences to corrupt officials charged with the execution of the laws, in my judgment, ought to be investigated, to the end that Congress may see what legislation is necessary to prevent its operation in this country.

If it be true that the company has violated no law of the United States, that there is nothing within the competency of Congress to do. I for one shall not ask any violation of the Constitution or the distinctive authority of the General Government and the States. But it seems to me that it concerns the whole country to know whether a foreign combination can find a lodgment here against the laws of the United States and against the laws of any State, and interfere with the political conditions and the public policy of this country. Upon that point it would seem to me there can be no difference of opinion. Therefore I have asked for the appointment of a special committee. No regular standing committee of this body can be expected to take the labor and the continued trouble which the investigation will impose, and for that reason I have asked that a special committee be created.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask the Senator from Florida whether the resolution carries with it authority to appoint a clerk and provision for a stenographer and so on?

Mr. CALL. It does not.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask the Senator from Florida what earthly effect the committee will have or what benefit it will be if there is no machinery to carry out the investigation.

Mr. CALL. We will see after the resolution is adopted what machinery is necessary to carry out the purpose of the resolution, and then we can ask for it if necessary. The resolution provides for no expense.

Mr. GORMAN. I suggest to the Senator from Florida in his own interest as well as for the proper and orderly conduct of affairs here whether it would not be better to refer the resolution to the Committee on Contingent Expenses and, if we are to have the investigation, provide for whatever clerical force is necessary.

Mr. CALL. I think not. I prefer that the Senate shall say whether or not they think it is advisable to make such an investigation. If that be the sense of the Senate, as I think it ought to be, then there will be ample time to make provision for whatever is necessary in the way of clerical force.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, I do not know whether the Senator from Florida has made a sufficient explanation of the resolution, or if he has done so, whether the Senate has given that attention to the subject which it ought to give to everything the Senator from Florida submits for consideration.

I should like to ask the Senator from Florida whether he himself is convinced that the lottery company has been doing all those things in the State of Florida which he has set out at so much length. According to the resolution, it has been interfering generally in the management of the government of Florida. It has been taking possession, so to speak, of the politics of the State and of the machinery of government therein.

If I am not mistaken, that is the purpose of the resolution, and I wish to understand distinctly whether the Senator from Florida believes all those things have been done by the lottery company. If they have been done or he believes they have been done, and so says upon his responsibility as a Senator, I shall certainly vote for the investigation. But I do not think the resolution ought to be adopted unless there is a pretty strong assurance from some quarter that the lottery company is doing the extraordinary acts which it is suggested by the resolution it has been doing. I should like to hear further from the Senator from Florida on that point. If he will oblige me.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I move that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of the bill making appropriations for the diplomatic and consular service.

Mr. CALL. I do not think that is a fair way to oppose the resolution.

Mr. BLACKBURN. My motion is not debatable. The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair is hearing the suggestion of the Senator from Florida.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I do not mean to treat the resolution unfairly, but I desire that the Senate shall proceed with necessary legislation.

Mr. CALL. The resolution is debatable. There can be no doubt about that.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I beg the Senator's pardon, but I do not understand that under the rule a motion to proceed to the consideration of a bill is debatable. I should be obliged if the Senator from Florida would show me the rule.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator from Florida that the motion of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN] is not debatable. The Chair will listen to the suggestion of the Senator from Florida, however.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, I desire—

Mr. BLACKBURN. I object to any debate.

Mr. CALL. I ask unanimous consent that I may answer the question of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER].

Mr. BLACKBURN. I object to any debate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question must be taken without debate on the motion of the Senator from Kentucky that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill.

Mr. BLACKBURN. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to take the roll.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. President—

Mr. ALDRICH answered to his name on the roll call.

Mr. PLATT. I am too late.

So the motion was agreed to.

Mr. CALL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. What position does that leave the resolution in?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair is of the opinion that the resolution goes to the Calendar.

Mr. CALL. I will state that there was unanimous consent that the resolution might lie on the table, and be called up at any time.

Mr. BLACKBURN. It was called up.

Mr. CALL. I should like to have the resolution retain its place.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. The resolution was called up and it has gone to the Calendar.

DIPLOMATIC AND CONSULAR APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8234) making appropriations for the diplomatic and consular service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, the pending question being on the amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations, on page 9, after line 8, to insert: CONSTRUCTION OF TELEGRAPH CABLE BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

The President is hereby authorized to cause the entire cost of laying a telegraphic cable between the United States and the Hawaiian Islands and to direct the construction of such cable when necessary and practicable, and to use all the funds of such cable when necessary and practicable, and to use all the funds of such cable when necessary and practicable.

Mr. PLATT. I desire to say that if I could have obtained the floor before the commencement of the roll call I should have made the point of order that while morning business is being transacted prior to 2 o'clock it is not in order to move to take up any bill. I simply give notice that whenever that question shall come before the Senate again I propose to make that point of order.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I do not care to discuss a point of order that has not been raised, but I submit to the Senator from Connecticut that if he will consult the rule a little more closely than he seems to have done, he will find that after the hour of 1 o'clock it is in order to make the motion I made.

Mr. PLATT. I have consulted the rule, I think, as closely as the Senator from Kentucky has, and I am quite ready to maintain my proposition that by the rules of the Senate if morning business has not been concluded there can be no motion made to take up any bill until 2 o'clock.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I do not care to discuss a point of order that has never been submitted; but the Chair has already ruled upon the proposition raised by the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. PLATT. I know it.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I ask that the bill may be passed without. Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I do not intend to renew discussion of the Hawaiian matter, but in support of what I said yesterday I wish to read the action of the British commissioners in those islands. I find in the morning paper the following:

HONOLULU, January 20. The instructions to Admiral Boscawen reached Honolulu some two hours before the admiral, who arrived on the Delphic last night. The admiral has been much surprised to find that the Hawaiian Government is attempting to maintain as well as to extend over the Hawaiian Islands a system of taxation. Several other American ships in Honolulu have been seized by the Hawaiian Government in the same manner. The admiral's instructions have been to take steps to protect the British ships and to demand compensation for the same.

British Commissioner Hawes takes seriously the fact that a new system of protection to British subjects. The editor of the Bulletin, until lately a constant supporter of the Hawaiian cause, has been asked to join the Government, and that he would not have his protection as a British subject by doing so.

Mr. GRAY. Mr. President, I did not intend to say another word in regard to the proposition which the Senator from Colorado and myself discussed yesterday. I hoped at one time we had agreed. I am very sure that the contention maintained by me as to the instruction of the Secretary of the Navy to Admiral Walker last summer is sound. I do not propose to discuss it any further. But as the Senator from Colorado has read a dispatch as to what certain people in Honolulu think in regard to that instruction, and it is apparent that they are laboring under the same mistake which I conceive the Senator from Colorado was laboring under, I will merely at this time ask that there may be printed in the Record an English authority on that proposition, inasmuch as the dispatch read from the newspaper referred to, which I read under the circumstances that have been detailed. I read from Lorrimer's History of the Law of Nations. It is a fine work, written by James Lorrimer, LL. D., who was a member of public law and the law of nations in the University of Edinburgh, member of the Institute of Jurisprudence of Madrid, etc. I know nothing of this writer except what I find in the title page of the book; but it seems to be a carefully written book, and written by a person who has been a student of international law. The writer answers the following question put by himself:

May the citizen of an independent State, or the subject of a foreign State, be considered as a subject of another State? I do not wish to detain the Senate longer than is sufficient to read a brief extract, but I ask that the extract I have marked may be printed in the Record. He had been a member of the Turkish navy and had been a member of the Turkish navy and had been a member of the Turkish navy and had been a member of the Turkish navy.

First. May the citizen of an independent State, or the subject of a foreign State, be considered as a subject of another State?

The response which our theory yields is simple enough. The citizen qua citizen of the neutral State may not, but the person qua citizen of the world may. But how is the same individual to act in two separate capacities? Can he stay at home and be a citizen of the world? No. My answer consists in observing that while his personality is indeleible his citizenship is not. The right on his part of putting it off falls under the category of those personal rights which are subject to the rule of the law deriving him of it springing not less obviously from the very existence of the State.

While his personality, with its corresponding rights and duties, exists independently of human volition, the rights of allegiance, of his personality, his citizenship, with his citizen rights and duties, may cease by an act either of his own will or the will of the State to which he belongs. For the State being, it is true, he may surrender his personality to his sovereign, and this he does in every case in which he accepts the service of the State. So long as his service to one State continues, it shuts him out from serving another State, and any contract of service which he enters into from a second contract. He can not serve two masters at the same time; but inasmuch as he is a servant and not a slave, he may pass from the service of one master to the service of another, when the conditions of his contract with the first have been fulfilled. As we have said, the conditions of free citizenship do not and can not exclude the right of renouncing it.

Now, such, I think, is not only true theory of the international position of the person, but it is the theory which more or less consistently the common law of nations recognizes. Hobart Pasha was compelled to resign his commission in the English navy when he took the commission of the navy of the Sultan. Had the theory of neutrality been accurately carried out, Hobart Pasha could not only to have resigned his commission as an English officer before he became a Turkish officer (which he did not do till after), but he ought to have renounced or to have been deprived of his nationality or citizenship as an Englishman the moment after he became a Turkish officer. Citizenship and public service are inseparable. Hobart Pasha, as an English officer, was not entitled to accept Turkish service.

The distinction between his position as an English officer and as an English citizen I hold to be that in the former case he was bound to serve, but he would have been entitled, in virtue of his personality, to enlist in the Turkish service, though by doing so his English citizenship would also have been abandoned. As an English citizen he was bound to serve, but he was free of choice as a private citizen revived. He was under no obligation to continue to be an Englishman, but he had no more right to be an English citizen than a Turk at the same time that he had to be a Christian and a Mohammedan. Whilst yet an Englishman in the enjoyment of his free citizenship he was entitled to elect whether he would continue to be an Englishman or become a Turk. His last exercise of his rights as a freeborn Briton consisted in the act by which he ceased to be one. When he had become a Turk there was, of course, no impediment, either municipal or international, to his becoming a Turkish citizen.

Very much the same legal consequences, I imagine, would have resulted had Captain Hobart, R. N., accepted the command of a Turkish trading vessel or entered into an engagement with a Turkish merchant ship, because he would thereby have passed out of the jurisdiction of the neutral State of which he was a citizen into that of one of the belligerents. As England could no longer have controlled his movements, she could not hold him responsible for them. The flag which determines the nationality of the ship and cargo ought to determine the nationality of all who sail under it otherwise than as passengers. It is not necessary to multiply illustrations on other grounds I have attempted to show that they can not be identified, or difficulty need attend either the renunciation or resumption of nationality. It does not seem therefore, that the Government of the United States, in attention being made imperative on citizens of neutral States who participated in the war, or neutral sailors who entered the mercantile marine, or even on persons who voluntarily resided in belligerent countries during the continuance of hostilities.

He does not contend that international law goes so far in the latter respect as he contends it would be reasonable it should go, but the proposition he is contending for (and I think it will be seen to be maintained by the extract which I ask to have printed in the RECORD) is that where a citizen of the country voluntarily enters the military service of a foreign country he has thereby, quoad that act, renounced the citizenship of his own country so far as to preclude him from claiming protection for the consequences of the act.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, there is nothing in that antagonistic to the position I took yesterday.

Mr. GRAY. I am glad the Senator thinks so.

Mr. TELLER. A man may by going permanently into the army of a foreign country expatriate himself. There is no doubt about that. The point I was making yesterday, which I seem to have some difficulty in impressing upon the mind of the Senator from Delaware, is that it is not inconsistent with the laws of the United States to assist in maintaining the existing Government of a country with which we have some relations; in other words, it is not an offense against either the laws of that country or the laws of this country—and that a man is entitled to protection until he makes some movement that is offensive—

Mr. GRAY. Will the Senator allow me right there?

Mr. TELLER. No; wait a moment.

Mr. GRAY. Will the Senator allow me to state—

Mr. TELLER. Let me finish my sentence.

Mr. GRAY. The Senator is misrepresenting me; that is all.

Mr. TELLER. I hope I may be allowed to go on.

Mr. GRAY. The Senator is generally allowed to go on.

Mr. TELLER. I asserted yesterday over and over again, and I thought the Senator could not misunderstand it, that a man is entitled to the protection of his flag until he has forfeited that protection or has himself voluntarily abandoned that protection. That is the principle I am now maintaining, that assistance in the maintenance of the status quo of a country so far as to the protection of the subjects of that country is a meritorious act and not a criminal act.

Now, when a man goes into the army of a belligerent nation, a nation fighting some other, he violates the law of his land, which requires that he shall not do so. For instance, Turkey being at war, we will say, with Russia, a British subject has no right to go into the Turkish army, because that would violate the neutrality between Great Britain and Russia, and therefore he could not come in and claim protection. Now I will read what the Senator from Delaware wants to say.

Mr. GRAY. The Senator from Colorado is always very sure of the propositions that he lays down. That is the character of his mind.

Mr. TELLER. Yes; fairly so.

Mr. GRAY. And a very good mind it is. But unfortunately the propositions that he lays down can not be accepted, even by those who must respect him, as international law, unless they are supported by arguments that are more convincing than those he has advanced.

Now, the proposition the Senator seems to have laid down, and which I agree with, is that a citizen of his country, for instance, who enlists in the military service of a foreign country must not be considered to have committed a crime thereby. Is that the proposition?

Mr. TELLER. That depends upon a great many things. I have made no such general proposition as that.

Mr. GRAY. I have not said that he committed a crime.

Mr. TELLER. I simply spoke of the citizen who attempts to maintain the government of the foreign country where he resides.

Mr. GRAY. I do not pretend that he committed a crime.

Mr. TELLER. But if he serves that government for the purpose of attacking some other country, that may be an offense against the law of this country; and it is.

Mr. GRAY. I do not pretend that he commits a crime. The writer from whom I read the extract does not contend that he commits a crime. On the contrary, he says it is a part of the liberty that belongs to his personality, not as a citizen, but as a man, to enter the service of a foreign country; but having exercised that option, he thereby relinquishes the attributes that belong to him to a certain extent as a citizen of his own country, and he is no longer entitled to the protection of that country from the consequences which follow the act of entering the service of a foreign country. That is all I contend for. His country may, of course, see that he is not falsely accused or condemned without a fair trial. That is all that it seems to me this writer contends for. The person has a right to enter the foreign service. The American citizens in Honolulu who defended the existing Government there had a right to do it. They committed no crime against this Government. We have no right to punish them. We have no right to visit them with any forfeiture further than to say that they then lose the right to call upon us to protect them from the consequences of the act of entering the service of that country, and that this English writer says.

Mr. FRYE. I wish to ask the Senator from Delaware a question to see if I understand him. The morning reports from the Hawaiian Islands show that Great Britain places just the opposite construction upon the law, as I understand the law laid down by the Senator, and that is if citizens of Great Britain help to maintain the existing Government they do not forfeit the right of protection of their own Government. The reports state further that every American citizen there in the Hawaiian Islands did assist in maintaining the existing Government, and that the Government there, in the person and his property, would have forfeited all the protection which the Government ordinarily ought to extend to its citizens.

Mr. GRAY. That is a plain categorical question; and I say in reply to it, in the first place, so far as propositions of international law are concerned, I do not think the best authority for them are reports of what citizens said in Honolulu that came to us by telegraph from San Francisco.

Mr. FRYE. But they raised the point.

Mr. GRAY. The telegraph says they raised the point. The citizens at Honolulu who helped maintain the existing Government against a revolutionary attack, or against any attack, domestic or foreign, had a right to do it; they did not commit a crime; it may have been their duty to have done so, but in so far as their right to the protection of the United States from the consequences of that act is concerned, that they lost sub modo. However, after the revolution is over and when the military situation does not exist, when they are no longer in that service, that does not prevent them in regard to situations that are not a consequence of that act from asserting their United States citizenship and claiming the protection that that status entitles them to. That is all there is of it; and that is what I contend was involved in a plain categorical question of the Senator given to Admiral Walker by the Secretary of the Navy last summer.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I wish to say a few words on this subject. It seems to me that the executive department of this Government and some gentlemen who have discussed this subject secretary of state be directed to forward, as soon as may be, one copy of this resolution to each Senator and Member of the House of Representatives in Congress from this State.

IN HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, February 2, 1895.

Read and finally passed.

LLEWELLYN POWER, Speaker.

IN SENATE, February 4, 1895.

GEO. M. SEDUS, President.

FEBRUARY 5, 1895.

HENRY B. CLEAVES, Governor.

Mr. CULLOM. I present a resolution adopted by the house of representatives of the legislature of Illinois, favoring the passage of a bill granting a pension to Maj. Gen. John A. McClelland. I do not wish to take up the time of the Senate by having the resolution read, but I ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

The resolutions were ordered to lie on the table, and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[State of Illinois. Thirty-third general assembly, house of representatives.] The following resolution passed the house on the 18th day of January, 1895, and was concurred in by the Senate on the 23d day of January, 1895. Which said resolution is in the words following to wit:

Whereas there is now pending in the Congress of the United States a bill for the award of a pension to Maj. Gen. John A. McClelland, of Illinois; and

Whereas General McClelland was one of the bravest of the many brave soldiers from Illinois who enlisted early in the war, threw the weight of his influence in every emergency of the mighty conflict, in favor of the resolution, thus inspiring the people of this great State with his lofty and enthusiastic patriotism, which was of immeasurable value to the cause of the Union;

And whereas his services in the Army were of great value to the nation, and added lustre to the fair name of Illinois: Therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Illinois (the Senate concurring therein), that the Senators from Illinois be instructed, and the members of Congress from this State be requested, to do all in their power to secure the passage of the said bill, and the recognition, too long delayed, of his patriotic services.

Resolved further, That the clerk of this house be directed to furnish each Senator and Member of Congress from this State and to General McClelland a copy of these resolutions.

JOHN MEYER, Speaker.

He also presented the memorial of W. K. Stokes, of Lebanon, Ind., offering certain suggestions regarding the coinage problem; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. VEST presented a memorial of the People's Party Central Club, of Jackson County, Mo., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation as recommended by the President in his recent financial message; which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented petitions of 4 citizens of Columbus, of sundry merchants and business firms of Cincinnati, and of 11 business men of Cincinnati, all in the State of Ohio, praying for the enactment of legislation to secure to the sugar producers of the United States a compensating bounty upon the crops of the year 1894; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. FAULKNER. I present a petition of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia, praying for the passage of House bill No. 8231, to regulate the sale of milk in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes. The petition relates to a bill reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia and now before the Senate. I move that the petition lie on the table and that it be printed as a dissent.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SQUIRE. Mr. President, I present a petition from the president and nine professors of the University of the State of Washington, asking for the favorable consideration of a bill now pending in the Senate, having for its object the establishment of a national park and forest reserve, including Mount Rainier.

The petitioners go on to state that well-known scientists and scientific societies have already called attention to the value of this magnificent region, which each year grows in interest not only to the people of that State, but to the entire nation and to the scientists of the world.

The petitioners further state that they feel that the measure proposed is necessary for the preservation and protection of the natural features of this especially attractive portion of the public domain, and that delay will result in continued injury and increased destruction of animals and forests. Therefore, they ask that for the preservation of this portion of the public domain and that in the interest of science and the public welfare the bill be passed establishing a national park in the State of Washington.

I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Public Lands and printed.

The motion was agreed to.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. McMILLAN, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom the subject was referred, submitted a report accompanied by a bill (S. 4735) to incorporate the East Washington Belt Line Railway Company; which was read twice by its title.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2339) to incorporate the East Washington Belt Line Railway Company, reported adversely thereon, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. HUNTON, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4369) to amend section 553 of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to the District of Columbia, reported it without amendment.

Mr. PASCO, from the Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1530) for the relief of James Garces, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

He also, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 4746) to relieve Abel S. Reynolds from the charge of desertion, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

country to which the ambassadors or ministers of the United States are accredited when the public interest requires such appointment, and the person so employed shall receive the same compensation as herein provided for the secretaries of legation of the United States to such country.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Mr. President—

Mr. ALDRICH and others. Question!

Mr. BLACKBURN. I have nothing to say except that the proposed amendment submitted by the Senator from Florida has been recommended by the Committee on Foreign Relations. It has that backing before the Senate. I think I know what the purpose of the Senator from Florida is, and I am thoroughly in sympathy with him. It does create one new office in the shape of an assistant secretary of legation. I am not disposed to antagonize it.

Mr. CALL. I am reliably informed that at one of the legations where very important negotiations are pending there is no one connected with the legation who can speak the language, and that important negotiations are conducted by the subjects of the foreign Government, none of the American legation being able to speak the language.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Florida (Mr. CALL).

The question being put, a division was called for; and the yeas were 13.

Mr. CALL. I withdraw the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment is withdrawn by the Senator from Florida.

Mr. GEORGE. I offer an amendment at the suggestion of the State Department.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated at the desk.

The SECRETARY. On page 25, after line 16, insert:

To pay for expenses incurred by order of the Department of State, at the request of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry of the United States Senate, in making investigation into the consumption and production of cotton in their respective consular districts, as follows:

J. W. Pepper, United States consul at Milan	$9.65
R. W. Hendick, United States consul at Geneva	24.12
Alton Angier, United States consul at Athens	28.70
A. H. Lowrie, commercial agent at Freiburg	10.75
A. J. Benson, vice-consul at Cadix	5.00
And to Thomas E. Homan, consul at Odessa, for loss of salary occasioned by his absence, under orders of the State Department, in investigating cotton culture in Asiatic Russia, his report thereon having been furnished by the said Department to said committee. viz:	$26.96

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi (Mr. GEORGE).

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VEST. On page 3, lines 8 and 9, I move to strike out "six" and "thirteen" before "thousand" and insert "seven" and "fifteen." The amendment raises the salary of the ministers plenipotentiary in Portugal and Switzerland $1,000, making it $7,500 instead of $6,500.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In line 8, page 3, strike out the word "six" before "thousand" and insert "seven," and in line 9 strike out the word "thirteen" before "thousand" and insert "fifteen;" so as to read:

Envoys extraordinary and ministers plenipotentiary to Switzerland and Portugal, at $7,500 each, $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CHANDLER. I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment but one was adopted, the amendment placing certain deficiencies upon the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Hampshire moves to reconsider the vote by which the amendment proposed by the Senator from Mississippi (Mr. GEORGE) was agreed to.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask to have the amendment read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. On page 25, after line 16, insert:

To pay for expenses incurred by order of the Department of State at the request of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry of the United States Senate in making investigation into the consumption and production of cotton in their respective consular districts, as follows:

J. W. Pepper, United States consul at Milan	$9.65
R. W. Hendick, United States consul at Geneva	24.12
Alton Angier, United States consul at Athens	28.70
A. H. Lowrie, commercial agent at Freiburg	10.75
A. J. Benson, vice-consul at Cadix	5.00
And to Thomas E. Homan, consul at Odessa, for loss of salary occasioned by his absence, under orders of the State Department, in investigating cotton culture in Asiatic Russia, his report thereon having been furnished by the said Department to said committee. viz:	$26.96

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. BLACKBURN. This item belongs properly on the deficiency bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. If there is any special reason why it should go on this bill instead of the deficiency bill—

Mr. BLACKBURN. There is none. It belongs properly on the deficiency bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. Undoubtedly.

Mr. BLACKBURN. The money is due; there is no question of that. It would be more proper to put it on the deficiency bill than on the diplomatic and consular bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. Does the Senator like to put amendments of this kind on the pending bill instead of on the deficiency bill?

Mr. BLACKBURN. Not upon the contrary, I think the suggestion of the Senator from New Hampshire is very proper.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion to reconsider the vote by which the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi was agreed to.

The motion to reconsider was not agreed to.

Mr. CALL. If there be no objection I ask that in lieu of the amendment which I withdrew, authorizing the appointment by the President of an assistant secretary of legation at any foreign embassy where no member of the legation can speak the language of the country, that I be allowed to move that the President may, if in his independent necessity, appoint an assistant secretary of legation at Berlin who can speak and write the German language. I do it upon the ground that important negotiations are now pending with that country in respect to the imports and exports of the two countries, and I am informed that there is not a single member of the legation there who is familiar with the German language or with the habits and business of that country.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Florida?

Mr. MANDERSON. Are we to understand that at the Berlin legation there is no one who can speak the German language attached to the legation?

Mr. CALL. I am informed by Mr. Charles Allen, an ex-member of Congress from New York, a gentleman of very high standing and entire reliability, in a letter from him from that place, that such is the fact.

Mr. ALDRICH. Under the order of the Senate debate is not in order. I ask that the rule may be enforced in that respect.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Debate was proceeding by unanimous consent. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Florida?

Mr. HALE. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair hears none. Will the Senator from Florida indicate the point where his amendment is to come in?

Mr. CALL. In the memorandum I sent to the Secretary's desk—

Mr. BLACKBURN. What is the amendment the Senator proposes?

Mr. CALL. An assistant secretary of legation at Berlin to be employed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator will suspend. The Chair asked if there was objection, and the Chair was unable to hear any response, owing to the confusion in the Chamber. The Chair will again inquire if there is objection to the request of the Senator from Florida.

Mr. ALDRICH. I objected to any discussion of the question. I suggest that this matter be taken up by the committee. This is not the place to consider it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Rhode Island object to the request?

Mr. ALDRICH. I object to it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection. The bill is still as in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment. If there are no further amendments as in Committee of the Whole the bill will be reported to the Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Without any idea of going on with the bill at this time I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8372) making appropriations for the service of the Post-office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896.

Mr. HALE. The Senator wants to get it before the Senate.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I want to get the bill before the Senate. The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I will not ask for the reading of the bill at this time. I want the record to show that by the action of the Senate in taking up the Post-Office appropriation bill the unfinished business is the bill (H. R. 1039) to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy, coming over from a previous day, is not to be dispensed and sent to the calendar, but only temporarily laid aside.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

LOUISIANA OR HONDURAS LOTTERY COMPANY.

Mr. CALL. I offer a resolution which has been heretofore read. I ask that it may be printed and laid on the table until Monday morning.

The resolution was ordered to be on the table and to be printed, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate, That a special committee be, and is hereby, created, who shall be charged with the duty of inquiring and reporting to the Senate whether the Louisiana or Honduras Lottery Company has been established and is now operating in the United States and is engaged in business herein and in the use of the mails and of the laws of the United States, or whether the Louisiana or Honduras Lottery Company, its owners, managers, directors, or agents have entered into any agreement with any person or persons or corporations for the control of the elections of the members of Congress and whether it owns, either directly or indirectly, any interest in newspapers published in the United States and whether they, or any of them, have contributed money to the establishment of newspapers or for subsidizing newspapers.

The committee shall also inquire and report what sums of money, if any, have been expended by the Louisiana or Honduras Lottery Company to influence the legislation of Congress, or by any person or corporation in any way connected, combined with, or interested in, such lottery company, and by what persons such money was expended, and by what persons it was contributed.

MEMORIAL ADDRESSES ON THE LATE SENATOR STOCKBRIDGE.

Mr. McMILLAN. Mr. President, I ask leave to submit for adoption the resolutions which I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolutions will be read.

The Secretary read the resolutions, and they were considered by unanimous consent, and unanimously agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. Francis B. Stockbridge, late a Senator from the State of Michigan.

Resolved, That as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased the business of the Senate be now suspended to enable his associates to pay proper tribute to his high character and distinguished public services.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

Mr. McMILLAN. Mr. President, the late Francis B. Stockbridge occupied what may well be called Michigan's historic seat in this body. In 1835 the people of Michigan, claiming their rights under the ordinance of 1787, and putting it into full operation a State government and sent to this body Lucius Lyon and John Norwell. For nearly fourteen months these two Senators-elect were kept in the Senate corridors, until the boundary dispute between the young State and Congress was settled as such disputes are usually settled—in favor of the stronger party.

On taking his seat in the Senate, January 26, 1837, Mr. Lyon was assigned by lot to the first class; and after the first of the Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth Congresses he gave way for Augustus S. Porter, elected by the Whigs, who had an accidental majority in the legislature of 1839. Six years later Lewis Cass entered the Senate. Among all the Common wealth builders of the Northwest, Cass was the most distinguished. By just and honorable treaties he had obtained the extinguishment of the Indian title to lands that comprise not less than one-fourth of the present States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Michigan; and as he had been Secretary of War and minister to France under Jackson he had won fame at home and abroad.

During the twelve most eventful years when the Constitution was on trial he stood with Webster and Clay as its defender; and during that period was the Presidential candidate of his party. It was during his second term in the Senate that the movement to resist the extension of slavery north and west took definite shape; and nowhere was this movement stronger than in Michigan, where it found expression in the first Republican State convention, held at Jackson on the 6th day of July, 1850. Of the members of that convention Chandler, Bingham, Jacob M. Howard, and Christianity afterwards were elected to this body. It is not necessary for me to do more than to advert to the fact that for eighteen of the most trying years of this Government Zachariah Chandler represented in the Senate the uncompromising loyalty of Michigan. Sustained and supported by his State, he was an aggressive leader; and in a brief time he was elected to this body for a fourth time, and he died in the harness.

It was during the years immediately following the war of the rebellion that the vast natural resources of Michigan became available. These conquests over nature called into prominence a new class of men. The State of Michigan held in trust for the whole country a series of waterways and a wealth of iron, copper, timber, and salt which needed but the fostering care of Government to supply the people of this country with cheap transportation and cheap raw materials. As Cass represented Michigan's devotion to the Constitution, and as Chandler represented Michigan's intense loyalty to the Union, just as truly, though less conspicuously, Mr. Stockbridge represented the commercial enterprise of his State.

Like his illustrious predecessors, Mr. Stockbridge was a native of New England, having been born in the town of Bath, Me., on the 9th day of April, 1826. Then, as now, the first ambition of a

New England boy was to establish himself in Boston; and thither young Stockbridge went at the age of 17. Equipped with an excellent common-school education, for four years he received a solid business training in one of those large wholesale houses which were at that time centers of trade for the entire country. But when the smell of pine is an inheritance it rarely happens that one loses his inborn love of the woods and its product, and it was altogether natural that on attaining his majority the young man should seek the bustling young city of Chicago as the scene of his activities and the lumber trades as a means of building his fortune.

In 1851 his on-coming interests drew him to the source of his supplies in Allegan County, Mich.; and a few years later he made his home in Kalamazoo, where he became a very considerable part of Michigan's "big village," as the place was known until a few years ago, when it became a beautiful city. As a member of the staff of the great war governor, Austin Blair, Mr. Stockbridge acquired the honorary title of colonel, by which he was familiarly known, probably because the rank served him to record sort of half paternalistic relation in which he stood to the people among whom he had made his home.

In 1860 he represented his district in the State legislature, and two years later he received the not unusual promotion to the State senate. Careful, conscientious, unassuming, and clear-sighted in all his legislative work, his genial nature and his readiness to assist in every good work made friends for him all over the State, and but for his own expressed wish undoubtedly he would have been called to the executive chair. Instead he came to this body in 1867 as the special representative of rapidly developing and vigorous western Michigan.

What battles he fought against circumstances we do not know. In the end he conquered and became what the world terms a "successful" man, with large interests not only in his own State but also in the South and the far West. Liberal by nature, he used his wealth to build up the industries of his town and to establish, strengthen, and maintain its charities. Happy in his domestic life, he left no room to mourn the loss of a devoted husband, and many relatives to regret keenly the taking away of one who had been as a father to them.

Of his work in the Senate it is unnecessary to speak here further than to say that when his first term was drawing to an end the voice of Michigan, as interpreted with a very large degree of unanimity by the legislature, was for his return. He had satisfied the people of his State. We who were present in the Senate of this Chamber can testify to his devotion to the interests of his country, his State, and his party; and when on April 30 of last year death came upon him suddenly as he was caring for another it was the universal feeling here that a wise counselor and a devoted friend had been taken from us.

Mr. FRYE. Mr. President, Maine never loses interest in her sons who leave to engage in life's conflicts elsewhere, and she always rejoices in their successes. She is proud of the boy who left as a sailor before the mast, then became one of the heaviest ship-owners on the Pacific Slope, then governor of California, and now a United States Senator; and of another born on one of her hill-side farms, educated in her public schools, graduated from one of her colleges, who then went West, became a successful business man, then represented his adopted State of Minnesota in the national House of Representatives, and now is a colleague of ours in this Chamber. These men, and such as these, are a State's jewels.

I think, Mr. President, that Maine equips her children fairly well for such contests. She has always been a border State, almost entirely surrounded by ocean and by a foreign land. She is located in the extreme northeast of the Republic. Her early history was one of cruel war. The price of a livelihood was always a struggle; it fought offshore, a ceaseless contest with wind and wave and rock-bound coast; if inshore, then the conquest of the primeval forest and the cutting of land which never laughed with harvest when vexed with a hoe, but responded only to hard work. Her climate is severe, her winter long and cold.

Mr. President, these conditions, seemingly unfavorable, I think combine to make her people self-reliant, courageous, patient, economical, thrifty—legacies to her children of infinitely greater value than ease, luxury, and money.

Senator Stockbridge, to whose memory we are to-day paying tribute, was one of these boys. He was born in the shipbuilding town of Bath, of good old New England stock on both sides. His father was an eminent physician in that section of the State, but of course in those days with a small income, and could give his son only the advantages of the common schools, with a term or two in an academy.

Young Stockbridge, at the age of 16 years, self-reliant, started out for himself; went to Boston in a store. He was adventurous and bold and soon found that his counter was altogether too narrow for him. He went west, located in Chicago, then far distant from the home of his birth. He engaged in the lumber business, it may be, inspired to it by the whispering pines of his own native State.

He was sagacious and cool, but bold. In all of his proposed investments he was his own explorer, his own counselor, depending entirely on his own judgment. He regarded contracts, whether written or oral, as sacred, and observed them with the strictest fidelity both in letter and in spirit. He was a strictly honest man, and was not long in gaining a reputation which insured to him all the credit he needed for his extensive operations.

He was a man thoroughly familiar with men. Having been poor himself, he sympathized with the poor, gained the entire confidence and esteem of all his employees, always treated them not only justly but generously, so his extensive operations were never crippled by strikes nor injurious combinations. It was not long before he became one of the great lumber kings in the West and had acquired wealth.

Mr. President, I have observed too frequently, when men seek riches, they are apt to acquire a love for money itself—one of the most debasing of the passions of the human heart. Not so Mr. Stockbridge. He seemed to think he was a steward for his Lord, and that the property he acquired was a trust to be administered by him faithfully for the good of his fellows.

He was exceedingly generous and charitable, as large gifts to benevolent, literary, and religious associations and institutions testify, and he indulged in an immense amount of that giving of which the left hand knows nothing of what the right hand is doing every day. One of the poor man was left without a supply equal to that on his own, and that he did it.

In this charitable career he fortunately always had the sympathy and the loving cooperation of his wife, who, while it may be, was more impulsive than he, was equally generous.

I have said that Mr. Stockbridge's early education was limited, but he inherited an intense love for books, was a constant student when business cares almost overwhelmed him, was familiar with the current literature and well read in the classics. He had one of the finest and best selected private libraries I have ever seen of books—not ornaments, but furniture, but familiar friends. He was fond of art, and lavishly expended his money for choice pictures, fine statuary, and rare bric-a-brac. So it happened that in the latter years of his life there was no conversation in public speech nor in letters could one discover the school deprivations of his boyhood.

He was ambitious. Why not? If all men were content, what would this world be? He had acquired wealth; he had leisure; he knew that he had the confidence and esteem of his fellow-citizens; he knew equally well that he could render to his country and State valuable service, so sought, not unduly and improperly, public position. His people were ever ready to gratify him. He served in both houses of his State legislature, and then twice they elected him to the highest office in their gift, that of United States Senator. As a Senator, we can all bear witness to his fidelity, to his constant attention to the duties of the great office. On committee his services were regarded as invaluable on account of his large experience in affairs, his careful attention to whatever was committed to him, and his untiring energy. He seldom indulged in debate, but when he did he attracted attention by the dignity and the courtesy of his bearing, by the closeness of his logic, by the clearness of his statements.

He was princely in his hospitalities. He had an elegant home in Kalamazoo, surrounded by beautiful and extensive grounds, and the doors were always wide open. I have had the pleasure to be his guest, and the moment I entered the house found myself in carriages and servants, and everything that money could buy were mine. Mrs. Stockbridge was a charming hostess, and seemed to take more pleasure in the bestowing than even the guest did in the receiving.

Mr. Stockbridge was a man of strong convictions and fixed principles, to some seeming almost stern and Puritanic in his fidelity to them. His stand on temperance may illustrate this. He was a total abstinence from intoxicants could never would allow even wine in his house. Here in Washington he kept open house, as he did at home, and was lavish in his hospitality. He was giving frequent dinner parties, and I presume every Senator in my hearing has been his guest. His table was always splendidly equipped, furnished with everything to tempt the appetite and delight the taste, but never any wine. I have no hesitation in saying that the Senator here, whatever his own private tastes and wishes might be, left that hospitable table to a new and a profounder respect for the Senator who dared disregard the requirements of custom and of fashion in devotion to principle.

Mr. President, Mr. Stockbridge was in every respect a strong man, a warm friend, a good neighbor, a patriotic citizen, a devoted husband; and he was more and better than all these—he was an earnest, faithful Christian, a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church, active in all of its charities, faithful to all of its obligations.

It is well with him. He has only passed through the open door of his Father's house, and has entered now upon life eternal, with all its wealth of possibilities.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. Mr. President, Mr. Stockbridge and I were warm personal friends, and when the sad intelligence came to us that he was no more I felt that I had sustained a personal loss which could never be repaired, for at my time of life on does not easily make new friendships.

During the whole of Mr. Stockbridge's service in this body I believe it was my fortune to be associated with him on the Committee on Indian Affairs. In the discharge of the duties devolving on us in that committee we were often associated together on sub-committees in the investigation of questions referred to us. In worth and merit, and I hazard nothing in saying that no man of correct feeling could know him well and not be his friend.

One of the most striking traits in his character was his fine, well-balanced, sound judgment. Never swayed by passion or prejudice, he held always a just balance in weighing the merits and demerits of any question; and when he had the opportunity for a full investigation of any matter his judgment upon it would command the respect of all who knew him.

His quality was manifest in everything connected with him. His marked personal success in every walk of life in which he entered, the high position he held among those with whom he was associated in business and politics in his own State and here all bore evidence of it.

Perhaps his most lovable trait, that which attracted his friends to him most warmly, was his own generous feelings and his broad charity. He judged no one harshly, never attributed unworthy motives to others, and never suspected others of sinister purposes, but accorded with his mind the construction of others which most accorded with his own high standard of proper conduct.

While he was distinguished for his modesty he was at the same time possessed of great force of character, exhibiting in himself such a happy blending of modest worth and self-reliant manliness as forms the finest type of our Western manhood.

Of the antagonisms which rude self-assertion is always sure to arouse he knew absolutely nothing.

His courteous bearing toward and gentle regard for the rights and feelings of others never for a moment forsook him, and carried the conviction to all who came in contact with him that he was in the finest sense of the word a gentleman.

I knew him in his home, and it was there that he appeared to the best advantage and in the most favorable light. No one who ever came within the circle of the personal friends and congenial spirits drawn together by his discriminating friendship could forget even went out from under his roof without feeling that his was a home of unusual loveliness, the crowning glory of which was the beautiful life of the husband and wife who made it what it was.

Mr. President, until the last man who knew and served with him, Mr. Stockbridge shall have passed out from this body he will not be forgotten here. No seat will again be marked as his; his name will not again appear upon our official rolls; but his memory will live like a sweet incense here where his presence brought only pleasure.

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. President, I am sure the commonwealth of Illinois, which I have the honor in part to represent in this Senate, would not have me remain silent on this sad occasion.

Mr. President, as has been said by the distinguished Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMillan], the colleague of the late Senator Stockbridge, when we mourn, the deceased had entered upon his second term of service in the Senate, and to those of us who only knew him as we ordinarily know each other here there seemed many years of usefulness before him. Mr. Stockbridge, when he determined to leave Boston to find a new home, I understand for a time in Chicago. He was soon attracted, however, by business ventures, into the State of Michigan, where he made his permanent home, his fortune, and his fame.

His life was a career of honor and great usefulness in that commonwealth, and he endeavored himself to all the people. In the Senate he won the esteem of all the people. In the State he was a man of strong sense, always quickly discerning the right, never swerving from it, and was a most excellent and successful legislator. He performed his duty under all circumstances, and met the highest expectations of the people on all occasions. Few men in the Senate have more completely won the confidence and esteem of the members of this body than did Senator Stockbridge.

He was a good man in the quiet walks of life, as he was a faithful servant of the people in his public career. He was a man of business. He not only responded to the calls of his people to perform public duty, but he conducted large business operations as farmer, stock raiser, and land and lumber trader. He not only sought as a legislator to build up and sustain the policy which he believed to be for the best interests of the great body of the American people, but he sought also to develop by business enterprises the resources and wealth of this country.

Mr. President, men are in a large degree what they make themselves. I recognize the fact that geniuses and poets are born, not made; but after all, the man who starts out with a determination that he will be a man among men, that he will carve out his own fortune, that he will make the world better for his living in it, and labors to that end, is the best type of manhood and leaves behind him more to be gratefully remembered by the people. Mr. Stockbridge made no pretensions to genius or to oratory, but he was an honest man with more than ordinary ability, and was always for the right. During all his manhood life, private and public, the people with whom he lived and whom he served appreciated and trusted him.

Mr. President, it was my good fortune to become somewhat intimately acquainted with the deceased after he entered this Chamber, and the longer I knew him and the more closely I became associated with him the more highly I regarded him. He had no commitments, but was direct and single-minded, always resting upon the truth.

He was a patriotic man; he loved our free institutions; he loved liberty, and was proud of the glory of our country and its position among the nations. He was a Republican and believed in the principles and policies of the party, but he was never offensive in presenting his views in the presence of men who did not agree with him.

Mr. President, he is gone, and his place has been filled in this body. The same experience must come to us all. I well remember his stalwart form and his vigorous bearing when he first entered the Senate; and I also sadly remember the many strong men who have been Senators upon this floor during the twelve years of my membership, and have, like him, surrendered to the great destroyer. Humanity is forever subject to the great law of change. From birth to our final breath we pass constantly on, never halting till the silent shore is reached. Senators may ordain, and the people may obey their ordinances, but death shows no favors to the tribunes.

The deceased Senator began his business career in the great metropolis of the State, Chicago, and he laid down his life in that city, surrounded in his last hours by his relatives and friends. I accompanied his remains to their last resting place in the city of his home, where many thousands of his neighbors and friends, with saddened hearts, followed all that was left of Francis B. Stockbridge to the grave.

I pay my last tribute of respect to his memory. Peace be to his ashes.

Mr. BURROWS. Mr. President, while I can not hope to add anything to the just meed of praise bestowed upon the life and character of the late Senator Stockbridge, yet I should do violence to my own feelings and sense of duty to permit the occasion to pass without expressing and placing on record my high appreciation of his character as a man and his worth as a citizen. Knowing him as I did in private life, and of his many admirable qualities, I am not surprised that Senators who were associated with him in this body even for a brief period should be able to bear testimony to his personal worth, and his fidelity, integrity, and rare good judgment in the discharge of public duties, and his unswerving devotion to the best interests of the State.

These encomiums by his colleagues will be exceedingly gratifying to the people of Michigan, who twice honored him with a seat in the Senate and who to-day hold his memory in the highest regard and deeply deplore that his life could not have been spared to the full completion of the term to which their partiality had called him. In forming an estimate of his character your judgment, of necessity, is based almost entirely upon your association with him in his official capacity as a member of the Senate. But there was another side to his nature none the less attractive and praiseworthy.

He was known to you as a Senator. I knew him as a neighbor and friend, with whom it was my good fortune, during the last twenty years of his life, to be in almost daily intercourse, thus affording an opportunity of discerning those admirable qualities of head and heart which attached him to his friends and secured for him an exalted place in the affectionate regard of his fellow-citizens. During this period of nearly a quarter of a century we were residents of the same city and much of the time of the same ward, and were naturally thrown together in social intercourse, freed from the restraints of public life which sometimes obscure for the moment the dominating characteristics of the human heart. It was under such circumstances and amid such surroundings I came to know Senator Stockbridge, and became attached to him as a neighbor and friend.

In looking back on the years of that acquaintance and summing up its incidents, if called upon to single out the chief and controlling elements of his character, those which alone have dominated his whole life and made it a marvelous success, I should have no hesitancy in declaring they were his wonderful self-reliance and superb courage. He had confidence in his own judgment and the courage to execute what his judgment approved. This was exemplified in early life. Born at Bath, Me., in 1829, in 1842, when but 16 years of age, he determined to take upon himself, in a measure at least, the duties and responsibilities of life, and to that end made his first venture as a clerk in a mercantile establishment in the city of Boston, where for a period of many years he devoted himself to the duties of his position, acquiring his first practical lessons in business affairs and developing those qualities of integrity and self-reliance which marked the whole course of his future life. It was during this experimental period, undoubtedly, that he became conscious of his natural bent of mind and aptitude for business pursuits, and having made the discovery, without attempting to force his life into unnatural channels, so frequently attempted and so frequently disastrous, he had the right good judgment to enter the open way pointed out by his inclinations and dedicated his life to an active business career.

Having thus determined his course, he entered upon it with the ardor and enthusiasm of youth and pursued it with unflinching energy to the end, permitting no obstacle, however formidable, to impede his progress or turn him aside from the consummation of his supreme purpose.

His resolution formed, it only remained for him to determine the character of his business and the field of his operations. With that sagacity and foresight for which he was noted, he saw in the forests of the Northwest the possibility of a great business future, and accordingly in 1847, at the age of 21, he took up his residence as a lumber merchant in the city of Chicago, a place then of less than 10,000 inhabitants, where he laid the foundations of his future success. From a lumber merchant he became a lumber manufacturer, and pushing his way into the forests of Michigan and the Northwest, erecting mills and establishing camps, he moved forward in the course of his destiny until he was recognized as among the foremost business men of the Northwest.

In 1853 he became a citizen of Michigan and retained his residence in the State during the remainder of his life. Here he enlarged his business, became connected with other and important industrial enterprises until, at the time of his death, his business interests, vast and complicated, extended beyond the limits of Michigan from the extreme South to the distant forests of the Pacific Slope. This great business success was due in a large measure, if not chiefly, to those characteristics of which I spoke in the beginning, and which he possessed in a preeminent degree—self-reliance and courage. These were the weapons with which, single-handed and alone, he made his way in the industrial world.

But this tribute would be incomplete without mentioning another phase of his character, as pronounced as those to which I have already referred, namely, his kindness and boundless generosity.

His liberality knew no bounds but the measure of his ability, and his charity no restraint but the limit of its necessities. It was this that greatly endeared him to his people. Reserved, yet companionable; dignified, yet without ostentation, he freely mingled with all the people in their everyday life, acquainting himself with their conditions and ministering to their necessities. Possessed of an abundant fortune, which sometimes was the rank of human kindness, he bestowed private charity with a lavish hand, while his donations to public objects were on the broadest scale of liberality. Church and school, benevolent and charitable institutions alike were the recipients of his favor. The city of his home is to-day adorned with enduring monuments to his public benefactions.

But while engaged in large business enterprises, demanding his chief thought and attention, he was not so wholly engrossed by them as to be indifferent to the public life of his country. In these he took a lively interest, and, early identifying himself with the Republican party, he became an active and influential member of that organization, adhering to its varying fortunes with characteristic steadfastness. Here, as in the business world, he quickly secured the confidence of the people and was twice elected to the State legislature, serving first in the house and subsequently in the senate, where, in the discharge of his legislative duties, he displayed the entire right judgment which had always characterized his business life. Though a man of practical affairs, yet in his capacity as a legislator he rendered great service to his party and the State; and, after all, the highest state-ship is only the application of sound business principles to governmental affairs.

That business knowledge he possessed in a remarkable degree, and it must have advantaged him and the Senate while here in preliminary examination; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. LODGE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill; which was ordered to be printed, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. BUTLER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill, which, with the accompanying letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. CAREY submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. SQUIRE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

On motion of Mr. GORDON, it was

Resolved, That the papers filed in the Fifty-second Congress relating to the claim of Mildred P. Poullain, widow of Dr. Thomas N. Poullain, for relief, be withdrawn from the files of the Senate, under the rules thereof.

NEW YORK POST-OFFICES.

Mr. HILL submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Postmaster-General be, and is hereby, directed to furnish to the Senate information as to post offices in the State of New York, in the following particulars:

First. The number of Presidential post-offices.
Second. The number of other post-offices.
Third. The number of postmasters in Presidential offices who were appointed by President Harrison and who were permitted by President Cleveland to serve out their full terms; and the number removed for cause before the expiration of their terms.

Fourth. The number of postmasters in Presidential offices appointed by President Harrison who have not yet expired, and the number whose terms have expired for which no nominations have been made.
Fifth. What policy has been adopted by the present Administration in reference to postmasters of offices (other than Presidential offices) who are appointed for no fixed term, whether they have been removed at pleasure or removed as a general rule to serve a term of four years; the number of such postmasters appointed by the preceding Administration who are still in office, and the number who were permitted to serve out a full period of four years, but whose successors have not been appointed, and the number who have served such period who are still in office.

REGULATIONS TO PREVENT COLLISIONS AT SEA.

Mr. VEST submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of State be directed to inform the Senate what foreign nations have adopted or refused to adopt the regulations for preventing collisions at sea which were directed to be followed by all public and private vessels of the United States upon the high seas and in all waters connected therewith navigable by seagoing vessels by act of Congress approved August 19, 1890, and proclaimed by the President by July 13, 1891; also that he transmit to the Senate all information he may have as to such matter together with the correspondence had between the United States and other Governments in regard thereto.

CLAIM FOR SEIZURE OF COTTON.

Mr. McLAURIN submitted the following resolution: which was referred to the Committee on Claims:

Resolved, That Senate bill No. 2222, entitled "An act for the relief of the owners of certain cotton shipped from Natchez, Miss., in August, 1863, on the steamer Gladiator, and the same hereby is, referred to the Court of Claims for examination and report under the provisions of section 14 of the act approved March 3, 1887, entitled "An act to provide for the bringing of suits against the Government of the United States."

PREVENTION OF COLLISIONS AT SEA.

Mr. WHITE submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2222) to adopt certain rules for the amendment of local laws, rivers, and inland waters of the United States, supplementary to the act of August 19, 1890, entitled "An act to adopt regulations for preventing collisions at sea," having met, after full and free conference, and having agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the bill, H. R. 2222, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: "And the word 'eight' after the word 'February'; and the Senate agree to the same."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the title, and agree to the same.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVAL.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on the 11th instant approved and signed the act (S. 445) changing the name of Georgetown, in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

ISSUE AND SALE OF UNITED STATES BONDS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there be no further concurrent or other resolutions, the Chair lays before the Senate a resolution submitted by the Senator from Kansas, coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. PEPPER on the 9th instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary be, and it is hereby, directed to report to the Senate forthwith, with its report thereon, Senate resolution (Miscellaneous Document No. 3) adopted on the 30th day of December, 1890, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary be, and it is hereby, instructed to inquire and report whether the Secretary of the Treasury, in issuing and selling United States bonds in the months of February and December, 1894, was authorized by any act or acts of Congress then in force.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, I think that the resolution I offered, and which was under discussion yesterday, has precedence in regular order.

Mr. BLACKBURN. That resolution, I think, went to the Calendar under the action of the Senate yesterday morning.

Mr. CALL. There was no action of the Senate on the resolution yesterday; but I understood unanimous consent was given that it should not lose its place.

Mr. BLACKBURN. No. The resolution was not taken up yesterday in the morning hour, but the Post-Office appropriation bill was taken up on my motion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate resolutions in the order in which they are reached, and the resolution of the Senator from Kansas was first upon the list, and was so laid before the Senate.

Mr. PEPPER. I ask that the resolution may be adopted.
Mr. ALDRICH. I ask that the resolution may be read, so that we may know what it is.

Mr. CALL. I submit that the resolution which I offered has precedence in time, if I am not mistaken, over the resolution of the Senator from Kansas.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair is governed by the record as shown at the desk, and not by the recollection of Senators.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to suggest to the Senator who has charge of the resolution, and to the Senate, that the chairman of the Judiciary Committee is suffering with a heavy cold and is not able to be in his seat this morning. I therefore suggest that the resolution stand over until he shall come in. He should be present if the resolution is to be discussed.

Mr. PEPPER. I asked that the resolution might be adopted. I did not ask for its discussion.

Mr. HOAR. I ask the Senator to let the resolution stand over on the ground that the chairman of the Judiciary Committee is absent.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. GORMAN. Let us have the resolution read, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be again read.

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. PEPPER on the 9th instant.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. PLATT. The suggestion has been made that the resolution ought not to be considered this morning, because the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary is not here. The resolution is, in a certain sense, a reflection upon the Judiciary Committee for not having reported the resolution formerly submitted by the Senator from Kansas, and certainly the chairman of the committee is the proper person to reply.

Mr. STEWART. Is there any objection to my making a few remarks about the resolution before it passes away?

Mr. HOAR. I should like the chairman of the Judiciary Committee to hear the Senator's remarks.

Mr. STEWART. He can read them in the RECORD.

Mr. PLATT. We are always glad to listen to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. STEWART. Then I should like to make a few remarks.

Mr. PEPPER. I do not want the floor taken away from me just yet. I have no objection to the resolution going over, provided it does not lose its place.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. STEWART and Mr. GORMAN. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection.

Mr. PEPPER. Then, Mr. President, I desire to be heard upon the resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I did not intend to discuss this resolution, and I expect now to occupy but a very short time. I think I appreciate as highly as any member of the Senate the importance of promptness in our action during the remainder of the present session. We are very much pressed, but in view of the fact that, first, there seemed to be a disposition to discuss the resolution, and, second, objection to its going over and retaining its place, I feel it my duty to call attention to my reasons for offering the resolution, for, as was suggested by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT], it may seem to be a reflection on the Committee on the Judiciary.

President, I have charged upon this floor once before, and repeat the charge now—for that is the foundation of this proceeding—that the Treasury Department ever since 1878 has been deceiving the people, whether deliberately and intentionally or not I do not care to say. It began in the year 1878 and continued until the Administration of President Harrison, and in the first message of that distinguished man he called attention to the condition of our finances. Why did not the President begin in 1865, at the close of this great war? The policy adopted at that time has been followed until the present. During the administration of Mr. Secretary Foster a statement was sent out to the people apparently upon request—it was used as a campaign document—showing and intending to show that there never had been in circulation any paper money excepting the greenbacks and demand notes, throwing out of the calculation utterly all the compound-interest notes, all the 7-30 notes, and every other class of our paper currency excepting only the greenbacks. Our Treasury reports since 1878 have continually been made up upon that idea.

In addition to that, Mr. President, we find that now, in the reports which are being issued from day to day, in place of asserting that the silver bullion in the Treasury is worth its coin value, the Secretary of the Treasury conveys the idea that we purchased it at its market value, and that that is the only value which it can have in making up our accounts. There are about $134,000,000 of silver bullion in the Treasury, as the reports show, whereas in fact the coinage value of the bullion is perhaps 55 per cent more than that—yes, about 33 per cent more than that. So, if the actual coinage value of the silver bullion now in the Treasury were given it would be about $175,000,000 instead of $134,000,000.

I might go on and enumerate a large number of other instances, but I shall not take time now to do it, wherein, in my judgment, the Treasury Department has been deceiving the public concerning our finances. For the year, however, the Secretary of the Treasury came to Congress, honest man that he was, and asked permission by statute authorizing him to purchase gold with bonds, but Congress denied him that privilege. Then, believing it was his duty, and acting under the advice of the President of the United States, to maintain the gold reserve, he assumed authority, and there were no objections raised in this body, and, so far as I know, none in the other body, excepting those which were raised by members of the party to which I belong. I called attention to the fact at that time, and so did my colleagues; and when the present Congress convened, upon the first day of the session I presented the following resolution to the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary be, and it is hereby, instructed to inquire and report whether the acts of the Secretary of the Treasury in issuing and selling United States bonds in the months of February and December, 1894, were authorized by any act or acts of Congress then in force.

That resolution was offered on the 3d day of December, 1894, more than two months ago. No report on it has yet been made by the committee. It is not my business nor is it my desire or intention to even intimate what reasons, if any, the committee have had for not acting upon the resolution, but their nonaction, or at least their neglect or failure to report the resolution, is in entire accord with the conduct and the management of the Treasury Department during the last eighteen years.

Mr. President, I feel that the committee did not regard the subject-matter of the resolution as worth considering, and therefore it was not reported. Hence I do not intend any disrespect to the committee whatever, because that has been the custom and has been the practice of committees of this body as to all matters of this kind. I remember when I introduced a resolution during our long debate in 1893, asking the Secretary of the Treasury to inform the Senate whether the national banks of the country were being conducted in violation of law or not, that Senators upon both sides of the Chamber arose and with some feeling asserted that it was an impertinence upon the part of the Senator from Kansas to ask a question of this kind; that during times of great stress and emergency public officers ought not to be expected to obey the law fully and in detail, and that there ought to be large discretion allowed.

So it is now. The Secretary of the Treasury and his chief are selling the public credit upon the open market. They have even gone so far, Mr. President, latterly, since this resolution was presented to the Senate, as to confer privately with foreigners, or with the agents of foreign banking institutions, trading the credit of the people of the United States to our ancient enemy at three-fourths of 1 per cent—yes, nearly 1 per cent—more than the last bonds were negotiated for, and at 1½ per cent more than the bonds of the city of New York are now carrying; and this, too, in the face of the fact that members of this body and members of the House of Representatives—if I am not out of order in referring to that—have been asserting from the beginning and are now asserting, the sale of these bonds is without authority of law. I spent some time in discussing this resolution the second day after it was introduced for the very purpose of showing, and I thought that I did show conclusively, that the President and his Secretary were acting outside of the law. I feel quite certain that the distinguished senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] took the same view of the subject I did, at least measurably.

During the pendency of an appropriation bill at the last session of the Fifty-second Congress the Senator from Ohio proposed an amendment authorizing the Secretary to sell bonds of either of the classes provided for in the refunding act of 1870 or bonds bearing 3 per cent interest at his discretion. Evidently it was the belief of that distinguished Senator at the time that there was no authority upon the part of the Treasury Department, or at least that the people would question such authority, to issue bonds under existing circumstances without some fresh authority from the National Legislature. It was under those circumstances that I asked for the adoption of the resolution in the utmost good faith, and I am glad to see that while discussing the resolution, that if acts of this kind had been committed in the earlier years of the Republic the guilty officers would have been impeached for high crimes and misdemeanors. I believe so now. We are drifting along from day to day and month to month and year to year, allowing the officers in charge of great public affairs to use their own judgment and override the law and the Constitution, and it is time the brakes were put on.

Senator Hill and though there are different grades of Senators, the same as there are of common people, yet a Senator is presumed to be a man of some responsibility—and members of the House of Representatives charge that these acts are done without authority of law. Now I come into the Senate as a Senator, upon my responsibility as a Senator, and I ask our Judiciary Committee to give us their opinion as to whether these acts are in accordance with the law or, to put it in a more genteel form perhaps, whether there are any statutes existing at the time authorizing these acts upon the part of the officers.

The Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate of the United States is composed of distinguished men, men of rare learning in law, of judicial training, and great ability, standing high not only as lawyers and jurists, but as statesmen. Their opinion would be worth a great deal to the people of the country. It would be very satisfying to the public mind if that committee should come in and by a large majority or unanimously say that in their opinion the President and Secretary of the Treasury were justified not only by the exigencies, but by the letter of the law in issuing bonds. I confess that it would go a great way toward satisfying my mind—a great way, indeed—for I should feel it my duty to yield to their superior judgment upon a matter of this kind. The resolution of itself was very important, sufficiently so to justify its existence, and that is the reason why it was offered. Now I ask that the committee report the resolution.

Now I am going to ask you to act upon it. Let them say yes and let them say no; they will not take any action, if they wish to. All that the resolution before the Senate asks is that the committee shall report to the Senate the result of their action upon it. It is no reflection. It was not in my mind at all to reflect upon the honor, the integrity, or the industry of the committee.

Mr. HILL. Will the Senator from Kansas allow me a moment?

Mr. PEPPER. Certainly.

Mr. HILL. Undoubtedly before the Judiciary Committee would act upon the resolution they would desire the opinion of the Attorney-General of the United States. I am not now called upon, in the absence of the chairman of the committee, to explain the precise reason why a report has not yet been made, but I think I can say that undoubtedly the committee would be disposed to ask the opinion of the Attorney-General.

Mr. STEWART. I should like to inquire by what authority the committee would ask the opinion of the Attorney-General? Mr. HILL. Any committee of the House of Representatives or the Senate can ask the opinion of a law officer of the Government. He can give it or not as he pleases. Undoubtedly, sir, he would give it. I simply suggest to the Senator from Kansas whether all practical purposes would not be served by an amendment of the resolution, requesting the Attorney-General to give to the Senate his opinion.

Mr. PEPPER. No; I do not want the opinion of the Attorney-

Mr. HEPBURN. I move to amend, by striking out, in line 11, page 12, the words "to said company."

Mr. HEARD. I have no further suggestions to submit. I have stated the reason for inserting those words. The matter is one for the House to determine.

The question being taken, the amendment was agreed to, there being—Yes 25, noes 20.

The Clerk resumed and concluded the reading of the bill.

Mr. HEARD. I move that the bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with a favorable recommendation.

The motion was agreed to.

SURVEYOR OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. HEARD. I desire now to call up Senate bill No. 444, which proposes to make a change in the law in regard to the surveyor of the District of Columbia. When the bill shall have been read (and the report, if called for) I propose to yield to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HULL], who reported the bill, and who is more familiar with the subject than I am.

The Clerk read as follows:

All (S. 444) making the surveyor of the District of Columbia a salaried officer, and to provide for more efficient service in the surveyor's office.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the passage of this act the surveyor of the District of Columbia shall receive a salary of $3000 per annum, in lieu of and in discharge of the direction and control of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Sec. 2. That the surveyor shall give bond to the United States, in the penalty of $2000, with two sureties to be approved by the Commissioners, conditioned for the faithful discharge of the duties of his office, and shall take and subscribe the oath or affirmation before the Commissioners that he will faithfully and impartially discharge the duties of his office, which bond and oath shall be deposited with the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Sec. 3. That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, on the recommendation of the surveyor, he, and they are hereby authorized to appoint one assistant surveyor, at a salary of $1800 per annum; one draftsman and computer, at a salary of $1400 per annum; one clerk, at a salary of $1200 per annum; two rodmen, at $250 each per annum; two chainmen, at $200 each per annum; and such additional employees as may be, in the judgment of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, temporarily required for the surveyor's operations, at an aggregate expense of not exceeding $2000 in any one year.

Sec. 4. That the surveyor shall, as speedily as possible, execute any order of survey made, by any court or private individual in any lot or square within the District of Washington and Georgetown, or of any land within the District of Columbia outside of said cities, and shall make due return of a true plat and certificate thereof.

That it shall be the duty of the surveyor to execute any surveying work for the District of Columbia, without charge, on the order of the Commissioners; and all fees for surveys made by the surveyor or the assistant surveyor shall be paid over to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia under regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and be covered into the Treasury of the United States as other moneys of the District of Columbia are now received, and the receipt therefor shall be preserved and shall be a part of the public property of the District of Columbia.

Sec. 5. That the assistant surveyor shall take the same oath his principal is required to take, and may, during the continuance of his office, discharge and perform any of the official duties of his principal, and any default or neglect on the part of the assistant surveyor, or of any assistant or clerk of the surveyor, shall be deemed a breach of the official bond of his principal.

Sec. 6. That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby empowered and directed to prescribe a schedule of fees to be charged by the surveyor for his services in lieu of the fees now charged, which schedule shall be printed and conspicuously displayed in the office of the surveyor.

Sec. 7. That all laws and ordinances in force in the District of Columbia relating to the surveyor now in existence, as far as the same are applicable and not in conflict with this act, are hereby continued in full force and effect.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, the report in this case is voluminous; and I think I can briefly explain the measure so as to set out the main points to the satisfaction of members.

There is a rather peculiar situation of affairs in this District. The surveyor of the District has never been a public officer, but simply a man employed under a law which does not preserve public records. The fees fixed by the District for business of this kind are below those which private parties will pay; and in many cases no funds are provided to pay for public work. The result is that the business of the District, so far as this officer is concerned, is compelled to wait his pleasure.

The Commissioners report (and an investigation bears out their statement) that under the present law the surveyor's office is absolutely independent of all supervision by the Commissioners, and the field books, notes, and preliminary records are claimed as the private property of the surveyor or his deputies. In such a state of affairs, the surveyor owning the field notes, the District Commissioners are compelled to employ in this office from time to time members of the same family; and one of the District Commissioners stated that members of a particular family have held the office practically for one hundred years. At one time a man not content with his position, but desiring to do better, but as it was found impossible for him to do it because of the fact that, without the field notes which his predecessors had made, he had not sufficient data to enable him to efficiently perform the duties of the office.

The Commissioners report further that in many cases of plats, subdivisions, and surveys the report is made in such a way that you must go back to the same surveyor who made the original subdivision or plat in order to secure accurate work. The public business is compelled to wait, as a rule, on private business, because people pay more for the work than the city does; and the special-assessment division reports that the work of that office is seriously inconvenienced and greatly hindered by the nonreceipt from the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia of the plats and subdivisions of lots in the various squares, as required by the existing orders of the Commissioners, and because of the nonreceipt of the plats and subdivisions it is impossible to make correct assessments.

Mr. SAYERS. I desire to ask the gentleman a question—
Mr. HULL. I will come to the question of expense in a moment.

Mr. SAYERS. The question to which I refer does not affect the expense. I notice in the report of the committee the statement that—

In case of the death of the surveyor the possession of the field books and notes and official memoranda might be lost or destroyed by his heirs or executors, and be the subject of embarrassing legal contentions before the memoranda could be secured, they, if they should be subject to get possession of them at all.

Mr. HULL. That has been the case heretofore.

Mr. SAYERS. But how could that possibly happen, if the man is an officer of the Government?

Mr. HULL. He is not, however, a public officer in the sense that gives the public possession of his field notes. He is paid by fees and is not a public officer as usually understood.

Mr. SAYERS. Well, even if employed by contract he is under the strict authorities.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. He is appointed by the Commissioners.

Mr. HULL. Yes; under a contract to do the work as provided by law, but the law is so faulty that it should at once be amended.

Mr. SAYERS. To that extent, at least, he is a public officer. Now, why should not all of the records, notes, books, and memoranda relating to the surveys made by him while discharging his duties as a public officer go, under the contract, into the District office to become public property?

Mr. HULL. Well, that is the very question I asked the Commissioners themselves, and they said they could not require sufficient data from the surveyor to complete the record.

Mr. HEARD. I answer the gentleman from Texas that there is no law compelling it.

Mr. HULL. The Commissioners replied, when the inquiry was suggested, that they were not able to get any concessions out of the surveyor because of the small amount of service they rendered to the District. "You will notice that the amount paid to them as compensation by the District for public work is very insignificant as compared with the amount they receive from private parties. The District expenditure is small, only about $10,000, while private parties pay between seven and eight thousand dollars a year for the surveys, and I was surprised when informed that the District had no record of these things. The answer was that there is no law requiring the preservation of the records, and in some cases where surveys have been made, or desired to be made, under the control of the District they have been compelled, although it was advantageous to employ a new surveyor, to go back to the same family who made the original survey in order to get access to the field notes, etc."

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Do the committee concede that the plat books, maps of subdivisions, and field notes are the private property of the surveyors themselves?

Mr. HULL. They are regarded as the property of the surveyors.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. And yet there is hardly a deed executed here that does not refer to these plats as "recorded in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia."

Mr. HULL. They tell me that the records are so incomplete that as a matter of fact they do not constitute what could be considered a public record, and that in many cases it is impossible to continue the survey without going to the office of the surveyor in order to get this information.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. As a matter of fact, I repeat that there is scarcely a deed to any property in this District that does not refer to the plats "in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia." They must, then, be regarded as public plats and surveys.

Mr. HULL. The Commissioners of the District of Columbia state that there is no full official record of the surveys. They have a memorandum to some extent, but no full official record as we have in our States and cities throughout the Union.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. There are about 50 general volumes of public records in the office of the surveyor.

Mr. HULL. I am simply giving what they said.

Mr. SAYERS. I understand that for all work done by private parties the charge will be made and the expense paid by them in the shape of fees?

Mr. HULL. That is correct.

Mr. SAYERS. And these fees are to go into the Treasury?

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. SAYERS. Into the Treasury for the benefit of the District of Columbia only?

Mr. HULL. They will go into the Treasury just as all other taxes do, that is, one-half to the credit of the District and one-half to the General Government.

Mr. SAYERS. But all other taxes and fees do not go that way, I think.

Mr. HULL. All for the support of the District do.

Mr. SAYERS. Certain court fees, as I understand, do not go into the Federal Treasury.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. They form a part of the revenues of the District.

Mr. SAYERS. The court fees assist in supporting the Government.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. The fees of the police court are, I think, put into the Treasury the same as other taxes. Of course, the distribution of the other fees are determined by the judicial acts.

Mr. HULL. But, if the gentleman will allow me, it is easy to obviate that. I understand that there was no question about it: this bill covers that point; but it is easy to provide that they shall be paid into the public Treasury, if the provisions of this bill are sufficiently explicit, as other taxes are under the arrangement with the General Government.

Mr. SAYERS. Now, with reference to the bill itself, I object to the establishment of additional offices. The bill provides for two rodmen, at $720 each per annum, and two chainmen, at $650 each per annum. I think those items should be stricken out.

Mr. HULL. The important point I have in my mind is to have this officer made a public officer, full public records kept. If the gentleman from Texas believes that these subordinates ought not to have the salaries named in the bill, it is very easy to amend it by striking them out. There is no question in my mind as to the central part of the bill, that this surveyor should be a public officer and all his work, including field notes, shall be under the control of the District Commissioners.

Mr. HEARD. That is right.

Mr. HULL. That is the central idea that I have in my mind. All the departments of the District government which rely upon these records for the prompt transaction of their business are unanimous in the opinion that it is absolutely necessary to change the method that they have had heretofore, namely, practically the contract system, with the surveyor. If the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SAYERS] will look at the report of the surveyor he will see that under the present law, under the fees provided, he collected the sum of $7,500 last year, when the work was not done for the District that should have been done in order to expedite the public business.

Mr. HEARD. I ask that general debate be closed, and that the bill be read by sections for amendment.

There was no objection.
The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That from and after the passage of this act the surveyor of the District of Columbia shall receive a salary of $3,000 per annum in lieu of fees, and shall be under the direction and control of the Commissioners in lieu of the District of Columbia.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the word "three," in line 4, and insert the word "two," so that it will read: "A salary of $2,000 per annum."

Mr. HULL. I move to amend that by making it $2,500. I regard the salary as fixed by the bill none too much.

Mr. SAYERS. Make it $2,250.

Mr. HULL. Very well, if the gentleman insists upon it, I will let it go at $2,250. He made $2,700 last year, and I do not think $2,250 is enough.

The amendment was read, as follows:

In lines 3 and 4, strike out the words "three thousand" and insert the words "two thousand two hundred and fifty."

Mr. HULLICK. I want to ask a question of the gentleman who has charge of this bill. I am advised that the office of surveyor does not now exist in this District.

Mr. HULL. Not as a public officer.

Mr. HULLICK. That is what I mean.

Mr. HULL. There is a law for a surveyor to be appointed by the District Commissioners.

Mr. HULLICK. I understood that there was no surveyor.

Mr. HULL. The law does not require him as a public officer to keep records and to have an office, and all that.

Mr. HULLICK. The inquiry occurred to my mind whether this first section should not provide for the establishment of the office of public surveyor?

Mr. HULL. There is a man who holds an appointment as surveyor from the Commissioners, but under the present law his duties are so largely defined that he claims a large part of the data as his private property.

Mr. HULLICK. He certainly is not a public officer unless his records are public property. Ought we not in this bill to establish the office in the first place and provide for his appointment, and provide that the records shall be public records and subject to public inspection?

Mr. HULL. This bill is prepared by the District Commissioners, and they claim that under this bill they will have that right. Mr. HULLICK. I understand there is no public surveyor of the District of Columbia.

Mr. HULL. There is a District surveyor appointed by the Commissioners.

Mr. HULLICK. There may be many surveyors, but I understand there is no public surveyor.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. Oh, yes; there is a public surveyor appointed under law.

Mr. HULL. Yes; but there never has been any law properly framed to make his records public property.

Mr. HULLICK. That is what I understood.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. But he is a public officer.

Mr. HULLICK. Ought we not at this time to so frame the law that the records of that office shall be public property?

Mr. HULL. That is what this bill does do.

Mr. SAYERS. I ask the gentleman if the very fact of his being a public official does not make his acts and his records public?

Mr. HULLICK. But they say he is a private surveyor.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. That has been a question of contention for years, and the fact has been that the Commissioners of the District of Columbia have never been able to control these records.

Mr. HULLICK. Then we ought to have a law that will.

Mr. HULL. It is claimed that that will be done by this bill.

Mr. HEARD. That is what we propose to do by this bill.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. This bill makes the records public.

Mr. HULLICK. I do not see the authority here.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. If the gentleman will read the closing part of section 5, on page 3, he will see that it reads as follows:

And the field notes of the surveyor and his assistant shall be preserved and shall be a part of the public property of the District of Columbia.

Mr. HULLICK. Ought we not to pass a law to establish the office of first?

Mr. COBB of Alabama. It is already established.

Mr. HULL. The officer has already been appointed by the Commissioners. He claims that under the law his field notes and plats are private property; but he is appointed by the Commissioners. I think the bill covers that point sufficiently.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. If the gentleman will pardon me, the situation is simply this: There is an office of surveyor of the District of Columbia. There is no law which requires him to do the work of the district, and therefore he does not do the work which he has performed heretofore for the District he has claimed the fees from the public treasury just as if he had been working for a private individual. The result has been a large claim against the funds of the District of Columbia on behalf of this surveyor for work done for the public, such as surveying streets and the like. Now, this bill proposes to strike down all that claim and put him under the control of the District Commissioners, so that when his time is required he will be used by them.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I send to the Clerk's desk part of the existing statutes relating to the surveyor of the District of Columbia, and ask to have them read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 42. The office of the surveyor of the District is the legal office of record of the plats of all property in the city of Washington, and all records for the division of squares and lots made between the original proprietors, or otherwise authorized by law, shall be kept in said office.

SEC. 43. All transcripts from such records certified by the surveyor shall be evidence equally valid with certified transcripts from the land records of the District.

SEC. 44. The surveyor, before entering upon the discharge of his duties, shall take oath or affirmation that he will faithfully and impartially perform the duties required of him by the provisions of this chapter.

SEC. 45. The plats of the squares in the city of Washington shall be drawn on a scale of not less than 1 in 320 feet, and shall show the lines of all subdivisions of the squares as the same existed at the date of the completion of each square.

SEC. 46. The surveyor shall ascertain and certify, and put on record at the request and expense of any person interested therein, the fact of the occupation of land by a party well as mentioned in the preceding section.

SEC. 47. Whenever the President shall deem it necessary to subdivide any square or lot belonging to the United States, within the city of Washington, not reserved for public purposes, into convenient building lots or portions for sale or lease, and to add to the plat of the square, he may cause a plat to be made by the surveyor in the manner prescribed in this chapter, which plat shall be recorded by the surveyor, and the provisions of this chapter shall extend to the lots, pieces, and parcels of ground contained in such plat as fully as to subdivisions made by individual proprietors.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. If the gentleman will allow me a moment. By reading the whole law he will find there is a large amount of work done year by year by the District surveyor which does not become public property and matter of record in the office of the Commissioners, or at least that has been the contention; and now, to remove that contention, the law provides here that all these field notes shall be public property, duly recorded and kept in the office of the Commissioners.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Mr. Chairman, my contention is that all the field notes, or official transcripts of them, all the plats or plans from the field notes in the surveyors office, passing into plats of the District of Columbia, and all books or records kept by the surveyor as such are public records, and that they are such public records as are received in courts as valid evidence just the same as records of deeds; and for anyone to suggest that those records, paid for in part by the District of Columbia and part by the Government, and paid for in the remainder of instances by individuals for the purpose that they may become public records and remain such through all time, are the property of an individual is too absurd, in my mind, to be stated here in earnest by any man who has examined the subject.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I want to say in reply to the gentleman from New Hampshire that the Commissioners of the District were before the committees at different times, not only the House committee but the Senate committee, and they stated repeatedly that the records were not complete, that while the surveyor was a public officer in the sense of being appointed by them under the law, yet that the public business was delayed frequently because there was no appropriation to pay for his work.

Mr. HEARD. Public work ordered by the Commissioners. Mr. HULL. Public work ordered by the Commissioners. They said the surveyor held that he was not obliged to do any work for the public unless the money was provided to pay for it as it was done. As to the point of the records not being absolutely public records, I have only the statement of the three Commissioners that the records are incomplete; that the surveyor holds that they are largely his private property, and that the Government had been compelled for years to keep the same family in office as surveyor of the District of Columbia. Now, I suppose the Commissioners knew exactly what records they had and whether they were complete or not, and the reports in writing of the different divisions of the District government go to bear out the contention of the Commissioners that the surveyor should be made a public officer and paid a salary, the public business being given a preference and all fees turned into the Treasury.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. What would be done with the records of this surveyor's office if he should die or be removed? That is a question which the Commissioners would have to come up at the time when it became necessary to negotiate for them; but it seems to me that it is our duty, regardless of whether this man is or is not in possession of records that the District government must have, to put the office on a public basis, make him a public officer, and require him to give a preference to the public business.

Mr. HEARD. If the gentleman will allow me to read an extract from the report of Captain Fiebigler, it will throw some light upon this question. He says:

It must be conceded that it is of the greatest importance to the government of the District of Columbia and its property owners—

1. That all surveys upon subdivisions of lands shall be promptly and accurately made;
2. That errors in previous surveys shall be corrected and adjusted;
3. That accurate official records shall be deposited with the proper authorities for reference at any time and for use in making assessments; and that all field notebooks and field notes of the Commissioners, who take the public records to correct errors inadvertently made in the plats.

The defects of the present system are:

1. It is impossible for the surveyor to make all surveys required in the District of Columbia, accurately and promptly, with the force now employed by him. Most of the subdivisions recently made outside of the city have been made by other surveyors.

Errors in previous surveys can only be discovered, adjusted, or corrected when all the surveys are made under the supervision of a single officer. The errors are apparent, but the fact that the Commissioners have to go of the tracts in Rock Creek Park, surveyed under the executive officer of the Rock Creek Park Commission, it was absolutely impossible to make the previous surveys agree with their own.

The difficulties could only be solved by the property owners going upon the ground and, guided by a few generally recognized landmarks, fixing the boundaries of the several tracts.

Instead of correcting errors, the present system is probably only adding to them, as the different surveyors are working independently. In a recent examination of the recorder's tract books, for the United States, it was found that the plat of this tract and the adjacent one belonging to private parties overlapped each other by about 60 feet. These surveys were made very long ago by William H. Smith, and, under the supervision of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, had both been made by the surveyor he would have been compelled to correct the errors at once before making the plats.

4. All accurate official records can not be kept, as some of the surveys are now recorded in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, and others in the recorder's office. Only the former are recognized by the assessor. This must necessarily lead to confusion.

The necessity of keeping accurate records up to date is fully explained in the accompanying letter of the officer in charge of the special assessment division.

5. All field notebooks of surveys now belong to the parties who made the surveys, and can not be used, without their permission, to correct errors which may be discovered in official records. In time they will probably be lost or destroyed.

The object of the bill is not so much to have the work of subdividing property in the District done more cheaply, but to have it done more accurately and systematically.

However, it is probable that the receipts of the office of the surveyor will be largely increased, whether the work in the District is done by him.

In addition to the work the private parties the bill would also be done for the District of Columbia.

3. Official plats of streets, alleys, etc., which are being encroached upon by private parties.

The annual appropriations for contingent expenses are not now sufficient to cover the cost of having such surveying done by the District of Columbia. This suits very well for the small amounts which are paid the surveyor.

Very respectfully,

G. J. FIEBIGER,

Captain, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A.

It is upon these facts that we have based our statements and our contention that the legislation proposed in this bill by the Commissioners themselves ought to be enacted. This statement of Captain Fiebigler sets forth the facts upon which we are acting.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I wish to read, in the same connection, a portion of the report of the special assessment division:

I have the honor to report that the work of this office is very much impeded by the nonpayment from the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia of the plates of subdivisions of lots in the various areas as required by existing order of the Commissioners District of Columbia.

The last copies of subdivisions from the surveyor's office were received last fall, and it is necessary to have corrected assessments of them for street plats as the subdivisions may exist at the time the assessment is to be made.

I want to call the attention of the gentleman from New Hampshire to the last paragraph of this report, which says:

In this connection, the liberty of diverting your attention to the peculiar state of existing circumstances in that the surveyor of the District of Columbia, who is presumed to be a District official, does not appear to consider it at all incumbent upon his office to perform his work, however necessary, without compensation therefor, and such work so ordered is ignored unless some appropriation can be utilized to make payment of his services.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Mr. Chairman, I think the statements that have been read and the statement which I have made are entirely consistent.

Mr. HULL. There is no doubt of that.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. The whole point is this: The surveyor contends that he should not be required to perform public duties without compensation, and, as there is no fund under which the Commissioners can compensate him, he claims that he is unable to perform his duties which they demand of him and make a public record of such proposition. In that I wholly agree with the surveyor, and I believe in the purpose of this bill. I have only been combating the idea that the surveyor is not an officer of the District of Columbia, and that the records of his office are not public records, and I do not find that my view is controverted by anything in the reports that have been read.

Mr. HEARD. But it is stated by the commissioners and by Captain Fiebigler that they are powerless to correct the surveyor's actions without tendering him his fee; and, that being the case, whether he is theoretically a District officer or not, he is in fact entirely independent of the Commissioners.

Mr. HULL. And they make the further statements to the committee that the records are very incomplete, that the present law does not give them the proper standard that a public record should have, and that the field notes of the surveyor ought to be filed with the plats that are made, to serve as a starting point for the new survey.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I agree to all that.

Mr. HULL. The surveyor does not file his field notes now, but under this bill he would be compelled to do so.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Chairman, I have no knowledge as to whether the compensation provided in this bill is sufficient, insufficient, or excessive. I know that the bill came to us from the Commissioners with their indorsement and recommendation, and that they have honestly and judiciously fixed the compensation. If, however, it appears to the House that these fees are excessive, let them be changed. My own opinion is that a man competent to be intrusted with running the lines and fixing the boundaries of property in this District of the value of hundreds of millions of dollars could not be employed for less than $20,000 a year, but if the House concludes that the fees are excessive, but that the general provisions of this bill should be carried out, let them reduce the fees. All I ask is that the Commissioners contend for, that they should have complete records and the means of making such records.

THE CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. SAYERS. I except from the amendment, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. HULL. I hope the whole amendment will be voted down.

Mr. SAYERS. But you offered an amendment to it, just now.

Mr. HULL. I know; but I do not think the amendment ought to pass.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Allow me to make a suggestion which will probably obviate this difficulty.

Mr. SAYERS. Certainly.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I suggest that instead of reducing the salary below $3,000, which the Commissioners assure me they think is neither inadequate nor excessive, we add a proviso at the close of the section that this amount shall not be paid unless the fees accruing warrant the expenditure.

Mr. HULL. I think the gentleman is mistaken in suggesting that proviso, because this does increase the expenses somewhat.

Mr. SAYERS. Four or five thousand dollars a year.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The simple effect of the proviso is that the salary would not be paid unless the fees received should warrant it.

Mr. HULL. By this bill we cut off all public fees, and the private fees will not cover the amount of the salary.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I do not think a salary of $3,000 is excessive, and I think the fees will pay it.

Mr. SAYERS. I think we can reach an agreement on this point. I do not see the necessity for having a surveyor, an assistant surveyor, a draftsman and computer, a clerk, two rodmen, two chainmen, all recognized and paid as officers of the city government. If gentlemen think that $3,000 should be paid to the surveyor and $1,800 to an assistant surveyor, that may be all right; but I suggest that either the draftsman or the clerk ought to be eliminated from the bill. The trouble is that the bill provides for too many officers.

Mr. HEARD. I do not profess to have any personal knowledge in regard to the need for a draftsman and a clerk; but I assume that the Commissioners who draw this bill know what officers were necessary, and they have expressed their judgment on the subject in drafting the bill. If a clerk and a draftsman are necessary I see no more propriety in eliminating the provision for those two officers than in striking out any other necessary part of the bill.

Mr. HAINES. Allow me to state that there is no necessity for a clerk in this business. This is on the same line as railroad surveys.

Mr. HULL. I wish to call the attention of my friend from Texas to section 7, which provides—

That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby empowered and directed to prescribe a schedule of fees to be charged by the surveyor for his services, in lieu of the fees now charged.

Mr. HEPBURN. What is to be done with the fees provided for in that section?

Mr. HULL. As I understand, they go into the Treasury.

Mr. HEPBURN. Is there any such provision in this bill?

Mr. HULL. They are covered, as I understand, by the provisions of this law into the Treasury.

Mr. HEPBURN. Under this language of the bill these fees will certainly go to the surveyor:

The Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby empowered and directed to prescribe a schedule of fees to be charged by the surveyor for his services, in lieu of the fees now charged.

Mr. COBB of Alabama. I call the attention of the gentleman from Iowa to the provision in section 5:

All additional fees for surveys made by the surveyor or the assistant surveyor shall be paid over to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia, under regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and be covered into the Treasury of the United States as other revenues of the District are now.

Mr. HEPBURN and others. That covers the case.

Mr. HULLICK obtained the floor.

Mr. SAYERS. If the gentleman from Ohio will yield a moment, I wish to withdraw my amendment.

Mr. HULL. And I withdraw mine.

The CHAIRMAN. That will leave the section as reported by the committee.

The Clerk read section 2.

Mr. HULLICK. I wish to address myself to the first section of the bill. I gave way only for the purpose of allowing the amendments to be withdrawn. Before section 2 is considered I want to address myself to the first section.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the Chair will regard section 1 as still open to amendment. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. HULLICK. The amendment of the gentleman from Texas proposed to reduce the salary of this surveyor from $3,000 to $2,000.

Several MEMBERS. That has been withdrawn.

Mr. HULLICK. But I will renew the amendment, if necessary. As a basis for my remarks I renew the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas to strike out "three" in line 4 of section 1 and insert "two;" so as to read "that from and after the passage of this act the surveyor of the District of Columbia shall receive a salary of $2,000," etc.

Now, Mr. Chairman, an examination of section 3 will show, adding up all of the sums covered by that section together—that is to say, an assistant surveyor, at $1,800; one draftsman and computer, $1,400; one clerk, $1,200, and the other employees named in that section—that if the bill passes as it is now framed an aggregate expenditure of $12,140 is authorized.

I am not in favor of making an office of that kind in the face of the fact that the fees have not heretofore amounted to that sum. As I understand it, the gentleman who makes the report has stated that they amounted to about $7,000.

Mr. HULL. The statement was that they have reported fees of only about $7,500 last year.

Mr. HULLICK. That means the total amount of fees arising from the services of all these assistants who are named here.

Mr. HULL. The surveyor reports $7,500 in fees.

Mr. HULLICK. That is to say for the surveyor and all the rest of these officials mentioned here?

Mr. HULL. That is for the whole office. He paid out for help $4,848. But it must be remembered that he did, but little work for the public, only about $1,000 in all for the District, because they had no funds to draw on out of which to pay him. The presumption is that with an adequate force, and the records all show that it is inadequate, there would be a considerable additional amount of work done for the city, and it is estimated that the additional work, if paid for as heretofore, would amount to about as much as the bill carries.

Mr. HULLICK. Is this official prohibited from doing private work?

Mr. HULL. Not at all.

Mr. HULLICK. Then I understand he will get over $12,000 for fees and salary out of the public treasury, and his assistants will do all of the work while at the same time he will be able to go out and do private work for his own benefit.

Mr. HEARD. Not at all. All the fees derived from that work will go into the Treasury.

Mr. HULLICK. You mean the private fees?

Mr. HEARD. Certainly.

Mr. HULL. It is provided that they shall be paid to the treasurer of the District of Columbia and the amount covered into the Treasury; and the additional amount covered in the bill is to be paid up in a new schedule of fees adopted by the Commissioners, they having authority under the bill to establish a new schedule of fees.

Mr. HULLICK. Very well; I will accept that statement.

Now, it seems that there is an increase here of over $5,000 beyond the amount of the receipts under the present arrangement.

Mr. HULL. Not as much as that; something over four thousand. The fees last year were $7,500.

Mr. HULLICK. Well, that makes over $5,000 difference.

Mr. HAINES. Oh, no; aggregate the sum total and you will find that the amount of fees last year deducted from the sum total leaves something over $4,000. This proposition authorizes the employment of such additional persons as may, in the judgment of the Commissioner, be temporarily required, at an aggregate expense not exceeding $2,000.

Mr. HULL. As a matter of fact the absolute increase will amount to practically nothing when that is taken out. Take $3,400 off, as is proposed in an amendment to be offered, and it will only leave about $1,800 difference.

Mr. HULLICK. I expressed my surprise at the bill because of the amount of the increase which this section carries, but accept the explanation given by the committee.

But the law, as I understand it, does not provide for the office of surveyor. I ask the question of the committee: When is this officer appointed and what is the length of his term of office?

Mr. COBB of Alabama. That is provided for in the law now existing.

Mr. HULL. There is no fixed term, I will state to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. HULLICK. We have been told, in response to the question heretofore, that this was a sort of a family concern which has been in the same family for a generation or so, and the records of the surveyor's office belong not to the public, but to this individual or family. Now, we propose to give money, making an appropriation in this bill to the office, and allow him to employ assistants at the cost of about $12,000, while there is not a provision of law in the bill making it a public office at all.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. HULLICK. Mr. Chairman, with the understanding (that I was not aware of when I rose to address the committee) that it is proposed by the committee to strike out some of the features in this bill, I decline to withdraw my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will proceed with the reading of the bill.

Section 2 was read.

The Clerk read section 3, as follows:

SEC. 3. That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, on the recommendation of the surveyor, be, and they are hereby, authorized to appoint one assistant surveyor, at a salary of $1,800 per annum; one draftsman and computer, at a salary of $1,400 per annum; one clerk, at a salary of $1,200 per annum; two rodmen, at $200 each per annum; two chainmen, at $150 each per annum; and such additional employees as may be, in the judgment of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, temporarily required for the surveyor's operations, at an aggregate expense of not exceeding $2,000 in any one year.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out all of section 3, beginning with line 5 and ending with line 13, and insert what I send to the desk.

The Clerk reads as follows:

Strike out the following words:
"One draftsman and computer, at a salary of $1,400 per annum; one clerk, at a salary of $1,200 per annum; two rodmen, at $200 each per annum; two chainmen, at $150 each per annum; and such additional employees as may be, in the judgment of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, temporarily required for the surveyor's operations, at an aggregate expense of not exceeding $2,000 in any one year," and insert "and such employees as may be, in the judgment of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, required for the surveyor's operations, at an aggregate expense of not exceeding $4,000 in any one year."

Mr. HULL. I think the committee is willing to accept that. It is a slight change in the phraseology, and cuts down the expense some. The amendment was adopted.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

Sec. 4. That the surveyor shall, as speedily as possible, execute any order of survey made by any court or private individual of any lot or square within the District of Washington, or of any land within the District of Columbia outside of said cities, and shall make due return of a true plat and certificate thereof.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Congress has already passed a bill abolishing the city of Georgetown, and I think it has probably by this time become a law. Therefore I move to strike out the word "cities" in line 3, section 4, and to insert "city," and in line 4 strike out the words "and Georgetown," and in line 5 strike out the word "cities" and insert in lieu thereof the word "city."

The Clerk proposed the amendment, as follows:

Amend section 4 so that it will read as follows:

"Sec. 4. That the surveyor shall, as speedily as possible, execute any order of survey made by any court or private individual of any lot or square within the city of Washington, or of any land within the District of Columbia outside of said city, and shall make due return of a true plat and certificate thereof."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk, resuming the reading of the bill, read as follows:

Sec. 5. That it shall be the duty of the surveyor to execute any surveying work for the District of Columbia, without charge, on the order of the Commissioners; and fees for surveys made by the surveyor or the assistant surveyor shall be paid over to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia under regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioners of the District revenues of the District are now, and the said order of the surveyor and his assistant shall be preserved and shall be a part of the public property of the District of Columbia.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I offer the following amendment, to come in at the end of section 5.

The Clerk read as follows:

At the end of section 5, line 11, insert the following:

"And all records, plats, plans, and other papers or documents now existing, or hereafter made or secured by the office of the said surveyor, shall be delivered by each surveyor to his successor in office."

Mr. HULL. How are these records to be delivered to his successor? Are they not simply left in the office?

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. The incoming officer gives a receipt for everything when he assumes the duties of the office.

The amendment of Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire was agreed to. The Clerk completed the reading of the bill.

Mr. SAYERS. I ask unanimous consent to return to the amendment which I offered, and to insert after the word "office" the words "and operations."

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment as it will read if amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert, after the word "annum," in line 4, the words "and such employees as may be, in the judgment of the Commissioners of the District, be required for the surveyor's office and operations, at an aggregate expense of not exceeding $4,000 in any one year."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I ask unanimous consent that we return to section 1 to consider an amendment which I wish to offer.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I want to hear the amendment before consent is given.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment will be read subject to objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the words "shall be," in line 5, page 1, insert the words "appointed by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia for the term of four years, unless sooner removed for cause, and shall be."

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I do not object to that.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to returning to the section?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Hampshire.

Mr. HULLICK. I have been unable to find any statute that establishes the office of surveyor of the District of Columbia. If there is no such law, we ought to establish the office before we adopt the amendment suggested. If there is a statute establishing that office and appointing that officer, and giving the authority that appoints him, and the term of his office and the control of the records, if there is a law which gives character to his official acts, we ought to see it before we vote upon this.

I have here the Revised Statutes, and there is not a word said in them except in the statute that was enacted on page 57 of the acts of 1873-75, referred to by the gentleman from New Hampshire. There is no provision in this statute for the establishment of that office, and I take it for granted that there is no office, because the men who have been performing that duty for two or three generations are doing it on their own motion and without any authority whatever. Now they come in and claim the right as against the United States and as against the District of Columbia to control the records that they have been making. If there is no office of that kind we must establish it by this bill. We must have the office designated, and the time when the term shall begin, and the amount of the bond, and the authority that shall make the appointment, and we should define his qualifications and all that kind of thing. The amendment that is offered is not full enough. The amendment says that there shall be an officer appointed by the District Commissioners. When will his term begin?

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Immediately after the passage of this act.

Mr. HULLICK. I think we should designate the day when his term of office shall begin.

Mr. HEARD. From and after the passage of the act.

Mr. HULLICK. It ought to be a fixed date. I claim the amendment is not complete enough. I am in favor of the amendment except that I think it ought to be made more complete.

Mr. HEARD. This bill provides for all the points suggested by the gentleman. It provides for the surveyor giving bond and provides how he shall be appointed; provides that he shall be a regular civil engineer and that he shall be surveyor of the District of Columbia.

Mr. HEARD. I do not see that the gentleman's amendment relieves the difficulty, because the very purpose of it is provided for in the body of the bill; and the committee think it is as sufficiently guarded as we could make it in the amendment of the gentleman from New Hampshire.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I desire to offer an amendment just as a verbal correction. I move, in line 6, after the word "the," to insert the word "said."

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 6, after the word "the," insert the word "said."

Mr. HULL. There is no objection to that.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

UNION PASSENGER STATION ON B STREET NORTH.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Chairman, I desire to call up the bill (H. R. 8262) authorizing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to have established a union street-car passenger station on B street north, between Sixth and Seventh streets. It is on the Union Calendar.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc. That District north between Seventh street west and the public grounds occupied by the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company, be widened to the line of the present location of the northeast corner of the lot between Seventh and Twelfth streets, west and line, the Commissioners be authorized to have established a union street-car passenger station on the said widened part of B street.

Mr. HEARD. The object of this bill is to authorize the Commissioners of the District to widen B street north here by the Center Market, for one block, to correspond with the width of the sun street between Seventh and Twelfth streets, the object being to give room for the five-foot street railway plant, which they now or charter to come there to establish a union street-car passenger station there. The bill was prepared by the Commissioners, and the committee has agreed to it, and I believe that there is no objection to it. It does not propose a dollar of expenditure by the Government. The gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. BAKER] will offer an amendment to the conclusion of section 1 to the effect that the work shall be done at the expense of these railroads companies, as to make it proper to place them under the duty of their expense.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, then, general debate will be considered as closed.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. I wish to offer an amendment. I have sent to the Clerk's desk, to come up at the next session of the session.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert the following at the conclusion of the section:
 "At the expense of the street roads using said station."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

ECKINGTON AND SOLDIERS' HOME RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Chairman, I now call up the bill (H. R. 8427) to amend the charter of the Eckington and Soldiers' Home Railway Company.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Eckington and Soldiers' Home Railway Company, of the District of Columbia, is hereby authorized and directed to extend its tracks, and its cars thereon, through and along the following named streets: Beginning at the intersection of North Capitol street and Michigan avenue, thence easterly along Michigan avenue and Bunker Hill road to its intersection with Fourth street northeast, so as to connect with the line now running to Brookland.

Sec. 2. That said railway company is directed to build and operate the extension herein granted within six months after the North Capitol street branch shall be in operation to Michigan avenue.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, this bill simply makes a link between the terminus of the Eckington line here, right at the point where Michigan avenue is intersected by North Capitol street, just south of the Soldiers' Home, and with this line where it now lands passengers, near the south gate at the Catholic University. There are only a few hundred yards of space in there, and the property holders of Michigan avenue ask for the extension. It is of great service to the people of Brookland and neighborhood. I ask that general debate be closed.

Mr. HAINES. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question there.

That said railway company is directed to build and operate the extension herein granted within six months after the North Capitol street branch shall be in operation to Michigan avenue.

Now, when is that North Capitol street branch to be established?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. It has been delayed by the delay in opening the Prospect Park Cemetery, and because of that delay we have not got up to Michigan avenue, but will in a short time.

Mr. HAINES. Why not amend by striking out that section, and making it that they shall construct, build, and operate that road within one year of the passage of the act?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Because the District may not open North Capitol street through there. It will be done immediately after North Capitol street is opened. I ask unanimous consent that general debate, as considered as closed.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The bill was ordered to be laid aside with a favorable recommendation.

WOMEN AS PUBLIC-SCHOOL TRUSTEES IN DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (S. 1717) to authorize the appointment of women as public-school trustees in the District of Columbia.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia be, and they are hereby, authorized to appoint women as members of the board of trustees of the public schools of the District of Columbia in addition to the present membership of said board.

An amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

Insert after the word "board," in line 7, the following:
 "And for this purpose the number of members of the board shall be increased from 9 to 12, not more than 2 of whom shall be women."

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Chairman, I desire only to say in regard to this bill that it has been favorably recommended by the Commissioners and has passed the Senate, and that a similar bill pending in the House was favorably considered by our committee. A bill for this purpose was introduced in the House by the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. DAYTON). It was referred to the District Commissioners, and the Commissioners sent up a substitute for it, which I introduced at their request. The Senate bill provided that the District Commissioners should be authorized to add women members to the board of trustees without specifying the number, but your committee have recommended the amendment which has been read, fixing the number at two.

Mr. HAINES. Does this increase the expenses of the board?

Mr. HEARD. Not a dollar. The bill simply authorizes the Commissioners to put not to exceed two women on the board.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, general debate will be considered closed.

There was no objection.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend the committee's amendment so as to strike out all of it after the word "eleven."

Mr. HEARD. I hope the gentleman will not insist upon that amendment, for I am quite sure the House will not accept it. The Commissioners have not approved the bill in the form in which it would stand with that amendment and neither has the Senate.

Mr. BLACK. What is the effect of the amendment?

Mr. HEARD. To allow the whole school board to be composed of women.

The amendment of Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire was rejected, and the amendment recommended by the Committee on the District of Columbia was then agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

SUBURBAN RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Chairman, I call up the bill (H. R. 6816) to amend the charter of the District of Columbia Suburban Railway Company.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that this bill is on the House Calendar.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. And it has been debated for two days in the House already.

The CHAIRMAN. But it is not in order in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HEARD. Then, Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. SWANSON having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. DOCKERY, from the Committee of the Whole, reported that they had had under consideration various bills and had directed him to report the same to the House with sundry recommendations.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, I desire now to call up for action by the House the bills which have been reported from the Committee of the Whole.

WASHINGTON AND MARLBORO RAILWAY.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the title of the first bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 8391) authorizing the Washington and Marlboro Electric Railway Company of Maryland to extend its line of road into and within the District of Columbia.

Mr. HEARD. I ask unanimous consent that the amendments recommended by the Committee of the Whole be voted upon in gross.

There was no objection.

The amendments were adopted.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The next bill reported from the Committee of the Whole with amendments was a bill (S. 444) making the surveyor of the District of Columbia a salaried officer, and to provide for more efficient service in the surveyor's office.

The amendments reported from the Committee of the Whole were adopted.

Mr. HULICK. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to offer an amendment.

There was no objection.

The amendment was read, as follows:

After the word "laws," in the first line of section 8, amend by adding the words "inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed," so that the provision will read: "All laws and parts of laws inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed."

Mr. HEARD. I see no objection to that amendment.

The amendment was adopted.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

UNION PASSENGER STATION.

The next bill reported from the Committee of the Whole was a bill (H. R. 8260) to authorize the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to have established a union-street-car passenger station on D street northeast, between Sixth and Seventh.

The amendments recommended by the Committee of the Whole were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

ECKINGTON AND SOLDIERS' HOME RAILWAY.

The next bill reported from the Committee of the Whole was the bill (H. R. 8427) to amend the charter of the Eckington and Soldiers' Home Railway Company.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

WOMEN AS SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The next bill reported from the Committee of the Whole was the bill (S. 1717) to authorize the appointment of women as public-school trustees in the District of Columbia.

The amendments reported from the Committee of the Whole were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HEARD, a motion to reconsider the votes by which the District of Columbia bills were just passed was laid on the table.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA SUBURBAN RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. HEARD. I now desire to call up the bill (H. R. 6816) to amend the charter of the District of Columbia Suburban Railway Company. I apprehend it will not be necessary to read this bill. It has been before the House on two previous occasions. It has been read at length; and general debate was closed. We were considering the bill by sections under the five-minute rule when it was last before the House. I yield to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON], who had the bill in charge.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SWANSON). The bill will be considered under the five-minute rule.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. When this bill was last under consideration, on June 13, 1894, an amendment was proposed by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] upon which the yeas and nays were ordered. On the roll call no quorum voted, and thereupon the House adjourned. So that the pending question is now upon that amendment on which the yeas and nays have been ordered, and I presume there is nothing in order now but to call the roll.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS].

The Clerk read as follows:
Strike out all of lines 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10, after the word "that," in line 6, on page 1, and lines 1 and 2, on page 2; the words "and assigns are hereby created," in line 2 of page 2; and insert after the word "company," in line 4, page 2, the following:

"It is hereby created, to consist of such person or persons as shall, at public auction, to be held at such time and place as may be prescribed by the District Commissioners, after notice of not less than thirty days by publication in a Washington (D. C.) newspaper, bid the highest percentage of the annual gross proceeds of said railway business for a term of not exceeding fifty years.

Mr. TRACEY. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the calling of the yeas and nays be vacated, and that the vote be again taken on the amendment.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I presume a motion to reconsider the vote by which the yeas and nays were ordered would be in order. I make that motion.

The motion to reconsider was agreed to; and the question recurring on ordering the yeas and nays, they were not ordered.

The question being taken on agreeing to the amendment of Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi, it was rejected.

The Clerk was proceeding to read the second section of the bill, when—

Mr. HEPBURN. I hope that the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. RICHARDSON] or some other gentleman will explain to us, before we leave section 1, the route of this road.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. When this bill was last under consideration the first section of the bill as originally introduced was published in the RECORD; but the amendment reported by the committee, which was pending, changed somewhat the route originally proposed; so that the section as published was somewhat misleading.

The route as now called for in the amended bill begins at the District line on the Bladensburg road, and strikes the Boundary at its intersection with the Bladensburg road, which is at Fifteenth street northeast. That is one of the suburban lines. The other suburban line comes down Twelfth street extended from Trinidad, and runs over the hill there to Brookland and to the suburban village of Langdon. This line, coming down Twelfth street northeast extended, crosses the Boundary; crosses H street, the line of the Columbia Railroad, and comes to Maryland avenue. Thence the line extends by double track down Maryland avenue in the direction of the Capitol to E street east; thence west on E street east to Fourth street west; thence south on Fourth street west to D street west; thence along D street over the tracks of the Metropolitan Railroad to Louisiana avenue, thence southwesterly on Louisiana avenue to a point to be located by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, east of Seventh street west.

So that brings it along E street northeast until they strike Judiciary Square. It then goes south of the square until it strikes the tracks of the Metropolitan Railroad on D street, and thence along the track of that road just south of Judiciary Square to Louisiana avenue, near the police headquarters there, where it leaves D street and runs down Louisiana avenue. That is the way it now runs and covers all of East Washington, as I said, and then the suburban lines.

Mr. HULL. I would like to ask the gentleman a question for information. I do not know the route of this road. Does it not parallel other lines for quite a distance?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Yes; it parallels the Columbia road and the Eckington and Soldiers' Home road from where it intersects that road until it strikes the Metropolitan road; that is to say, it is on E street, the Eckington is on D street as it comes into the city, while the Columbia road is on H street.

Mr. COOMBS. They are some little distance apart.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Well, there is one block's difference between that and the Eckington, and three from the H street line.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The committee recommend an amendment to this section, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out, after the word "road," in line 11 in section 1, page 2, all of lines 12, 13, 14, 15, and 16, and insert— "and running thence along said road to Florida avenue thence southwesterly, by double track, on Maryland avenue to E street north; thence west on E street north to Fourth street west, thence south on Fourth street west to D street north; thence west on D street, in part, over the—

Strike out, after the word "east," in line 3 in section 1, page 3, all of lines 3 and 4, and insert "to its intersection with Maryland avenue."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read section 12, as follows:

Sec. 12. That said company is hereby authorized to issue its capital stock in an amount not to exceed $2,000,000, in shares of $100 each. Said company shall require the subscribers to the capital stock to pay in cash to the treasurer appointed by the corporation the amounts severally subscribed by them as follows, namely: Ten per cent at the time of subscription and the balance of such subscription to be paid at such times and in such amounts as the board of directors may require; and no subscription shall be deemed valid unless 10 per cent thereof shall be paid at the time of subscribing as hereinbefore provided; and if any stockholder shall refuse or neglect to pay any installment as aforesaid, or as required by the resolution of the board of directors, after reasonable notice shall be given him in writing, the said board of directors, at public auction, to the highest bidder, so many shares of its stock as shall pay said installments, and the person who offers to purchase the least number of shares for the assessment due shall be taken to be the highest bidder, and such sale shall be conducted under such general regulations as may be adopted in the by-laws of said company; but no stock shall be sold for less than the total assessments due and payable, or said corporation may sue and collect the same from any delinquent subscriber in any court of competent jurisdiction.

Mr. HEPBURN. I move the following amendment to this section:

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided, That no stock certificate shall be issued until the full face value of the same shall be paid for in money, and no bond shall be issued by said company until all the stock herein authorized shall have been paid for and issued.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read section 20, as follows:

Sec. 20. That the said company shall have at all times the free and uninterrupted use of its roadway, and if any person or persons shall willfully, mischievously, and unnecessarily obstruct or impede the passage of cars of said road, or shall, with a vehicle or vehicles, or otherwise, or in any manner molest or interfere with passengers or operators while in transit, or destroy or injure the cars of said railway or depots, stations, or other property belonging to said company, the person or persons so offending shall be liable to forfeit and pay for each such offense not less than $25 nor more than $100 to said company, to be recovered as other fines and penalties in said District, and shall be liable in addition to said penalty, for any loss or damage occasioned by his or her or their act as aforesaid; but no suit shall be brought unless commenced within sixty days after such offense shall have been committed.

Mr. HEPBURN. I offer an amendment to this section.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out from line 14, section 20, on page 17, the words "to said company." Mr. HEPBURN. This is another of those provisions directing that fines recovered for a public offense shall be paid to the railroad company.

Mr. COOMBS. That amendment ought to be adopted.

The amendment was agreed to; and the Clerk resumed the reading of the bill.

The Clerk resumed and concluded the reading of the bill.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, I ask a vote on the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, the question being upon its passage.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, it is agreed that this bill as passed defines the route in accordance with the amendments recommended by the Committee on the District of Columbia, which have heretofore been published in the RECORD. It was published without the proposed amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is informed that the present bill is the one reported from the committee as amended, and not the one heretofore published in the RECORD.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. That is correct.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The bill was passed.

On motion of Mr. HEARD, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

CAPITAL RAILWAY COMPANY.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole for the purpose of considering House bill 8711 and other bills to which we may call the attention of the committee.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole, Mr. DICKERY in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is now in Committee of the Whole for the consideration of a bill the title of which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 8514) to incorporate the Capital Railway Company.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Chairman, I desire to say that this is a proposition to construct a railroad, beginning about Sheppards Point, across the Eastern Branch, and built into the city; but it is proposed to extend it only about six or seven blocks from the Eastern Branch up to a point where it will intersect the Anacostia road.

I ask unanimous consent, therefore, to dispense with the first formal reading of the bill as it is in the exact form prescribed by the Commissioners for all of these bills.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri to dispense with the first formal reading of the bill?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no desire for general debate it will be considered as closed by unanimous consent.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc. That John B. Stetson, Augustus Borgdorff, Clarence F. Bennett, Arthur E. Keadle, Harry Carson Sims, Henry C. Leach, George W. Frederic Snyder, Joseph B. Lewis, and William Henry Randle, of _____, their associates and assigns, be, and they are hereby, created a body corporate under the name of the Capital Railway Company, and by that name shall have perpetual succession, and shall be able to sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, defend and be defended in all courts of law and equity within the United States, and may make and lawfully execute and sell, and sell, a corporation is hereby authorized to construct and lay down a street railway, with the necessary switches, turn-outs, and other mechanical devices in the District of Columbia, and run cars thereon for carrying passengers, parcels, milk, and truck by and along the following route: Beginning at a point on the District line near the Potomac River, southeast of Sheppards Ferry, thence north by such route as shall be approved by the District Commissioners to the south side of the Eastern Branch or Anacostia River, thence across the same by transfer ferry to First street or South Capital street, as may be approved by the District Commissioners, and thence over the same route to the beginning, also commencing at Anacostia Railroad tracks and Harrison street, Anacostia, thence along Harrison street and Good Hope road extended, to the District line, and return over the same route. These routes may be modified or extended at the will of Congress, and the Capital Railway Company shall comply with such modifications or extensions.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I understand there has been some modification of the bill. As I understand it, the Clerk read the original text of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk read the bill as printed.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. After conversation with my colleagues I withdraw the suggestion. Let the Clerk proceed with the reading.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

Sec. 4. That the said railway shall be constructed in a substantial and durable manner, and all rails, electrical and mechanical appliances, conduits, stations, etc., shall be of approved pattern.

Mr. HEPBURN. I move to amend section 4 by striking out the words "of approved pattern" and inserting the words "shall be approved by the Commissioners of the District."

Mr. HEARD. That is right.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 4, part 3, section 4, strike out the words "of approved pattern," and insert the words "approved by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

Sec. 16. That the government and direction of affairs of the company shall be vested in a board of directors, nine in number, the majority of whom shall be residents of the District of Columbia, who shall be stockholders of record, and who shall hold their office for one year, and until others are duly elected and qualified to take their places as directors; and the said directors, a majority of whom shall be a quorum, shall elect one of their number to be president of the board, who shall also be president of the company, and they shall also choose a vice president, a secretary, and a treasurer, who shall give bond to the company for the faithful discharge of his trust. In the case of a vacancy in the board of directors by death, resignation, or otherwise of any director the vacancy created thereby shall be filled by the board of directors.

Mr. HAINES. In section 16, page 10, line 3, I move to strike out the words "the majority of whom shall be residents of the District of Columbia."

The amendment was read, as follows:

On page 10, section 16, line 3, strike out the following language: "The majority of whom shall be residents of the District of Columbia."

Mr. HEARD. I have no objection to striking out those words.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

Sec. 19. That said company is hereby authorized to issue its capital stock to an amount not to exceed the estimated cost of the construction and equipment of the road in shares of $50 each, and to issue bonds not to exceed the cost of construction of the road, but such stock and bonds shall not exceed in the aggregate more than 10 per cent above the actual cost of the right of way, construction, and equipment of said road. Said company shall require the subscribers to the capital stock to pay in cash to the treasurer, appointed by the corporation, the amount severally subscribed by them, as follows, to-wit: Ten per cent at the date of subscription, and the balance of such subscription to be paid at such times and in such amounts as the board of directors may require, and no subscription shall be deemed valid unless the 10 per cent subscription is paid at the time of subscription, as hereinbefore provided; and if any stockholder shall refuse or neglect to pay any installment as at, or as required by the resolution of the board of directors, after several notices in writing, he shall be liable to be the highest bidder, and such sale shall be conducted under such general regulations as may be adopted in the by-laws of said company, but no stock shall be sold for less than the total assessed value of said stock, and no stock shall be sold for less than to strike from any delinquent subscriber in any court of competent jurisdiction.

Mr. HAINES. In section 19, page 12, line 4, I move to strike out the word "fifty" and to insert in place thereof the words "one hundred."

The amendment was read, as follows:

On page 12, line 4, strike out the word "fifty" and insert the words "one hundred," so that it will read "$100 each."

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I hope my friend will not insist on that amendment. The promoters of this enterprise prefer to have the amount left at $50. That being so, it seems to me, we ought not to insist on the change. There are such poor people about to take this stock that they want to make the shares $50 each. [Laughter.]

Mr. HAINES. I withdraw the amendment.

Mr. HEPBURN. I move to strike out of line 7, page 13, the words "ten per cent above."

The amendment was read, as follows:

On page 12, line 7, strike out the words "ten per cent above."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HEPBURN. I move to add to the section the following proviso:

Provided, That no certificate of stock shall be issued until the same has been paid for in money at its face value, and no bonds shall be issued until the same have been authorized shall have been issued and the proceeds exhausted in construction.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS of New York. Mr. Chairman, on this question of bonds I want to say a word. I send to the Clerk's desk a resolution that I ask to have read in my time as a part of my remarks.

The Clerk read as follows:

Whereas on Friday last the President entered into a private contract in writing with certain persons to borrow $200,000,000 of the United States thirty-year bonds of the United States at a rate equivalent to 4 1/2 per cent premium; and

Whereas bonds exactly similar, issued eighteen years ago and having only twelve years to run, were selling in the New York market on that day at a premium of 10 per cent, and at that rate these thirty year bonds are worth 100; and

Whereas a cablegram from London, published in the Washington Post this morning, shows that English capitalists are ready to pay a premium of 12 per cent on said bonds; and

Whereas the Ways and Means Committee of this House, not comprehending the reason which actuated the Executive in selling so many millions of bonds at a premium of 4 1/2 per cent, when a premium of 12 per cent could be, and much more ought to be, obtained, on yesterday had the Secretary of the Treasury before it, and examined him in relation thereto, and obtained a copy of said written contract, and all the information which the Secretary of the Treasury could give on the subject; and

Whereas the information thus obtained has not been communicated to this House;

Whereas at this stage of this Congress, in a matter of such momentous importance, it is desirable, and the right of this House, to know what information the Ways and Means Committee has received in relation to this loan;

Resolved, That the Committee on Ways and Means of this House report immediately to this House all the testimony and evidence and statements furnished by the Secretary of the Treasury in relation to that loan, including the contract made with any person or persons concerning the same.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS of New York. All I have to say is that as soon as I can be recognized in the House I shall offer that resolution and ask for its immediate consideration.

Mr. WILSON of West Virginia. I have the contract here in my hand, and it will be appended to the report that I shall make this evening, so the gentleman's resolution amounts to nothing.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS of New York. The resolution has brought out the contract anyhow.

Mr. WILSON of West Virginia. No, sir; the contract was here before the gentleman's resolution was heard of, and I am going to append it to my report.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the proviso offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEPBURN].

Mr. HEPBURN. If I may be permitted to withdraw that, I will do so, and offer the following:

Add to the end of the section the following: "Provided, That no certificate of stock shall be issued until the same has been paid for in money at its face value."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEPBURN] offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Add to the end of the section the words: "Provided, That no certificate of stock shall be issued until the same has been paid for in money at its face value."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 21. That said company shall on or before the 1st of February of each year, make a report to Congress, through the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, of the names of all the stockholders therein and the amount of stock held by each, together with a detailed statement of the receipts and expenditures from whatever source and on whatever account, for the preceding year ending December 31, and such other facts as may be required by any general law of the District of Columbia, which report shall be verified by the affidavit of the president and secretary of said company; and if said report is not made at the time specified or within ten days after such failure shall of itself operate as a forfeiture of this charter, and it shall be the duty of the Commissioners to cause to be instituted proper judicial proceedings therefor; and said company shall pay to the District of Columbia, in lieu of personal taxes upon personal property, including cars and motive power, each year 4 per cent of its gross earnings, which amount shall be payable to the collector of taxes at the times and in the manner that other taxes are now due and payable, and subject to the same penalties on arrears; and the franchise and property of said company, both real and personal, and sufficient amount may be seized and sold in satisfaction thereof, as now provided by law for the sale of other property for taxes; and said per cent of its gross earnings shall be in lieu of all other assessments of personal taxes upon its property used solely and exclusively in the operation and management of said railway: Provided, That the payment of the said 4 per cent of its gross earnings shall not be required during the period of the operation of any part of said railway. Its real estate shall be taxed as other real estate in the District of Columbia: Provided, That its tracks shall not be taxed as real estate.

Mr. HAINES. Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to section 21, page 14, line 29, in place of the word "five," insert the word "ten."

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 14, line 29, strike out the word "five" and insert in lieu thereof the word "ten."

Mr. HEPBURN. In order to balance the views of gentlemen here, I move to strike out the proviso commencing in line 37.

Mr. COFFIN of Maryland. I hope both gentlemen will withdraw their amendments.

Mr. HEPBURN. Here is a proposition to exempt the personal property of this corporation from all taxation except the 4 per cent tax upon its gross earnings. The bill as now drawn postpones the operation of this for five years after the operation of the road begins. And yet the gentleman from New York [Mr. HAINES], in his spirit of extraordinary liberality, proposes to extend that period of exemption to taxation for ten years. I am at a loss to know why gentlemen should intervene in this way in favor of this class of corporations. These men go into these operations with the expectation of making money. If they do not make make money in the first year or the second year, they are still content to go into the operation, knowing that at a later period a larger return will come and an excellent investment is found for their money, and I can see no reason in the world why they should be exempt from taxation. I see no reason why they should not pay their taxes as other people are required to pay theirs. Let the taxation be put on the ground of personal taxation. One and a half is what other people have to pay, and it seems to me there ought not to be any discrimination. Why, the gentleman is not content that they shall pay 4 per cent, but wishes to provide that they shall pay nothing for ten years. Now, I should like to have some good reason why that should be done.

Mr. HAINES. I agree with the gentleman that they should be taxed as other corporations are taxed in other cities; but I state, as I have already previously done to-day, that corporations of this character can not live and expect to pay 4 per cent of their gross earnings. It is impossible for them to do so. The history of all this character of legislation demonstrates that they can not afford to pay such a percentage.

Mr. CATCHINGS. In this particular case the gentleman will certainly keep in view the fact that the corporation has only asked for five years, and they are perfectly content to take that.

Mr. HAINES. I understand what you mean. If this was a corporation that intended in good faith by their own money to build the road it would be another matter. But they simply have a bill introduced and passed so as to get other people on the outside interested. They procure it with the intent of selling the road or franchise. This one restriction makes it impossible for these suburban roads to pay. People having real estate that they wish to improve or sell are simply interested in authorizing a road, with a view of getting someone foolish enough to invest their money in these roads upon statements made by the original incorporators and without their investigating these charters.

Mr. HULL. What authority have you for the statement that that is the purpose or intent of these parties?

Mr. HAINES. I do not make that statement with reference to this company. That is generally the case.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. It is not the case in this instance, and the gentleman has no authority for such a statement.

Mr. HAUGEN. Who was it that was asking for the extension of the time to ten years?

Mr. HAINES. I was,

Mr. HAUGEN. On your own motion?

Mr. HAINES. On my own motion. That they should be taxed as they are in other cities.

Mr. CATCHINGS. I hope both gentlemen will withdraw their amendments.

Mr. HAINES. I withdraw my amendment.

Mr. H. RICHARDSON, the gentleman from New York withdraws his amendment. The Clerk will report the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out in paragraph 20, the words: "Provided, That the payment of the said 4 per cent of its gross earnings shall not be required during the period of the operation of any part of said railway. Its real estate shall be taxed as other real estate in the District of Columbia: Provided, That its tracks shall not be taxed as real estate."

Mr. HEPBURN. There are four or five of these suburban roads now in operation in this District, and our experience would seem to indicate that there are a good many gentlemen in the community who think franchises of this kind are valuable, for much of our time on District day is consumed in considering and passing this class of bills. It is evident, therefore, that somebody disagrees with the gentleman from New York [Mr. HAINES] as to the value of these franchises, and they are the men who are here clamoring to have these franchises passed. I do not know that all of these franchises are very valuable just now, but they are expected to become so. There was a time, probably when the Washington and Georgetown Railway charter went a-begging, but to-day the stock of that company is worth three or four hundred per cent, and is one of the best investments that a man can have, and I take it that the men who are seeking for these charters are looking to the prospective value and not merely to the value at this time.

Mr. BRETZ. I desire to ask the gentleman whether it is true that we are granting this franchise without requiring the parties to pay for it, as we have been granting other franchises in this District?

Mr. HEPBURN. My understanding is that all the other charters of this class have required the payment of this 4 per cent tax.

Mr. HEARD. That is correct.

Mr. HEPBURN. And my understanding is that these roads, when they pass the operation of one, are required to begin that payment with the beginning of the operation of the road.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. I suggest to gentlemen who favor this bill, particularly to my friend from Mississippi, that the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa ought to prevail. There is a bill reported from the District Committee which we intend to call up as soon as we can, reducing the tax on these suburban lines from 4 per cent to 14 per cent. If that bill passes we will have a road as well as to the other suburban roads, and it seems to me that the better course would be to agree to this amendment now and let this road be dealt with like the others.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 23. That the said company shall have at all times the free and uninterrupted use of the roadway, subject to the rights of the public, and any person or persons shall willfully, maliciously, and unlawfully obstruct or impede the passage of cars of said railway, or obstruct with a vehicle, vehicles, or otherwise, or in any manner molest or interfere with passengers or operatives while in transit, or destroy or damage the cars of said railway, or do any act calculated to obstruct or impede the passage of cars of said railway, shall be deemed to be guilty of an offense, and shall be liable, in addition to the fine and costs, to pay for each such offense not less than $5 nor more than $100 as a civil penalty. It is provided that the fine and costs shall be recovered as other fines and penalties in said District, but no suit shall be brought unless commenced within sixty days after such offense shall have been committed.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Chairman, I move to amend in lines 11 and 12, page 15, by striking out the words "to said company," so as to make the clause read: "The person or persons so offending shall forfeit and pay for each such offense not less than $5 nor more than $100, to be recovered as other fines and penalties in said District," etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee rise. The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose, and the Speaker having resumed the chair of the House, from the Committee of the Whole he reported that the Committee of the Whole had reported a bill (H. R. 8714), and had directed him to report the same to the House with amendments.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the bill just reported from the Committee of the Whole be now considered in the House, and that the amendments recommended by the committee be agreed to.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HEARD, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

METROPOLITAN RAILROAD COMPANY.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. 2521) to amend the charter of the Metropolitan Railroad Company of the District of Columbia.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the charter of the Metropolitan Railroad Company of the District of Columbia be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to authorize and require the said company to omit laying out underground and surface road for the proposed line of its cars on F and half street from L street to O street southwest, and in the place and stand thereof the said company is hereby authorized and required to lay down and continue a street car electric construction and track east and from the corner of Four and a-half street and L street southwest, running thence west on L street to Water street, thence in a southeasterly direction on Water street to Prospect avenue, thence east on F and a-half street, thence south on Four and a-half street to P street, thence east on P street into the said company's power lines, thence returning from the power station on Four and a-half street to the power station on Four and a-half and L streets southwest, and thence north by the said company's tracks as now located into its depot on Seventh street extended.

SEC. 2. That the Commissioners of the District of Columbia shall locate the said tracks on Water street, so as best to subserve the public convenience.

SEC. 3. That the said Metropolitan Railroad Company is hereby authorized and required to lay down and continue its underground electric construction of single track at the intersection of O and Thirty-fifth streets northwest, thence running west along O street to Thirty-sixth street, thence south on Thirty-sixth street to Prospect avenue, thence east on Prospect avenue to Thirty-fifth street, thence north on Thirty-fifth street to O street, thence east, continuing its route as now located.

SEC. 4. That the number of directors of said company shall be increased from seven to nine members.

An amendment recommended by the committee was read, as follows:

SEC. 5. That the Brightwood Railway Company, the Rock Creek Railway Company, and the Georgetown and Tennyaltown Railroad Company be, and they are hereby, respectively, authorized and required to sell four coupon tickets for 25 cents, good for one continuous ride in the District of Columbia over the lines of said companies, respectively, and the lines of the Metropolitan Railroad Company, and the said four coupon tickets shall redeem the tickets issued by the Metropolitan Railroad Company at the rate of 2 cents for each coupon ticket presented by the said Metropolitan Railroad Company. Any of the aforesaid railroad companies which refuse to make such redemption or to accept ticket so sold as herein provided for, shall be liable to a fine of $50 for each such violation, to be recovered in the police court of the District of Columbia, and the said fine shall be paid to the person presenting for the collection of such penalty shall be commenced within thirty days from the date of the alleged refusal. The supreme court of the District of Columbia shall have jurisdiction to enforce the collection of such penalty, and the requirements and provisions of this section in respect of the sale of tickets on the petition of either of the aforesaid railroad companies or any citizen of the District of Columbia, and the said fine shall be paid to the Metropolitan Railroad Company and the Rock Creek Railway Company to contract with each other for the purchase, sale, lease, or joint operation of the line of said Rock Creek Railway Company on Florida avenue and U street, or any part thereof.

SEC. 6. That this act shall take effect in thirty days after its passage.

Mr. BAKER of New Hampshire. Mr. Speaker, I wish to inquire with reference to the matter of transfers. As I understand the amendment, the transfers are to be granted only upon payment of an additional fare, or special tickets are to be sold in such a way as to require the payment of an additional fare. I would like to hear some explanation of that. All of the railroad companies here now sell six tickets for 25 cents, but in this case only four tickets are to be sold for 25 cents.

Mr. HAINES. But the passenger gets a ride over two roads instead of one.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. This relates only to suburban roads.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

CLEARING THE POTOMAC OF ICE.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution which I send to the desk.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, etc., That $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, payable from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated and from the revenues of the District of Columbia in equal parts, to be jointly expended by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to clear the Potomac River of ice within the District of Columbia.

The joint resolution was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. SAYERS, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed was laid on the table.

3 PER CENT GOLD BONDS.

Mr. WILSON of West Virginia, from the Committee on Ways and Means, reported a joint resolution (H. Res. 275) authorizing the issue of $65,116,275 gold 3 per cent bonds; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. Speaker, it was understood that when this report was presented the minority of the committee should have opportunity to file their views to-morrow morning.

Mr. WILSON of West Virginia. I hope that gentlemen of the minority will file their views to-night.

Mr. BRYAN. We will try to get the document to the Printing Office to-night.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BRYAN] asks that the minority of the Committee on Ways and Means may have leave to file their views by to-morrow morning on the joint resolution just reported. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. McMLIN. I suppose it would be proper to have it understood if the House should not be in session when the minority report is completed it may be forwarded to the Public Printer at once for printing.

The SPEAKER. That will be understood, if there be no objection.

There was no objection.

Mr. VAN VOORHIS of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the report of the Committee on Ways and Means just submitted be printed in the RECORD. It was spoken to by the minority of the committee, Mr. WILSON, about it, and he is quite willing that that should be done.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, will not the report be printed as a document and be in our hands in the morning?

Mr. VAN VOORHIS of New York. I will, but we shall get the RECORD a good deal earlier than we shall get the document.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. How long is the report?

Mr. EAYNE. Very short, only two pages.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. The request is unusual, but I shall not object.

The report is as follows:

The Committee on Ways and Means, to whom was referred the message of the President of the United States communicated to Congress on the 8th day of February, having had the same under consideration, herewith report a joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to issue, sell, and dispose of bonds of the United States to an amount not exceeding $65,116,275, bearing interest at a rate not exceeding 3 per cent per annum, principal and interest payable in gold coin of the present standard of weight and fineness, said bonds to be made payable not more than thirty years after date, and the said bonds to be sold to the President, which is herewith applied, communicated to the House the condition of the reserve of gold in the Treasury available for the redemption of the Government's legal-tender notes and the maintenance of the Treasury's gold coin circulation, and the reasons which compel at the present time an issue of bonds to replenish and maintain that reserve; also the general terms of a contract, made under authority of the President of the United States, for the purchase and delivery to the Treasury of 300,000 ounces of gold coin of the present standard of weight and fineness, said coin slightly in excess of $65,000,000 of gold coin, to be added to the stock in the Treasury, which amounts to only $42,217,981.95 at the present time.

The Chairman of the Committee, in the presence of a conference with the Secretary of the Treasury, who exhibited to them the original contract entered into by himself on the 8th day of February and explained its details to them. A full and complete copy of said contract is hereto added. From a reading of this paper it will be seen that the arrangement of the Secretary with the parties to this contract effects the purchase of 3,500,000 ounces of standard gold coin of the United States (amounting to $65,116,275), at least one-half of which shall be obtained in and shipped from Europe.

For this gold coin he has contracted to issue to the parties furnishing it, and as authority for the act for the resumption of specie payments, approved January 14, 1875, 4 per cent thirty-year coin bonds of the United States, at a price which realizes to them interest at the rate of 3 1/2 per cent. But the Secretary of the Treasury, in order to retain the right of authority to be given him by Congress, to substitute at par any bonds of the United States bearing 3 per cent interest, of which the principal and interest shall be specifically payable in gold coin of the present standard of weight and fineness, said substitution, however, to be made within ten days from the date of the contract.

It is the object of the joint resolution herewith reported to give to the Secretary of the Treasury authority to substitute the amount of the amount of the contract.

The saving to be effected to the Government, as set forth in the President's message, will be $20,120,000, or thereabouts, by the issue of the 3 per cent bonds, and of the amount of $16,117,750 should they run thirty years. As it is not believed by the committee that the issue of bonds specifically payable in gold coin would impose any additional burden or liability upon the Government than if they are made payable in coin, under its pledge and policy to preserve the parity of the coins in the two metals, the saving of this large amount of money to the Government, and the substantial increase of the revenue of the Government; and as the parties to take the bonds are under contract to furnish gold coin for them it seems no hardship on the Government to contract to pay them back in the same coin that they furnish to it.

APPENDIX.

PRESENT MESSAGE.

To the Congress of the United States:

Since my recent communication to the Congress, calling attention to our financial condition and suggesting legislation which, it was believed, would meet the emergency and allay apprehension then existing in business circles have continued.

As a precaution, therefore, against the failure of timely legislative aid through Congressional action, cautious preparations have been pending to employ to the best possible advantage, in default of better means, such executive authority as may, without additional legislation, be exercised for the purpose of raising and maintaining on our Treasury an adequate and safe gold reserve.

ceding in the whole amount the par value of the bonds deposited: Provided, that at no time shall the total amount of such notes issued to any such association exceed the amount at such time actually paid in of its capital stock.

Amend the title so as to read:
"A bill to provide for maintaining the redemption of United States notes, and for a temporary deficiency of revenue."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The proposed substitute will lie on the table and be printed.

Mr. HILL subsequently said: Mr. President, yesterday there was reported from the Finance Committee a bill relating to the subject of the finances of the country, and being so reported by a committee of course it went upon the Calendar. This morning two bills in regard to the subject of the issuing of bonds and relating generally to the finances of the country were introduced, and ordered to be printed and lie upon the table. Of course it is not expected, I assume, that those bills, the one introduced by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] and the other by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS], should go to any committee. The suggestion I make is that when printed these bills should go to the Calendar.

Mr. SHERMAN. The bill I offered is intended to be proposed as an amendment to a bill that is on the Calendar, and therefore it goes to the Calendar without any formal reference.

Mr. HILL. I suggest that the bill introduced by the Senator from Wisconsin should also go upon the Calendar.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. The Senator from Wisconsin wants to speak upon the bill.

Mr. HILL. He can address the Senate upon it.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. The Senator from Wisconsin himself said that the bill lie upon the table.

Mr. BUTLER. I understand the objection of the Senator from Wisconsin was that his bill should lie upon the table, as he wanted to deliver some remarks in relation to it.

Mr. HILL. This disposition of the bill will be entirely satisfactory to the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. TELLER. I will object to the bill going to the Calendar. It has no place on the Calendar until it has been before a committee and reported by it.

Mr. HILL. That is a matter purely within the control of the Senate.

Mr. TELLER. I suppose the Senate could vote to place the bill upon the Calendar if it saw fit to do so.

Mr. HILL. The only point in reference to having the bill placed on the Calendar is that it would then be subject to a motion to proceed to its consideration. There is a question as to whether a motion can be made to take up and consider a bill lying upon the table, but if a bill is placed upon the Calendar a motion can be made without debate, to take it up, and a vote be had on it; and I think we have the right by motion to place the bill upon the Calendar. It is not necessary that a bill should go to a committee and be reported by a committee in order to be placed upon the Calendar. It is purely a matter within the discretion of the Senate.

Mr. VILAS entered the Chamber.

Mr. HILL. The Senator from Wisconsin is now here, and if he desires he can have the bill remain on the table or take such course as he wishes. I ask the Senator if he desires to have the bill remain on the table, so that he can speak upon it.

Mr. VILAS. I should be perfectly willing to have the bill go upon the Calendar, and I suppose under the fourth subdivision of Rule XIV the bill goes to the Calendar if there be no other disposition of it, for that rule reads:

Every bill and joint resolution introduced on leave * * * shall, if objection be made to further proceeding thereon, be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. TELLER. All bills are referred to committees, and that is the only proper way to proceed. A Senator may ask that a bill be placed upon the Calendar without going to a committee, and I have no doubt the Senate can place it on the Calendar if it chooses; but the mere asking that a bill be placed on the Calendar can not place it there, and I shall object to the Senator's bill going to the Calendar. I do not object, of course, to its lying on the table.

Mr. VILAS. I ask that the bill lie on the table, so as to produce no discussion upon the point at this time; but when the Senator from New York suggested that the bill should go to the Calendar and be given the same position for discussion that the other bills are given it struck me as being a desirable course to pursue.

Mr. LODGE. I should like to make a parliamentary inquiry as to whether it is within the power of the Senate to place a bill upon the Calendar.

Mr. MORRILL. Being objected to, it goes over.

Mr. LODGE. Or does a single objection prevent it?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will have read the fourth clause of Rule XIV.

The Secretary read as follows:

RULE XIV.

4. Every bill and joint resolution reported from a committee, not having previously been read, shall be read once and twice, if not objected to, on the same day, and placed on the Calendar in the order in which the same may be reported; and every bill and joint resolution introduced on leave, and every bill and joint resolution of the House of Representatives which shall have received a first and second reading without being reported, but otherwise shall, if objection be made to further proceeding thereon, be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I object to the bill lying on the table, and I understand, under the rule, that objection takes it to the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That is undoubtedly the correct interpretation of the rule.

Mr. CHANDLER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Is a bill which is put upon the Calendar under the clause which has just been read one of the bills as to which a motion may be made to proceed to its consideration after the morning hour has closed?

Mr. HILL. I desire to have the bill placed so that a motion to take it up will be in order.

Mr. CHANDLER. I should like to have the rule read as to the motions to proceed in the morning hour to the consideration of bills upon the Calendar, for if a bill in this condition can have the same privilege of consideration as a bill which has been reported by a committee, I am very much mistaken either as to the rules or the practice of the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will have the rule read.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. I desire to know whether all of this discussion is not out of order during the morning hour?

Mr. HILL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. The bill has gone to the Calendar, has it not?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. One parliamentary inquiry is already pending, the Chair will state to the Senator from New York.

Mr. CHANDLER. Which parliamentary inquiry is pending, the one submitted by me or the one submitted by the Senator from Florida?

Mr. CALL. I make the point of order.

Mr. CHANDLER. I hope the Senator will withdraw his point of order until I can have the rule read as to motions to proceed to the consideration of bills upon the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read Rule IX.

The Secretary read as follows:

Immediately after the consideration of a case not objected to upon the Calendar is completed, and not later than 2 o'clock, if there shall be no special orders for that time, the Calendar of General Orders shall be taken up and read in the order in which they were received, beginning with the Calendar next after the last subject disposed of, in proceeding with the Calendar, and in such case the following motions shall be in order at any time as provided in this rule: A motion to add to the subject, or to proceed to the consideration of executive business, or questions of privilege, to wit:

First. A motion to proceed to the consideration of an appropriation or revenue bill.

Second. A motion to proceed to the consideration of any other bill on the Calendar, which motion shall not be open to amendment.

Third. A motion to pass over the pending subject, which, if carried, shall have the effect to leave such subject without prejudice in its place on the Calendar.

Mr. CHANDLER. The Secretary has read sufficient. Now, I inquire whether the bill of the Senator from Wisconsin is on the Calendar of General Orders, so as to come within the rule which has just been read? Does the Chair so understand?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair so understands.

Mr. CHANDLER. There is another rule that ought to be read in that connection, to which I will call attention, and that is that a bill can not be read twice on the day it is introduced, if objected to, nor debated, except for reference.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Unless by unanimous consent.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to know what the ruling of the Chair is? The Senator from Wisconsin introduced a bill and asked that it lie on the table for the purpose of enabling him hereafter to submit some remarks upon it. That was done by unanimous consent, I suppose.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that an objection was interposed by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE].

Mr. TELLER. That was not until afterwards. After the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] attempted to have the bill placed on the Calendar I objected, and the bill went to the table—that was the order of the Senate—and it is on the table now, and not on the Calendar. As I understand, unless it is passed twice on the Calendar. Besides, considerable other business had intervened before the Senator from New York thought of moving to have the bill placed on the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection was not interposed by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], and under the rule, which the Chair has had read in the hearing of the Senate, the bill has gone to the Calendar.

Mr. CALL. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will hear the inquiry of the Senator from Florida.

Mr. CALL. I make the point of order that this discussion is out of order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The discussion has closed, the Chair will state to the Senator.

Mr. CALL. Then I call for the regular order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The introduction of bills is still in order.

Mr. MARTIN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. LINDSAY submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

COAST FISHERIES OF FLORIDA.

Mr. PASCO submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Fisheries:

Resolved, That the Commissioner of Fisheries is hereby directed to make inquiry in reference to the extent, methods, and present condition of the coast fisheries of Florida, more particularly the sponge and oyster fisheries, and to report as to the desirability of establishing a station for investigation, experiment, and fish-culture at some suitable point on the coast.

SALE OF BONDS.

Mr. ALDRICH. I offer a resolution which I send to the desk, and I ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the President of the United States be requested, if not incompatible with the public interests, to send to the Senate a copy of the contract recently entered into between the Treasury Department and the representatives of certain banking houses for the sale of United States bonds.

Mr. VEST. I object to the consideration of the resolution.

Mr. ALDRICH. I hope the Senator will not object to its consideration.

Mr. VEST. It will lead to considerable debate.

Mr. ALDRICH. There will be no discussion whatever, if the Senator will withdraw his objection.

Mr. VEST. The Senator is mistaken.

Mr. HOAR (to Mr. ALDRICH). Ask unanimous consent.

Mr. ALDRICH. I ask unanimous consent.

Mr. VEST. I object.

Mr. ALDRICH. Will the Senator object to the passage of the resolution if it leads to no discussion?

Mr. VEST. It will lead to discussion; I desire to say something about it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection being made, the resolution will go over under the rule, and be printed.

HOUR OF MEETING.

Mr. GORMAN submitted the following resolution, which was read:

Resolved, That on and after Friday, the 15th day of February, 1895, and until otherwise ordered, the daily sessions of the Senate shall begin at 11 o'clock a. m., and the morning hour shall terminate at the expiration of one hour thereafter.

Mr. GORMAN. Let the resolution lie on the table.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask that it go over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution goes over under the rule.

THE EVERGLADES OF FLORIDA.

Mr. PLATT submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to inform the Senate whether it is proposed to issue a patent to the State of Florida for that portion of the State known as the "Everglades," and, also, whether the Semole Indians of Florida will be thereby dispossessed of their occupancy of said lands or any portion thereof.

JOSEPH M'GUCKIAN.

Mr. GRAY submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That Joseph McGuckian be placed on the messenger roll of the Senate at a salary of $600 per annum, to be paid monthly out of the contingent fund of the Senate, and that he be assigned to one of the committees of the Senate now without a messenger.

CHICKAMAUGA NATIONAL MILITARY PARK.

The VICE-PRESIDENT appointed Mr. PALMER, Mr. PASCO, Mr. MILLS, Mr. PROCTOR, Mr. SQUIRE, and Mr. PEPPER as the committee on the part of the Senate under the concurrent resolution of the two Houses providing for the appointment of a joint committee to prepare and report to their respective Houses for consideration a plan for the proper participation of Congress in the dedication of the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Military Park, on September 19 and 20 next.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 5234) for the relief of James Stewart was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The bill (H. R. 8401) for the relief of Elizabeth J. Cook, of Arkadelphia, Clark County, Ark., widow of Robert T. Cook, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

The bill (H. R. 8767) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Mr. PROCTOR submitted the following report:

R. 3740) incorporating the Society of American Florists, having met after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate and agree to the same, amended as follows:

In lieu of the words struck out insert the words, "by purchase, and such other estate as may be donated or bequeathed to it;" and the Senate agree to the same.

M. W. RANSOM.

W. A. PEPPER.

REDFIELD PROCTOR,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

W. H. HATFIELD.

W. S. FORMAN.

Managers on the part of the House.

The report was concurred in.

INCOME RETURNS FOR 1894.

Mr. VEST. Yesterday I reported from the Committee on Finance a joint resolution relative to extending the time for making returns under the income-tax law, and was instructed by that committee to urge its consideration. It is a matter of very great importance to the taxpayers of the country, and if action is had it must be had now, as the Senate knows. There are some amendments which the committee think are necessary. I ask the Senate, therefore, to take up that joint resolution and consider it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. CALL. I ask the Senator from Missouri if the joint resolution will provoke any debate?

Mr. VEST. I think not.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution (H. Res. 273) extending from March 1, 1895, to the 15th day of April, 1895, the time for making returns of income for the year 1894.

Mr. BERRY. I suggest that the joint resolution was read in full yesterday.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution was read yesterday, and unless its reading is called for it will not be read now. The amendments reported by the committee will be stated.

and convicted of murder, but are now standing a new trial because of the demand of the honorable, the Secretary of the Interior; that on their former trial they were informed by an unconstitutionally jury. They were not allowed to have any evidence whatever. They were even refused the right to address the jury in their own behalf. They practically were denied the right of appeal. They were informed by the court in the beginning of the trial, that in case of death on them that they need expect no delay by appeal or otherwise, and they were sentenced to prompt execution; your petitioners further represent that the court on appeal in this case, the case of the Indian, was actually sentenced and shot, not in accordance with law, through the heart, but through the right side, and was then smothered to death by holding his nostrils and forcibly pressing a handkerchief over the mouth, causing a hideous and cruel death.

Your petitioners are deeply apprehensive of similar treatment and they implore the Government of the United States that the constitutional right of a fair trial shall be secured to them as provided by the Choctaw treaty, and that the right of appeal may be provided from a Choctaw court to the United States court where the judges are free from ignorance, prejudice or malice. Your petitioners humbly pray this measure of justice at the hands of the great parent Government in the name of humanity and in the name of God.

Your very humble servants.

Signed by several of the persons who are under indictment.

Mr. President, I wish to say that I believe if all the facts relating to that trial and the execution of that Indian were known they would shock the civilized world. I have here a little photograph [exhibiting] which was taken by an amateur photographer of the scene of the death of the Indian who was executed. It is claimed, and I believe truly, that one of the leading opponents of the political party to which the Indian sentenced to death belonged requested the privilege of shooting the Indian condemned, and that it was granted to him by the court.

The Choctaw law provides that an Indian who is to be executed shall be shot through the heart. This shooting was done at short range. It is scarcely possible that there was any mistake as to the aim of the party who did the killing; but instead of shooting him through the heart he shot him through the right side, and when he fell upon the ground his feet were held and he was smothered to death in about twenty minutes by the holding of a handkerchief to his nose and mouth. Meanwhile the person who had shot him, who was his enemy, was standing by complacently looking on the scene. It is the most horrible thing in my judgment that has ever occurred in the United States under forms of law. I am happy to say that it did not occur under the forms of law of the United States Government, but of the Choctaw tribe, which calls itself a nation and insists that the United States shall recognize it as a nation.

Mr. GRAY. May I ask the Senator from Connecticut what date is fixed for the executions which have been postponed?

Mr. PLATT. Nine persons were tried for this offense and sentenced under the circumstances which I believe are truly set up in the petition. Upon a representation that they had had no fair trial, that they had not been allowed to be heard even in their own defense, the Secretary of the Interior, without much law I must confess, insisted that there should be a new trial, and I think went so far as to indicate that if it was neglected the prospect of a new trial would be used to excuse the execution. So a new trial was granted by the court, and one person has already been tried the second time. That person was sentenced to death, and was executed, I think, four or five months ago. The Senator from Arkansas may know.

Mr. JONES of Arkansas. It was some time during the fall; in October, I think.

Mr. PLATT. He was executed some time during the fall. The other eight are to be tried by the same court, and they ask that a law be passed by Congress which will allow them an appeal from that court to the United States court.

Mr. CHANDLER. I should like to ask the Senator from Connecticut a question. He says that the trial had not taken place under the United States law. Certainly the United States law permits the existence on the soil of the country of these Indian courts which are engaging in these barbarous methods of conducting what is called justice.

Mr. HALL. I suppose that is by stipulation of treaty.

Mr. PLATT. It is. I can not go into that subject. That will come up for discussion in the Senate in a few days. I trust that some bill will come before the Senate which will result in an appeal from these courts to the United States courts, notwithstanding any treaty which may be supposed to prevent it at the present time.

Mr. GRAY. May I ask the Senator whether the President has any power of commutation or reprieve or interference under those treaties?

Mr. PLATT. If we admit the contention of the Choctaw Nation and the other Five Civilized Tribes neither the Government of the United States nor the Executive has any power whatever except to guarantee that those governments shall exist. This is their contention.

Mr. President, I ask that the petition be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, which has a bill now under consideration which I hope will result in providing for an appeal from those courts.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I wish to say one word about this matter. The Secretary of the Interior intervened in this case very properly, as I think. I consulted him about the matter myself and advised him to intervene and prevent the execution of this Indian and the others who were then threatened with execution, on the ground that they had not had a fair trial. The trial had been an absolute farce, a disgrace even to the semicivilization of the Indian Territory, and a disgrace to the people of the United States that such a condition of affairs should exist within our borders. But undoubtedly the Secretary of the Interior was powerless by law, if the treaties are to be respected and obeyed and he implored, to interfere except in an advisory way. However, he did go so far, and properly too, I think, as to say that no execution should take place under that judgment. Thereupon, as the Senator from Connecticut states, there was a new trial, which undoubtedly was in the proper form and order, and so a condition between the parties than the other, and this Indian was again convicted. The Secretary of the Interior then felt that he had gone as far as he could go and that in that case he would have to allow the Indian law to take its course; and he did allow it. The fault is not the fault of the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. PLATT. Not at all.

Mr. TELLER. No; nobody complains of the Secretary of the Interior. He did everything probably that he could do under the circumstances. He would have done more if authority had been given him. He was alive to the situation and anxious to see that justice was done. The fault lies in our allowing those people, in defiance of the true principles of law, to conduct trials in the way they do. There is a controversy between two factions there. It is utterly impossible that one should have any justice in the courts controlled by the other. Everyone who is acquainted with the Indian character understands that the Indian is a savage creature by nature, and the slight civilization that he has taken on in the Indian Territory has not changed his natural condition and disposition very much.

I agree with the Senator from Connecticut that it has reached a point now where it is the duty of the United States to avoid a disgraceful condition and to provide some method by which the Indian courts shall either be wiped out absolutely and jurisdiction taken from them or that there shall be some provision of law by which either the executive or the judicial branch of the Government should have some review of those so-called courts, which are partial in the extreme and not calculated at any time to do justice to the Indian who is brought before them.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The petition will be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ELECTION OF SENATORS BY THE PEOPLE.

Mr. TURPIE. I ask unanimous consent to call up for consideration the joint resolution (H. Res. 20) proposing an amendment to the Constitution providing that Senators shall be elected by the people of the several States.

Mr. CALL. I am compelled to object, and to call for the regular order. I have a resolution of very great importance to my people which I desire to have considered this morning.

Mr. THE VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection for the present. Bills and joint resolutions are next in order.

Mr. PERKINS. I desire to introduce a bill.

Mr. TURPIE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. BATE. Let us get through with the morning business.

Mr. MANDERSON. I hope the Senator from Indiana will withhold his motion for the present.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator from Indiana that his motion can not be entertained until after the routine morning business is closed.

FORD'S THEATER DISASTER.

Mr. MANDERSON. Mr. President, by the sundry civil appropriation act of last year there was appointed a special joint committee of the two Houses of Congress on the Ford's Theater disaster. I am directed by that committee to report an amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill providing for the payment of $5,000 in each case to the heirs or legal representatives of all persons who were instantly killed or who evidently died as the result of injuries received at that time.

I desire to say that all who have died as the result of their injuries have had their claims investigated and are included in this amendment, except the heirs of George Christopher Bollinger and Lydia P. Reynolds.

The cases of those injured are being investigated by the joint committee, but it is very evident that nothing can be done in their cases until the next session of Congress. The inclination of the committee will be to continue its work during the vacation, and I earnestly hope at the next session of Congress that the committee, without members may compose it, will be able finally to close this matter.

I make this statement because I know that many Senators have constituents who are interested in the matter, and we are all receiving numerous letters and applications concerning it. I hope the Committee on Appropriations will be prompt to act favorably on this amendment, and at least pay those who have lost their support by the death of their fathers or husbands.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be referred to the Committee on Appropriations in the absence of objection.

PACIFIC COAST STATE CLAIMS.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I am instructed by the Committee on Claims to report back favorably an amendment referred to that committee, with the recommendation that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations. The amendment proposes to pay the States of California, Oregon, and Nevada the amount of money paid by those States in the suppression of rebellion, as shown by the report of the Secretary of War, Executive Document No. 11, Fifty-first Congress, first session.

I will state, in a word, that these claims have been very thoroughly investigated by the Secretary of War, the investigation occupying some two years. A bill was introduced heretofore in the Senate and favorably reported from the Committee on Military Affairs on this subject and passed the Senate at the last Congress. Another bill on the subject has been favorably reported from the committee, and is now on the Calendar of the Senate.

I ask that the amendment be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, without printing, as the bill is now under consideration, and I hope that committee will insert it in the sundry civil appropriation bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That reference will be made in the absence of objection.

Mr. STEWART. I think the amendment reported by the Senator from Oregon had better be printed. We may want copies of it.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Very well; I have no objection to the printing of the document.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be printed, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

TAXES UPON DISTILLED SPIRITS.

Mr. LODGE. I offer a resolution which I send to the desk, and I ask for its present consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be instructed to inform the Senate what the present estimate is of the return from the internal revenue tax upon distilled spirits, and whether he has any reason to believe that there will be any reduction of the revenue from this source on account of the closing of distilleries and the revenue he has any information that would lead him to suppose that there will be any considerable and consequent reduction of the revenue on this tax in the next calendar year.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. CALL. I make no objection, but I desire to give notice that if there is any debate on the resolution I shall insist on the regular order.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

LOUISIANA OR HONDURAS LOTTERY COMPANY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If there be no further concurrent or other resolutions the Chair lays before the Senate a resolution submitted by the Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL], coming over from a previous day, which will be read:

The Secretary read the resolution submitted by Mr. CALL on the 9th instant, as follows:

Resolved, by the Senate, That a special committee be and is hereby organized, who shall be charged with the duty of investigating and reporting to the Senate whether the Louisiana or Honduras Lottery Company, which was organized and is now operating in the United States, and in the Territories and the District of Columbia, is in violation of the laws of the United States, and if so, what steps should be taken to prevent its operation.

The committee shall also inquire and report whether any of the persons or corporations that the committee shall find to be in violation of the laws of the United States, or whether any of the persons or corporations that the committee shall find to be in violation of the laws of the United States, have received money for the sale of tickets in the Louisiana or Honduras Lottery Company.

The committee shall also inquire and report whether any of the persons or corporations that the committee shall find to be in violation of the laws of the United States, or whether any of the persons or corporations that the committee shall find to be in violation of the laws of the United States, have received money for the sale of tickets in the Louisiana or Honduras Lottery Company.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. CALL. I move to amend the resolution by striking out all after line 12.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be modified as indicated by the Senator from Florida.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Let us hear the proposed amendment, Mr. President.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask for the reading of the resolution as the Senator modifies it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read as modified.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, by the Senate, That a special committee be and is hereby organized, who shall be charged with the duty of investigating and reporting to the Senate whether the Louisiana or Honduras Lottery Company, which was organized and is now operating in the United States, and in the Territories and the District of Columbia, is in violation of the laws of the United States, and if so, what steps should be taken to prevent its operation.

The committee shall also inquire and report whether any of the persons or corporations that the committee shall find to be in violation of the laws of the United States, or whether any of the persons or corporations that the committee shall find to be in violation of the laws of the United States, have received money for the sale of tickets in the Louisiana or Honduras Lottery Company.

The committee shall also inquire and report whether any of the persons or corporations that the committee shall find to be in violation of the laws of the United States, or whether any of the persons or corporations that the committee shall find to be in violation of the laws of the United States, have received money for the sale of tickets in the Louisiana or Honduras Lottery Company.

Mr. CALL. I ask leave to insert in the RECORD a letter from the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in the District of Columbia, in behalf of himself and the clergy of the country in support of this resolution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection. The Chair hears none, and it will be so ordered.

The letter referred to is as follows:

HONORABLE SENATOR FROM FLORIDA: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 10th inst. and in reply to inform you that the same has been forwarded to the proper authorities for their consideration. I am, Sir, very respectfully,
Yours very truly,
W. C. CALL.

Respectfully,
W. C. CALL.

Attended by the President and Mrs. Cleveland
To Senator W. C. CALL.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Mr. President, it is so clearly proper that some reference should be made of this resolution and the proposed amendment, that I now move to refer the resolution submitted by the Senator from Florida as it is proposed to be amended to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. CALL. I hope that motion will not prevail. It is evidently intended in the interest of the Honduras Lottery Company. [Laughter.] It is not intended, Mr. President, for the purpose of ascertaining anything in regard to the subject.

Mr. BLACKBURN. If the Senator will allow me, I never heard of the Honduras Lottery Company and care as little about it as I do about the resolution. It is not bothering me half as much as the resolution is bothering the Senate and interfering with the public business. I am perfectly willing to change my motion, if it will please the Senator from Florida, and send the resolution to the Committee on Post-Offices or to the Committee on Revolutionary Claims or to the Private Land Claims Committee, or to perdition. [Laughter.]

Mr. CALL. Mr. President—

Mr. CHANDLER. Will the Senator allow me a serious word?

Mr. CALL. In one moment.

The Senator from Kentucky, in all his action upon this subject, whether he intends that or not, has been promoting the interests of the lottery company and its operations in the United States. He may think, contrary to the opinion of the great mass of the religious people, contrary to the opinion of all right-thinking people, that the operations of this great corporation are beneficial, and desire to encourage them, and all these motions for reference are to that end and for that purpose.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, I wish to state to the Senator from Kentucky that the Senator from Florida has so modified this resolution that I think there will be no objection to its passage. I know the only object the Senator from Kentucky had in making his motion was to remove the resolution from the way of the pending appropriation bill, which the Senator desires to have considered.

Mr. BLACKBURN. That is all I want.

Mr. CALL. There is no appropriation bill now before the Senate.

Mr. CHANDLER. If the Senate is ready to vote upon the adoption of the resolution, I hope the Senator from Kentucky will give us an opportunity for that vote.

Mr. GORMAN and others. Question!

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Kentucky to refer the pending resolution to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Mr. CALL. On that I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COKE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH].

Mr. McLAURIN (when his name was called). I transfer my general pair with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON] to the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. IRBY] and vote 'yea.'

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin. Has the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CARRY] voted? Mr. President?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. He has not voted.

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin. I am paired with that Senator, and withhold my vote.

Mr. PASCO. I am paired with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. PRITCHARD]. In his absence I withhold my vote.

Mr. CAFFERY. I am paired with the Senator from Montana [Mr. POWER] who is absent. Not knowing how he would vote if present, I withhold my vote.

Mr. MCPHERSON (after having voted in the affirmative). I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HIGGINS], and therefore withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 16, nays 35; as follows:

So the Senate refused to refer the resolution to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Mr. FAULKNER. I move to strike out all that part of the resolution referring to elections for members of Congress. I do not see myself that the Senate has anything to do with that matter.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from West Virginia offers an amendment to the resolution, which will be stated.

Mr. ALDRICH. Let the resolution be first read as modified by the Senator from Florida, that we may understand it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution as modified by the Senator from Florida will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution of Mr. CALL as modified.

Mr. FAULKNER. Now, let my amendment be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from West Virginia will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out of the resolution the following:

The committee shall also inquire whether the Louisiana or Honduras Company, its owners, managers, directors, or agents, have entered into a combination with any person or persons or corporations for the control of the elections for members of Congress.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, I hope the Senate will not agree to the amendment proposed by the Senator from West Virginia. I do not care to address the Senate at length upon that subject, but it is manifest that the Senator from West Virginia had no real purpose in this amendment which is beneficial in the country. No one questions that if these great foreign corporations can exercise influences here, not in Congress, but in the United States, affecting the election of members of Congress, it is within the province and the duty of every member of Congress to see that a foreign corporation, composed of a few individuals, shall not here in our country by the use of money and corrupt means endeavor to corrupt the suffrage of the country. What a proposition is that for the Senator from West Virginia to make here in the presence of the fact that the whole moral and religious sentiment of this country has been directed against the powerful influences of this corporation in this particular direction. I hope that no consideration will be given to the amendment.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, the Senator from Florida, in that part of the resolution which is not included in the amendment offered by the Senator from West Virginia, will arrive at every practical result which it is possible for the Senate or for the House of Representatives to deal with in the way of legislation. If the Senator from Florida desires to put upon the country an investigation of political affairs, those that concern his election or the election of his colleague or the election of members of the House of Representatives, and to have committees sent out from this body to investigate into the political conditions of Florida, in my opinion he is violating the best interests of the people of the United States, and is assuming for this body a jurisdiction which is denied, and which is denied upon high authority. If the Senator desires to bring that subject now before the Senate of the United States, and to have it investigated upon its merits and upon the constitutional foundation on which he seeks to rest it, I notify him that he will have a long time to work before he will get his resolution through this body.

This Senate has something else to do besides involving itself in personal quarrels between politicians in Florida or anywhere else. Our time, so precious now to the welfare of this whole country, ought not to be absorbed by these personal quarrels and difficulties which are necessarily involved in such inquiries as are now launched before the Senate.

The Senator from Florida may think, Mr. President, that he will get some accessions of strength from politicians in this body by bringing in that feature of this resolution and by taking the advice of gentlemen who are continually assisting him in trying to get this country involved in political turmoil for the mere purpose of obstructing the welfare and real interest and business of the people; but he will find that he is mistaken. He can not accomplish that result in this body at this time, because, if a filibuster against the general progress of business is to be inaugurated here, if this Senate and the House of Representatives are to be clogged and fettered in this moment of great anxiety on the part of the people of the United States by bringing forward these personal quarrels and personal political quarrels, I notify Senators that they must take the responsibility and that they can not carry their measures into effect.

Mr. CALL. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

Mr. CALL. I will consent to modify the resolution in the way suggested.

Mr. MORGAN. Very good. Then I will vote for the resolution.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Let the resolution be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution as modified will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate. That a special committee be, and is hereby, created, who shall be charged with the duty of inquiring and reporting to the Senate whether the Louisiana or Honduras Lottery Company has been established and is now operating in the United States and is engaged in business therein and in the use of the mails and of the interstate-commerce corporations or companies in violation of the laws of the United States.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. President, I heartily sympathize with the remarks which were made by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN]. I did not suppose that this resolution was seriously considered by anybody, except for the purpose of obstructing public business, and I do not believe now, except by the Senator from Florida himself, that anybody seriously contemplates that this trial chase as this resolution, if adopted, would devolve upon us to engage in.

Of what value would be the first part of the resolution as the resolution has been emasculated? We have a law of the United States, which we passed three years ago, providing that it shall be a crime for any person to engage in the business of a lottery or for persons to buy tickets or for persons to sell tickets, and we went so far as to make it an indictable offense in the city of New Orleans for a person in the city of Washington to put a letter in the mails to purchase a lottery ticket which should be received and taken out of the mail in New Orleans. We punish the sender and receiver. Our Committee on Appropriations has reported bills appropriating money, and they have been passed, authorizing the Post-Office Department to punish just such crimes as we are now seeking to investigate.

Our laws are as rigid as laws can be. Congress through its Appropriations Committee has given the Department sufficient funds to wipe out the lottery business. It would be just as simple and just as wise, it seems to me, for Congress to appoint a special committee to determine whether or not stealing is still going on in violation of law, or for Congress to investigate whether or not the crime of arson is being committed in the Western States, or whether or not any other thing forbidden by law is being done.

If somebody can show me what we are to gain by the passage of a resolution like this, I shall be very glad to vote for it. I can not understand what the Senator from Florida can hope to gain by the passage of a resolution which simply appoints at great expense to the people of this country—for this means the drawing out of the contingent fund of ten or fifteen thousand dollars to investigate—

Mr. ALDRICH. As I understand the resolution, no money can be expended under it.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Oh, Mr. President, we all know that at the close of a session of a Congress a resolution is slid through, giving every one of these committees the right to sit during the recess, and the first man who in his race can reach the Secretary of the Senate and file his lien on the contingent fund is the man whose committee does the business; and it is nothing but a struggle from the last hour of the session to see what committee can get public money to expend on these investigations, 90 per cent of which are useless, and 90 per cent of which are intended to be useless. If Senators want to go West, it is to investigate Alaska or the Indians; if they want to take some other trip, it is to investigate some other matter.

This resolution is to investigate whether or not the laws are being disobeyed when there are laws upon the statute book defining the penalty for the commission of the offense.

If we are to gain anything by the investigation I stand ready to vote for it; but if it be merely that we are to put ourselves upon record against this resolution for fear that we may be charged with favoring lotteries—if there is some false sentimentality to be brought in to influence our votes, that is another thing.

But, Mr. President, it is idle and it is wicked if we are trying to give the public money to what we should embark on a wild-goose investigation, which is supposed to be followed by an appropriation of several thousand dollars, to investigate by a solemn committee of Senators that which the ordinary postal agents of the Department at $150 a month are better able and better competent to investigate than any committee of this body.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution as modified.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, I desire to submit a few observations on the resolution. The propositions of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT] are evidently and entirely unreasonable. He maintains that because there is a law it does not need to be amended, and because there is a law that there is no necessity, whatever may be the magnitude of the evil, and however existing law may fail to afford a remedy for additional legislation to suppress it. These are the propositions which the Senator from Colorado propounds to the Senate and the people. They have no foundation in reason. They do not relate to the subject. The proposition upon which the resolution is submitted is this: A great, powerful corporation took possession of one of the States of this Union. It extended its operations throughout the United States. It used the mail facilities.

The Congress of the United States, in obedience to public sentiment and in aid of the people of Louisiana, passed certain laws for the purpose of suppressing that evil. The evil still exists under another name and with a domicile in a foreign country. The Senator from Colorado knows that evil in its entire magnitude in the State of Louisiana has been reproduced elsewhere in the United States. Of what avail, then, with his intelligence that he should make a man of straw to knock down? The proposition on which this resolution rests is one that every intelligent man in the United States knows to be true, and these attempts to cover it with ridicule only reflect ridicule upon those who make them. The purpose of this opposition is to protect that great, powerful corporation in its influence upon the public policy and the laws of the United States, and there can be no other.

Mr. President, I hope the Senate, in obedience to the public sentiment of all right-thinking people of every party, will pass the resolution and let us ascertain what are the facts in regard to the matter. Let us ascertain whether this great foreign corporation, composed of a few citizens of the United States and of foreign countries, under the shelter of a foreign domicile is reproducing all the public evils which it created in the State of Louisiana, and if it is, whether we have or have not the power to suppress it by proper legislation. I ask for the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Mr. President—

Mr. TELLER. Let us have a vote on the resolution.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I move that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of the bill making appropriations for the support of the postal service for the next fiscal year.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. CALL. I hope that motion will not prevail.

Mr. BLACKBURN. It is not debatable.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The motion is not debatable.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I object to any debate.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 4693) for the promotion of anatomical science, and to prevent the desecration of graves in the District of Columbia; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 444) making the surveyor of the District of Columbia a salaried officer, and to provide for more efficient service in the surveyor's office, with amendments; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bill and joint resolution; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (H. R. 8563) to adopt special rules for the navigation of harbors, rivers, and shallow waters of the United States, except the Great Lakes and their connecting and tributary waters as far east as Montreal, supplementary to the act of August 19, 1890, entitled "An act to adopt regulations for preventing collisions at sea;" and

A joint resolution (H. Res. 140) to confirm the enlargement of the Red Cliff Indian Reservation in the State of Wisconsin, made in 1863, and for the allotment of the same.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 4693) for the promotion of anatomical science and to prevent the desecration of graves in the District of Columbia was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN] that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the Post-Office appropriation bill.

Mr. CALL and Mr. GEORGE called for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COKE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLBE].

Mr. McLAURIN (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON] to the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. IRBY], and vote "yes."

The roll call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 43, nays 14; as follows:

So the motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8372) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896.

Mr. VILAS. I wish to put the amendment which I caused to be read yesterday and intended to offer in proper shape for a vote. I therefore move it as a substitute for the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN] to the amendment of the committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair suggests to the Senator from Wisconsin that he withdrew yesterday the amendment he had proposed.

Mr. VILAS. The amendment was read yesterday for the purpose of bringing the subject before the Senate, but it was not formally offered. I desire now formally to offer it as an amendment by way of a substitute for the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kentucky.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin will be read.

The SECRETARY. After the word "dollars," in line 16, on page 4, insert:

And the Postmaster-General is hereby authorized and directed, instead of leasing from time to time as the conditions of the service will permit, to procure by purchase the necessary postal cars required by the service on all his lines, and thereafter to cause the same to be provided with all needful supplies, to be kept in good order and repair, and to be drawn and operated upon any railroad which shall, under his direction, be engaged in mail transportation, and for such operation to pay the rate now provided by law for mail transportation by railroads; and every company, corporation, receiver, or other person operating any railroad which is a mail route of the United States shall transport such cars accordingly upon and in connection with all such of its regular trains as the Postmaster-General shall direct; and the Postmaster-General may, in his discretion, make purchase of such post-office cars directly from any owner thereof without advertisement, or may contract for the construction of the same; and may also make contracts for the repair, cleaning and repair of such cars with any company, corporation, or persons, or may make other provision therefor; for which purpose he may use any part of the foregoing sum or such further sum as may be found necessary, not exceeding $300,000.

Mr. VILAS. Mr. President, I wish to add a little more to what I said yesterday in answer to the suggestion made by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] as to whether any change proposed by the amendment I have offered would be likely to interrupt mail service. I wish to call the attention of the Senator from Massachusetts to a very interesting and I think a very able report made to the Senate at the suggestion made by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] in the year 1874.

Mr. HOAR. If the Senator will excuse me, will he repeat what he said?

Mr. VILAS. I was calling attention to the inquiry which the Senator from Massachusetts made yesterday as to the likelihood of an interruption of the mail service if a change were made of this kind. I desire to read a brief extract from a very interesting and able report made by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MITCHELL] on this general subject in the year 1874, and I call attention to the language used with respect to the power of Congress over these roads. Let me say that the report is Senate Report No. 73, Forty-third Congress, first session.

Indeed companies thus formed and engaged in the general business of transportation are quasi-public corporations. There are reciprocal obligations existing between them and the public and between them and the Government. They have rights the public and the Government are bound to protect, and the Government has the power to impose upon them when they are engaged in the service of the public the same restrictions and regulations as are imposed against a corporation for the exercise of their chartered privileges. The Government can compel them to transport the public mails, and they may not refuse; but in complying it is by virtue of an implied contract that such reasonable and just compensation shall be paid for such services equaling in amount what is usually paid to such companies for service of like nature by their best and most-favored customer. In this respect the Government and the public individually stand precisely upon the same footing.

The word "precisely" is italicized in the report—and the railroad companies are bound to accord to each the same privileges of transportation, both as to time and compensation, and are prohibited as a rule, under penalty of forfeiture of their chartered rights on judicial condemnation, from exercising special privileges in respect to such services. Upon the other hand, the Government may not rightfully sue to the railroad companies. "You must transport the public mails on such terms as to compensation as we (the Government) may demand for such service." Upon the other hand, one and not equal to that paid by the most-favored patrons to such companies or themselves. But it may, through its Congress, authorize the Post-Office Department to demand of the companies for the transportation of its mails upon payment of what is a reasonable compensation, or a reasonable rate to that paid by other parties for services of a like nature.

The conclusion of the committee is stated in the following words:

Without inquiring, therefore, at this point into the expediency of the exercise of such a right, your committee are clearly of the opinion that Congress has the right, in the exercise of its power, to establish postal cars and post-offices.

First. To take absolutely, on paying just compensation therefor, without the consent of the owners of the cars, such cars as shall be used in the service of the public use of the transportation of the mails within the United States for the public use of the transportation of the mails at the same rate as the United States mail.

Second. To regulate the temporary use of any such cars and equipment on the terms of a lease or purchase.

The particular manner in which this may rightfully be done depends, of course, on the forms that may be prescribed by Congress whereby the just compensation to be paid may be judicially determined and its payment provided for.

I call attention to that for the purpose of showing that a committee of this body, after careful examination, has established the conclusion of the right of Congress to order it. I shall only observe further with reference to this point that the railroads of the United States have in notable instances received the favor, protection, and assistance of the United States for the reason that they were mail carriers; but recently the greatest interruption of commerce perhaps occurred in this country, and the peace of the country was practically suppressed by the action of the Government bringing its suits in the Federal courts to enforce the transportation of the mails. Is it to be conceived that a railroad company which, as I pointed out in one instance yesterday, enjoys the transportation of the mails at a cost to the Government of $50,000 per year for each car employed by the company—

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FAULKNER in the chair). Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. VILAS. Certainly; only I beg to say that yesterday my time was consumed all day by interruptions and I do not want to take much time to-day.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Does the Senator take into consideration the element of hauling cars?

Mr. VILAS. These 50 cars are used for the greater part on one train. The greater share of the transportation is on the fast mail train between New York and Chicago. I called attention yesterday to the fact that the compensation paid the New York Central road from New York to Chicago for the use of 50 cars exceeds $2,500,000 a year, a rate of over $50,000 per car. It is needless to say that there is no other car probably run on that road which earns any such sum of money.

Mr. MITCHELL. May I be permitted to add, but I merely wish to call attention to this point with respect to the question of the Senator from Massachusetts.

Now, I wish to say with regard to what the Senator from Iowa [Mr. ALLISON] called attention to yesterday, that he was entirely right when he brought forward the statute of 1873. As I expressed some doubt about it at that time I wish to be particular to withdraw that suggestion and now state the fact as the Senator from Iowa has stated it. He is correct that the transportation of the mails by weight was for the first time fixed by the statute of 1873. The fact which was upon my mind and which led me to doubt the correctness of that idea was that some of the railroad companies had refused to draw the postal cars at the rates of transportation which they were paid. But they were not then paid by weight. They had been paid under an arrangement of the Postmaster-General, by which certain roads were entitled to $300 a mile and others to $300 a mile, and so on; and the inequality in respect to weight was so great that upon 15 roads which received each of them $300 a mile the maximum range in weight was from 267 pounds on the lightest to 19,138 pounds of daily service on the heaviest. Therefore, in 1873 that arrangement was made which the Senator from Iowa called attention to yesterday.

I desire also to call the Senator's attention to the fact that it does not in reality alter the force of the objection which I have pointed out. It is proper to say that this special payment for postal cars is an injustice to the greater number of the railroad

Mr. HALE. There is a point of order raised on the amendment of the committee.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. A point of order has been raised on the amendment of the committee, and the point of order is submitted to the Senate, under the rules.

Mr. VILAS. The point of order was—

Mr. ALDRICH. Let the amendment be read.

Mr. VILAS. I was going to observe that a point of order can not properly lie upon my amendment because it has been reported by a committee.

Mr. MITCHELL, of Oregon. The point of order is against the amendment of the committee, which is in the bill.

Mr. VILAS. My amendment is a substitute for the proposition of the committee.

Mr. HALE. Let us have the amendment of the committee read, and then that question can be submitted.

Mr. PALMER. May I inquire if the question is whether the amendment proposed by the committee is in order?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That is the question.

Mr. PALMER. It is not upon the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin can be moved again as an independent proposition. The amendment of the committee will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After the word "dollars" in line 16, page 4, the Committee on Appropriations report to insert:

Said sum shall be expended under the direction and in the discretion of the Postmaster-General; and any provision of existing law in conflict herewith is hereby repealed: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be expended for the purchase of postal cars or for special facilities on fast-mail trains.

Mr. PASCO. I understood that that amendment had been modified by the Senator from Kentucky so as to avoid the repealing features of the amendment; and it strikes me that that is the amendment before the Senate, and not the one which has been read by the Secretary.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that an objection to the modification was interposed by a Senator on the left of the Chair.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I did not understand that any objection was interposed to the submission of the modified amendment. On the contrary, I think the senior Senator from Nebraska expressly disclaimed any purpose of objecting to it.

Mr. MANDERSON. My proposition was that the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kentucky could not be entertained until the point of order against the committee's amendment was disposed of; that the point of order must first be disposed of before the modified amendment could be offered by the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Then let us understand each other. There is no amendment pending before the Senate except the one printed in italics, submitted by the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MANDERSON. That is the amendment against which the point of order was raised.

Mr. BLACKBURN. And the question is whether the proposed amendment of the committee is in order, and the modification submitted by me is not before the Senate.

Mr. MANDERSON. It is not. That will come in afterwards.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Very well.

Mr. PASCO. I wish to ask if the Senator from Kentucky has not the right under our rules to modify his amendment.

Mr. ALDRICH. Not the committee amendment.

Mr. LODGE. Not the committee amendment.

Mr. HARRIS. He would have that right if it was in his own amendment.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I understand any Senator has a right to modify his own amendment, but I do not understand that under the rules, even though a Senator, as in this case, is in charge of the bill, he has a right to modify a committee amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That is the decision of the Chair.

Mr. HARRIS. I wish to ask the Senator from Kentucky if the proposed modification is made by direction of the committee or is it his own?

Mr. BLACKBURN. It was made only by the advice of some members of the committee with whom I had an opportunity to consult.

Mr. HARRIS. But it was not the action of the committee?

Mr. BLACKBURN. No, it is my own.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Senators who are of the opinion that the amendment of the committee is in order will say "aye." [Putting the question.]

Mr. BLACKBURN. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COKE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH]. If he were here I should vote "yea."

Mr. CULLOM (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY], but yesterday he did not know that he would be absent from the Senate to-day and authorized me to vote without reference to the pair. I do not know how he would vote on this question; I vote "nay."

Mr. FAULKNER (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON]. I understand that if he were present he would vote "nay." I should vote "yea."

Mr. MCCLAIR (when his name was called). I will transfer my pair with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON] to the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. IRBY] and vote "yea."

Mr. COKE (when Mr. MILL'S name was called). My colleague [Mr. MILL'S] is absent, detained at home by sickness.

Mr. MC MILLAN (when Mr. WOLCOTT'S name was called). The junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT] desired me to state that he was unexpectedly called out of the Chamber; and he is paired with the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRUCE].

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. MORGAN (after having voted in the affirmative). I withdraw my vote. I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY].

Mr. CAMDEN. I am paired with the junior Senator from Iowa [Mr. MILLER].

Mr. BATE (after having voted in the affirmative). I find that I am paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON], who is absent from his seat, and I withdraw my vote.

Mr. SQUIRE. I am paired with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL], but by an arrangement with his colleague [Mr. HUNTON] my pair has been transferred to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES]. Therefore, I am at liberty to vote. I vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 17, nays 39; as follows:

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senate decides that the amendment of the committee is not in order.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I ask whether the amendment that I submitted day before yesterday, and which was to be considered as pending, is not now before the Senate as the first amendment to be acted upon?

Mr. MANDERSON. It can be offered.

Mr. ALDRICH. It can be offered.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I offered it day before yesterday, and asked that it might be considered as pending a substitute for the committee's amendment, and there was no objection made.

Mr. HALE. I take it the Senator now under the agreement can offer it. It can not be debated. He can offer it and it can be voted upon at once, or any Senator can move to lay it on the table, and of course a point of order can be raised upon it.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I will submit it as an amendment right now.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After the word "dollars," in line 16, page 4, insert:

Said sum shall be expended under the direction and in the discretion of the Postmaster-General: Provided, That a reduction of not less than 10 per cent shall be made upon present rates of compensation; And provided, also, That no part of the said sum shall be expended for the purchase of postal cars.

Mr. VILAS. Now I will offer the amendment I proposed as a substitute for the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. HALE. Let it be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The substitute offered by the Senator from Wisconsin will be read.

The SECRETARY. Insert after the word "dollars," in line 16, page 4:

And the Postmaster-General is hereby authorized and directed, instead of lessing from time to time as the conditions of the service will permit, to procure by purchase the necessary post-offices such required by the service on any and all lines, and thereafter to cause the same to be provided with all necessary supplies, to be kept in good order and repair, and to be drawn and operated upon any railroad which shall, under his direction, be engaged in mail transportation, and for such operation to pay the rates now provided for the mail transportation by railroad for the every company, corporation, receiver, or other person operating any railroad which is a mail route of the United States shall transport such cars accordingly upon and in connection with all such of its regular trains the Postmaster-General shall direct; and the Postmaster-General may, in his discretion, make purchase of such post-offices such directly from any owner thereof without advertisement, may contract for the construction of the same; and may also make contracts for the supply, cleaning, and repair of such cars with any company, corporation, or persons, or may make other provision therefor; for what purpose he may require any part of the foregoing sum or such further sum as may be found necessary, not exceeding $500,000.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS] to the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN].

MR. HALE. I move to lay the amendment to the amendment on the table, and on that I call for the yeas and nays.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Maine to lay the proposed substitute on the table.

MR. HOAR. And the whole amendment.

MR. ALDRICH. The amendment and the substitute.

MR. BLACKBURN. Under the rule, the laying of an amendment in the nature of a substitute upon the table does not affect the amendment.

MR. HALE. I move to lay the substitute on the table.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair was submitting that question to the Senate. Is the demand for the yeas and nays seconded?

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

MR. COKE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH].

MR. McLAURIN. I transfer for the day my general pair with the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. DIXON] to the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. HAY], and vote "nay."

MR. MORGAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY].

The roll call was concluded.

MR. McMILLAN. I again announce the pair of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT] with the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICE].

MR. BURROWS. I am paired with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. GIBSON], but I am advised that, if present, he would vote in the affirmative, and I therefore vote "yea."

MR. CHANDLER. My colleague [Mr. GALLINGER] is absent from the Senate, sick. He is paired with the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. MILLS], who is also absent, sick.

MR. BATE (after having voted in the affirmative). I am paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON], and as I understand on this vote, if present, he would vote the same way I do, I will let my vote stand.

MR. PERKINS. I desire to state that my colleague [Mr. WHITE] is unavoidably absent temporarily from the Senate. He is paired with the senior Senator from Idaho [Mr. SHOUF].

MR. HUNTON. I announce to the Senate that my colleague [Mr. DANIEL] is absent and has a general pair with the Senator from Washington [Mr. SQUIRE]. If my colleague were here he would vote "yea" upon this question. The Senator from Washington under the circumstances is at liberty to vote, as he agrees with my colleague on this question.

MR. MITCHELL of Oregon. I desire to state that my colleague [Mr. DOLPH], if here, would vote "yea" upon the proposition. He is detained from the Senate.

The result was announced—yeas 51, nays 10; as follows:

So the amendment to the amendment was laid on the table.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The question recurs upon the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN].

MR. LODGE. I move to lay that amendment on the table.

MR. HARRIS. Let the amendment be read.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Massachusetts moves to lay the amendment on the table. The amendment will be read.

THE SECRETARY. After the word "dollars" in line 16, on page 4, it is proposed to insert:

Said sum shall be expended under the direction and in the discretion of the Postmaster-General: Provided, That a reduction of not less than 10 per cent shall be made upon the present rates of compensation; and provided also, That no part of said sum shall be expended for the purchase of postal cars.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] to lay the amendment on the table.

MR. ALDRICH. I ask for the yeas and nays on the motion.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

MR. BATE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON], and therefore withhold my vote.

MR. COKE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH].

MR. MORGAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. QUAY].

MR. SQUIRE (when his name was called). I make the announcement once for all for the day, so that there may be no misunderstanding, that I am paired with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL]. His colleague [Mr. HUNTON], however, assures me that the Senator from Virginia, who is absent, if present would vote "yea." I therefore vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

MR. CAMDEN. I am paired with the junior Senator from Iowa [Mr. WILSON].

MR. BURROWS. I am paired with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. GIBSON], but I am advised that he would vote the same way that I shall on this question, and I vote "yea."

So the amendment was laid on the table.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will proceed with the reading of the bill.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 4, after line 24, to strike out:

For necessary and special facilities on trunk lines from Springfield, Mass., by way of New York and Washington, to Atlanta and New Orleans, $200,000; Provided, That no part of the appropriation made by this paragraph shall be expended unless the Postmaster-General shall deem such expenditure necessary in order to promote the interest of the postal service.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection the amendment will be regarded as agreed to.

MR. RANSOM. Mr. President, I do not agree to that amendment.

MR. BLACKBURN. If there be no objection, the Chair stated, the amendment would be regarded as agreed to.

MR. HUNTON. We do not agree to that amendment. I do not care to debate it, but I desire that the amendment of the committee which is under consideration shall be defeated. That amendment is to strike out the following words:

For necessary and special facilities on trunk lines from Springfield, Mass., by way of New York and Washington, to Atlanta and New Orleans, $200,000; Provided, That no part of the appropriation made by this paragraph shall be expended unless the Postmaster-General shall deem such expenditure necessary in order to promote the interest of the postal service.

So the amendment of the committee now before the Senate is to strike out that portion of the bill as it came from the House of Representatives which I have read to the Senate. For one I am opposed to striking out that part of the bill as it came from the other House, and desire to have it remain as that House passed it. It gives $196,614.22 for special and necessary facilities on trunk lines from Springfield, Mass., by way of New York and Washington, to Atlanta and New Orleans.

Mr. President, this appropriation has been in every appropriation bill for the last fifteen years, I am informed by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. RANSOM], and it has been regularly expended by the Postmaster-General for the purpose of increasing the postal facilities from Springfield, Mass., to New Orleans. Every appropriation act which contained this item also contained the words to which I now call the attention of Senators:

Provided, That no part of the appropriation made by this paragraph shall be expended under the Postmaster-General's plan or such expenditure necessary in order to promote the interest of the postal service.

So that if this bill stands as it came from the House of Representatives it leaves the matter entirely discretionary with the Postmaster-General whether he will spend the $196,614.22, or any part of it, in promoting postal facilities between these points. That discretion has been left with the Postmaster-General ever since the appropriation was made fifteen years ago, and the Postmaster-General has exercised it in the same way. That discretion spent the $196,614.22 in increasing the mail facilities between these points. All the Postmasters-General for the last fifteen years having in their discretion spent this money, it is fair to argue that in their opinion it has been deemed necessary to spend annually $196,614.22 in order to increase the mail facilities between these points.

Mr. President, this is an important matter. This mail goes from one end of the country to the other, and facilitates the delivery of the mail all along its route.

That is not all, sir. When this fast mail reaches the city of Richmond, for instance, all points radiating from that city are served with the mail much sooner than they otherwise would be. Therefore, I hope the amendment of the committee striking out this appropriation will not prevail.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Mr. President.

Mr. LODGE. I was going to ask for the yeas and nays upon the amendment.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Mr. President, I shall try not to exceed the limit under the agreement of five minutes to each Senator. I only want to say that there is but one railroad company in this country that is to-day getting any subsidy for special fast mail facilities, and that is the one from Springfield, Mass., through New York and Washington, to Atlanta and New Orleans. That company is getting $196,614.22 every year. That appropriation has never been recommended by the Post-Office Department. For two years in the report of the Postmaster-General the request was made of Congress to abolish it upon the ground that it was a positive detriment instead of a benefit to the service.

Now, I only want to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that we have pending before the Committee on Appropriations applications from other railroad companies insisting that they, too, shall be subsidized if this one is to be. For instance, here is what is known as the Seaboard Air Line. It is a parallel line to the one that is now receiving this subsidy of $196,614.22. There is a difference of less than sixty minutes—about fifty-eight minutes—in the schedule time of these two roads between New York City and Atlanta, Ga., the one getting in round numbers $200,000 a year as a subsidy from the Government, and the other getting nothing.

Mr. BUTLER. The Atlantic Coast Line gets nothing.

Mr. BLACKBURN. The Atlantic Coast Line gets nothing; the Seaboard Air Line gets nothing, and this company gets this $196,614.22.

Mr. GEORGE. In other words, we are paying nearly $200,000 for saving fifty-eight minutes in time.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Yes; we are paying $200,000 in round numbers, or to be exact $196,614.22 for a difference of fifty-eight minutes in the schedule time of the subsidized and the unsubsidized parallel line from New York to Atlanta.

But that is not all that I desire to call to the attention of the Senate. Here is Cincinnati, with an amendment offered by the senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN], asking for $100,000 for special mail facilities on trains going out of that city, if this provision is to stay in the bill. Here is the Seacoast Air Line asking for $100,000 in the same bill. Here is the Louisville and Nashville, here is the city of Louisville asking for $150,000 in order that she may have these special mail facilities supported by subsidy over the two great systems, the Louisville and Nashville and the Queen and Crescent.

Mr. President, it must be admitted that each and everyone of these railroad companies has as much right to this subsidy as the one that is getting it. I have no concern about it. The votes recently taken in this Chamber have sufficed to convince me that it is a very difficult thing, if not an impossible thing, to beat these railroad companies on anything they want. I do not know that we can do it here, but I do insist upon one thing, and that is fairness. Either strike out the subsidy to this line or else put in $200,000 a year in the nature of subsidies to these other lines, whose amendments are pending here, and whose rights and equity are equally as good as those of the company now receiving the subsidy.

Mr. HILL. Will the Senator allow me a moment?

Mr. BLACKBURN. Certainly.

Mr. HILL. Is the provision for the existing fast-mail line from Springfield, Mass., to Atlanta, Ga., found only in appropriation bills?

Mr. BLACKBURN. In the Post-Office appropriation acts only; and it never has been asked for by the Postmaster-General, but he twice has officially reported against it, with the request that it should be abolished, because it was a detriment instead of a benefit to the service.

Mr. FRYE. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. BLACKBURN. With pleasure.

Mr. FRYE. Is this railroad line connected in any way with the steamer lines that run to Cuba and so on?

Mr. BLACKBURN. I do not understand that it is in anywise whatever. The line to which the Senator refers is the Atlantic Coast Line, and the subsidy was taken away two years ago from that line and given to this line. This used to be called the Richmond and Danville system, but they change their name every few days when they get a new receiver, and I believe it is now called the Southern Line.

Mr. BUTLER. The Southern Railway Company.

Mr. BLACKBURN. The Southern Railway Company.

Mr. BATE. They still hold on to the subsidy.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Yes; and they fight for its retention now to the exclusion of all the other railroad lines in this country.

Mr. RANSOM. Mr. President, the Senator from Kentucky makes a speech upon this matter which, taken by itself, might make some impression upon the Senate. A stranger hearing him would suppose that the Post-Office Department for now going on sixteen years had disapproved of this expenditure of money.

Mr. BATE. I am sure that this provision has been made invariably left the expenditure of the money to the discretion of the Postmaster-General if necessary for the proper and advantageous carrying of the mails, and every Postmaster-General of the United States for the last sixteen years has substantially and in effect approved of this appropriation, because each of them has invariably made the expenditure.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Could the Senator be interrupted for a moment to ask a question?

Mr. RANSOM. With great pleasure.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I would ask the Senator whether any Postmaster-General has ever estimated for this service or ever asked Congress to appropriate for it, and whether in two instances in his official report the Postmaster-General has not asked Congress to abolish it?

Mr. RANSOM. It is an old saying, that "actions speak plainer than words." I have not looked through the reports of the Postmasters-General; I have not looked at the estimates; but I see that every year the Postmasters-General have expended the money, while the act declares explicitly that it is in their discretion to expend it, if necessary for the proper and advantageous carrying of the mail. Now, you see what becomes of the Senator's argument upon that branch of the case.

In the next place a man would be almost affected to tears to hear my friend from Kentucky talk about these railroad lines. He mentions the Seaboard Air Line, but he has mixed, if I may say so, the names of these different railroad companies, and he has confounded the Atlantic Coast Line and the Seaboard Air Line with each other. If the Senator from Kentucky will inform himself, as he almost always does, accurately upon these questions, he will see that this appropriation does not exclude the Seaboard Air Line. This provision declares that that line shall be from Springfield via New York and Washington to Atlanta and New Orleans, and both lines neither the one nor the other. He has been assisted by my friend from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER], that the Seaboard Air Line runs from here to Atlanta, and that there is only fifty-eight minutes' difference between them.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Between New York and Atlanta.

Mr. RANSOM. Between Washington and Atlanta—I will correct the Senator again—that line going from here to Atlanta; and it is in the discretion of the Postmaster-General to say whether one line or both lines shall be the same, and the same. Where is the hardship in that? Where is the hardship, sir, when for fourteen years the Atlantic Coast Line—and I wish to say here that it is one of the best lines in the United States—from here to Tampa enjoyed the appropriation for this fast-mail facility, and for the last year it has been given to the Southern Line? Does not my friend from Kentucky see that the Southern Railway Line from here to New Orleans goes right through the bosom of the Southern States—right through the center of Virginia, right through the center of North Carolina, a hundred and odd miles through South Carolina, right through the heart of Georgia, right through Alabama, through Mississippi, and down to New Orleans? Where, let me ask, could a road be constructed which would confer more benefit upon the Southern people by a fast-mail service?

Mr. BUTLER. I suggest to the Senator from North Carolina that it would be fair for him to state that the Seaboard Air Line also penetrates the central portion of his State, the central portion of my State, and the central portion of Georgia to Atlanta.

Mr. RANSOM. Certainly it does.

Mr. BUTLER. So, if that is to be the rule, it would seem to me—

Mr. RANSOM. I shall make no argument against the Seaboard Air Line. I have no purpose to do so. It goes almost by my door, and I travel on it from here to my home. It does good, but let the Postmaster-General decide which line shall have the appropriation, or whether both lines shall have it.

I am not going to make an argument here as to what fifty-eight minutes or an hour between here and Atlanta means in business, but I will make this argument, if I can have the attention of the Senate for a few moments. This fast mail line has been in the fifteen years does incalculable good to the people of the Southern States. It has given life, it has given impulse, it has given facility to business, the extent of which I can not begin to estimate. I have witnessed it myself; I have seen it. Here is a line going right down through the country to New Orleans, its branches radiating off to the mountains on one side and the seaboard on the other. There it is, sir. The simple question is, Shall this facility be kept up for the people of the South or shall it be stopped—shall it be ended?

The VICE-PRESIDENT rapped with his gavel.

Mr. RANSOM. I know my time is up, and I shall not say another word.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, the argument of the Senator from Kentucky in favor of striking out of the bill the provision for this fast mail service consists of one single point, that the appropriation is now given to one railroad line and that all the other railroad lines will come in and ask for a similar subsidy. There is not one syllable in the bill in regard to a railroad line. It simply provides that there shall be a fast mail service between certain specified points, and it is open to the Postmaster-General to give the subsidy to the railroad which can give the best service. There is nothing in the provision giving the money to any particular road—not a word.

I did not know until I heard the matter debated in the Senate what railroads had the contract. I only knew that the fast mail service was of great benefit to the merchants and business men of New England, and it is proposed to abolish this fast mail service between given points because one railroad happens to have the contract. I think that is pretty hard on the large business communities which benefit from the fast mail service. We wish to keep the fast service, and I do not care a straw what railroad gets it so long as we get the fast mail.

Mr. RANSOM. That is right.

Mr. LODGE. It can be given by the Postmaster-General to the railroad that will furnish the best service at the lowest cost. We because it has been given to one line of railroad, which must run over the tracks of a great many companies, it should be necessary to abolish the whole service, I can not see. I hope that, in the interest of all the States through which the fast mail passes and all the great business which is aided by it, the amendment may not prevail.

Mr. BATE. Mr. President, I understand that in the very contract which is made for the carrying of these mails it is provided that the railroads are to transport the mail with the greatest facility with the greatest convenience, and to have the postal cars along for the purpose of facilitating the mails.

I understand there are other roads which make almost the same time from point to point as the one which receives this subsidy, and I can not see the justice of giving to one particular road an advantage of $200,000 simply that we may have the mail a few minutes earlier. I am against it in principle, as I am opposed to bounties.

This is a subsidy, and I am against subsidies. We have numerous railroads in this country which ought to compete with each other, and the advantage should be given to the road which makes the quickest time without the Government stepping in and showing to one a partiality and saying we will give you $200,000 more or less for a rapid rate of delivery of the mail. Fifty-eight minutes, I understand, is the difference in time from here to Atlanta, running through North Carolina. You can see that, of course, from the sentiments uttered by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. RANSOM]. It goes right through the heart of North Carolina. Each one of these roads—

Mr. RANSOM. If my friend will allow me, I know from what he says that the road does not go through Tennessee.

Mr. BATE. It does not, and I voted, as the Senator will find by the RECORD, against the Louisville and Nashville, which runs through my town, being subsidized. I voted against it on principle. I do not care whether the road goes through Tennessee or Kentucky or North Carolina or where it runs. I believe it is wrong; it is wrong in principle. I do not favor the principle of bounties, I do not favor subsidies. This is nothing but a subsidy, and I oppose it upon principle. If Congress is to enter upon this policy, let us do justice and give these other roads which are competitors a fair chance and a reasonable proportion of the subsidy.

Mr. SHERMAN. I desire to offer an amendment. The pending proposition, I understand, is to strike out the clause for a special mail service found on pages 4 and 5. I wish to move an amendment to come in after line 7 on page 5.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I ask the Senator from Ohio whether he would not prefer to withhold the amendment until action shall have been taken upon the committee amendment?

Mr. SHERMAN. I will state the reason why I think I ought not to do that. In the first place, this is an exceptional service which has been continued for a number of years. I have voted for it simply upon the statement of Senators representing the various States that this is an important aid to their postal facilities.

Now, I have the same urgent demand from the people whom I represent, from Cincinnati and Cleveland and other points, and also from Chicago and Kentucky, for a similar service. It is said that a fast-mail service from Cincinnati and Louisville, going through Nashville, Chattanooga, and other places, to New Orleans, would be of infinite service to the business interests of that part of the country, and is just as necessary in every respect as is the mail service provided for in the bill. I am not willing any along the Atlantic Coast unless the same facilities, the same aid, and the same assistance are rendered to a section of the country fully as important in every respect as that along the Atlantic Coast.

Mr. CULLOM. Will the Senator from Ohio allow me to inquire whether he does not think it is better to strike out the provision for necessary and special facilities on this particular line or lines from Springfield, Mass., to New Orleans rather than to enter upon a general effort to secure similar facilities on a half dozen other lines and retain the clause which the committee recommended shall be stricken out? Had we not better get rid of the whole business?

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not wish to get rid of the whole business of increasing our mail facilities.

Mr. CULLOM. Not at all. I refer to these special facilities only.

Mr. SHERMAN. I shall vote to strike out this clause unless some provision is made for a section of the country that is just as important as the Atlantic Coast. Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, and all that part of the country, and thence to New Orleans, is now becoming more populous than the whole Atlantic Slope south of New York. Therefore the same facilities ought to be extended which are extended to the Atlantic seaboard.

Mr. CULLOM. I agree with the Senator from Ohio that if this provision is to be kept in the bill there are other lines that have just as much right to be established as this one has to be maintained. But it seems to me that in these hard times, when the mail facilities are so thoroughly conducted, with frequent trains at great speed, it is better to strike out this clause rather than to enter upon a general effort to secure the establishment of a half dozen other lines, because that is what it will come to, and pay additional sums of money for their maintenance. My own opinion is that we ought not to adopt the provision in the bill, but that we ought to get rid of it, because the evidence is that a line right by the side of the one which receives this appropriation makes the same time, within fifty or sixty minutes, between Springfield, Mass., and the terminus of the line.

Mr. SHERMAN. I am perfectly willing to take the action if the Senator in charge of the bill, if he thinks so, says that we had better postpone the consideration of the amendment I wish to offer. I am perfectly willing to do it, and take a vote upon this proposition. But certainly if this clause is retained the others ought to come in.

Mr. CULLOM. I agree with that.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not see any reason why it should not. I do not want to interfere with any road, and I am not sure that Mr. BLACKBURN. With reference to the line from Springfield, Ohio, I suggest that the average time for a passenger train between that point by the committee, which is the route, and the terminus of the line is $200,000.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not intend to strike that out. I am not sure that the Senator from Ohio has had time to make an amendment in now.

Mr. SHERMAN. That is what I think. Mr. BLACKBURN. Because I wish to vote to strike out this clause which proposes to appropriate $200,000. But if you do tained I shall insist with the Senator from Ohio that these other amendments ought to be admitted, too. It must be remembered that the purpose for which fifteen years ago this fund was put into the Post-Office appropriation act has ceased to exist. When the Plant Line was completed this fund was appropriated for the express purpose of furnishing fast-mail facilities from New York down the Atlantic Coast to Tampa, and there connecting with a line of fast steamers between Tampa and Havana. Now, that line has all disappeared. That connection has been abandoned. The Atlantic Coast Line, which for thirteen years had the subsidy, has not had it for two years past. That was the only purpose for which the fund was ever given. It was to facilitate the rapid transit of mails from Tampa, Fla., to Havana, the Atlantic Coast Line connecting with a fast steamship line plying between those two ports. That has been abandoned, there is no longer any connection, and the Atlantic Coast Line for two years past has not had this fund. But what was known as the Richmond and Danville system, now known as the Southern Railway, which has no earthly connection with any foreign steamship line, which never carries a letter that goes beyond the limits of our own land, has the subsidy now. There is no argument to support it to-day. The only argument that ever did support it was the Tampa-Havana Fast Mail Steamship Line, and that has ceased to exist.

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. Wanamaker and other Postmasters-General tried to get rid of it.

Mr. BLACKBURN. No Postmaster-General has ever recommended it at any time. Twice in his official report he has asked for its abolition. The only argument here used for it and the only purpose for which it was ever given ceased to exist two years ago. I stand with the Senator from Ohio and the Senator from Illinois. I say that if the subsidy is to be retained for this one line then it ought to be given to the other lines on even terms that are here with amendments pending asking for it. I notify the Senate now that if it does that it will have to appropriate, in round numbers, about three-quarters of a million of money in subsidies every year to these different railroad lines.

Mr. SHERMAN. The total amount provided for by the amendment that I sent up is $150,000. The amount appropriated by this paragraph is $196,000. I do not see where the Senator gets his $600,000.

Mr. CULLOM. There are other lines.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I think it is about three-quarters of a million. The Senator from Ohio has an amendment pending here himself asking for $150,000. Then the Seacoast Air Line has an amendment pending here asking for one hundred and ninety-six thousand six hundred and twenty odd dollars, exactly the amount given to the line provided for in the bill. Then in addition to that the city of Louisville comes with an amendment here upon my desk in which it asks for $150,000. In addition to that the Senator from Illinois has served notice on the committee that if any subsidy for special mail facilities is retained in the bill he has an amendment to offer on behalf of the city of Chicago. So the Senator can not get the figures below $750,000 a year asked for in the way of subsidies under this head.

Mr. SHERMAN. The amendment I offer includes all. It includes Louisville and Cincinnati, and it also affects Chicago in the same way, because—

Mr. BLACKBURN. It does not, if the Senator will permit me.

Mr. CULLOM. How does it affect Chicago?

Mr. BLACKBURN. It does not include the Seacoast Air Line, which is asking for $196,000 here.

Mr. SHERMAN. Here is the case: If the Senate refuses to grant this service to the Western States or the Middle States I may say I should feel entirely justified in voting against retaining the provision in the bill; but suppose we adopt it. I am inclined to vote for it because I am in favor of the best possible mail facilities for every part of the country. I do not like to act in the way of voting against this proposition because the Senate chooses to vote against my proposition. That is not the ground upon which I stand; but it seems to me that these propositions ought to go together and that we might take the vote without further debate. The whole subject is open.

So far as the particular amendment I submit is concerned, it has been demanded by the State of Ohio, the city of Cincinnati especially, for a long time. Now it is grouped with the Louisville connection and the connection to New Orleans, and all the States of Tennessee, Kentucky, Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana are interested in this proposition. They are modest about it. Although it embraces so many States and they have so large a population they ask for only $150,000, which is less than the amount that has been granted for years on other routes. It would cover an immense extent, you may say the whole eastern Mississippi Valley, including the Ohio Valley. I think we should put on all these amendments. Suppose they do amount to $700,000; put them on and let them go into conference and then make a fair distribution.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. CULLOM. I have looked over the amendment of the Senator from Ohio, and I am not able to see that Chicago is included in it.

Mr. SHERMAN. Chicago is not stated, nor is Cleveland stated; but the mail facilities now from Cleveland, Toledo, and Chicago to the Ohio River are excellent. They can not be much better. The facilities now from Chicago to Louisville are as good as they can be. They do not want anything more within those States. It is the connection with the South where the difficulty lies and where the delay is. The people of Cincinnati are seeking to have only a freer connection with the South.

Mr. HARRIS. Will the Senator from Ohio allow me to ask him if his proposed amendment is simply to secure expedition, to expedite the mails?

Mr. SHERMAN. It is partly to expedite, and it is to increase the facilities. I should like to have the amendment read. It has been read already.

Mr. HARRIS. I do not care to have it read at this moment. Can the Senator inform me about how much expedition would be secured by this appropriation?

Mr. SHERMAN. I could not, because I have not gone into the details.

Mr. HARRIS. Can the Senator from Kentucky inform me as to how much the mail is expedited from Springfield, Mass., to New Orleans, via New York, Washington, and Atlanta, by this appropriation of $196,000?

Mr. BLACKBURN. I can not give the exact schedules of the parallel lines, but I feel absolutely warranted in saying that it is not expedited at all.

Mr. RANSOM. I will tell the Senator from Tennessee if he will permit me.

Mr. HARRIS. I want information upon that point, because I think it material. We are paying for expedition and I want to know how much expedition we get for our money.

Mr. BLACKBURN. You are not getting any.

Mr. RANSOM. I will tell the Senator. The New York papers, the Northern mails, the Washington mails are carried to all the country South one day earlier than they would be but for this fast-mail service.

Mr. HARRIS. Does the Senator undertake to say that the mails are expedited twenty-four hours by reason of this appropriation?

Mr. RANSOM. I do not say twenty-four hours.

Mr. HARRIS. That is not the day, I understand.

Mr. RANSOM. Pardon me, I mean today, and I say distinctly, that owing to the time saved by these fast mails, all the mail from the North and from Washington City reach the South one day earlier than they would get there but for this service.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I do not understand the Senator from Tennessee to be asking about all the fast trains, but the one provided for in the bill as it came from the other House.

Mr. HARRIS. Well—

Mr. RANSOM. Now, I want to tell the Senator from Tennessee what has been the effect of the fast mail, if my friend will allow me. I can speak of it with some knowledge, for I had something to do with its first establishment here. Since it was established we have been receiving mails from New York one day in advance of their receipt before. We could not get the New York papers, say at Weldon, N. C., before this system was adopted, until the day after they were published. Now we get them there the same day. Now we get them on the South Carolina line the same day. Now we get them at Atlanta the next morning.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Does the Senator from North Carolina mean to say that by reason of this subsidy to this particular line the time has been diminished on the parallel lines?

Mr. RANSOM. I did not make that statement; but I intend to speak of it.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. That is about the way of it, is it not?

Mr. RANSOM. That is the case, because they must all do their very best to keep up with this line; otherwise the other lines would be completely thrown out.

Mr. HARRIS. Does the Senator from North Carolina mean to say that when we have purchased expedition at the price of $196,000 upon a single line we get the same amount of expedition upon all the other lines to which we pay nothing?

Mr. RANSOM. I mean to say exactly this: That from here down to South Carolina there are three lines, not quite parallel, as my friend from Kentucky said, but nearly parallel; and the two lines that do not receive this mail facility, as it is called, are obliged to try and keep up with the other line. All three lines put an additional train on their roads every day; the two lines try to keep up with the third. Otherwise there would be a fast line which would get all the travel. Every man acquainted with railroad business knows that to be the case.

Mr. HARRIS. I wish to ask the Senator one additional question. If by subsidizing this single line we have secured the same amount of expedition upon all competing lines, how can he reconcile it to the most common principle of equity and justice to waste $196,000 upon one line and exclude the other companies that are performing similar service?

Mr. RANSOM. I will answer the Senator from Tennessee that but for that line being able to carry the mails so quickly they would all lose one day.

Mr. HARRIS. Then I propose to the Senator from North Carolina that we divide the $196,000 between the lines.

Mr. RANSOM. I have nothing to do with that. I have nothing to do with any division here.

Mr. WOLCOTT. As I understand the situation, if you take off $196,000 from one line the other two lines would slow up, and it is in order to keep them all three going that you have to give $196,000 to one of the lines. If I may be permitted I should like to place an amendment appropriating $150,000 for a fast mail from Chicago to Denver.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator from Colorado that an additional amendment is not in order at this time. The Chair will recognize the Senator later for that purpose.

Mr. RANSOM. Let me suggest whether it is not the proper course to take the vote first upon the amendment of the committee, because unless that amendment is defeated there is no ground for any of the propositions for increased mail facilities; it will all be gone.

Mr. SHERMAN. I am afraid that the gentlemen who have secured these facilities for mail service are playing the same game that was described by my honorable friend from Tennessee; that is, they want a big subsidy for themselves and they think that will answer for all the Western country.

Mr. RANSOM. May I say to my friend from Ohio we can not do that unless the majority of the Senate approves it?

Mr. SHERMAN. I think on the whole it would be better for the Senator from North Carolina to join me in making a reasonable appropriation for fast mail service in the Mississippi Valley, and then I at least will vote for his proposition, as I have done in the past.

Mr. RANSOM. Mr. President, I can not make any bargains and there would upon this matter. The Senator from Ohio, the Senator from Tennessee, the Senator from South Carolina, and the Senator from Kentucky can engage in a division of what may be called spoils, but I must not be a party to it.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I understand the Senator from North Carolina objects to doing it here publicly. Probably he had better retire to the cloakroom. [Laughter.]

Mr. RANSOM. Oh, no, Mr. President, that—

Mr. BLACKBURN. I simply want to say if a vote is to be taken upon other amendments looking to the introduction of additional subsidies I shall vote to put every one of them in, and then I shall do my utmost to put every one of them out, including the one that is already in the bill.

Mr. RANSOM. The Senator from Kentucky is mistaken about that, Mr. President. He will never vote to put the amendment out in the world if it is once put on the bill.

Mr. BLACKBURN. The record will show in a few minutes.

Mr. BUTLER. I have favored an appropriation for fast mails to my part of the country almost ever since I have been in the Senate. I think, as has been suggested by other Senators, it has resulted in great good in respect to facilitating the mails. I do not know how true it is, but I understand that one line, which is known as the Southern Railway Company, now running from Washington via Charlottesville, Lynchburg, Danville, Greensboro, Charlotte, and to Atlanta, has been getting the appropriation of $90,000. Within the last two years another route from Washington to Atlanta has been put in operation, to wit, the Seaboard Air Line, which runs from here via Fredericksburg, Richmond, Weldon, Raleigh, through Chester, in my State, Athens, Ga., to Atlanta, and is in one sense a parallel line with the Southern Railway. I am decidedly in favor of these lines being aided, so as to get the very best mail facilities, but I do think in common fairness that the appropriation ought to be divided equally between the two of the lines, the Southern Railway and the Seaboard Air Line.

Mr. HANDLER. May I ask the Senator whether there is any objection on the face of the House proposition to having the Postmaster-General make that division, if he sees fit to do it?

Mr. BUTLER. Perhaps that would be the best course. But I give notice that I shall offer this amendment if the committee amendment is not sustained:

And provided further, That should the Postmaster-General expend the appropriation he shall divide the same between the Southern Railway Company, the Seaboard Air Line, and the Atlantic Coast Line companies.

That would seem to me to be fair. If the Postmaster-General would do that, and possibly he might, I should not have the slightest objection to it. But this is certainly giving one line an advantage over the other. I am informed by the managers of the Seaboard Air Line that if they had this amount they could make up the fifty-eight minutes which they are behind now, as compared with the Southern Railway, from this point to Atlanta. They are fifty-eight minutes, I think, later than the Southern Railway. Therefore I give notice that at the proper time, if the pending amendment of the committee should not prevail, I shall offer that amendment.

Mr. CULLOM. I simply desire to repeat what I have already said, that I am opposed to the paragraph which is proposed to be stricken out of the bill by the Senate committee; but I want to say in addition that if it is the sense of the Senate that it shall remain in, I shall offer an amendment proposing special facilities for a line from Chicago, via St. Louis, to New Orleans, and also from Chicago via Kansas City. I shall offer those amendments at the proper time.

Mr. CHANDLER. I certainly hope that no division among Southern Senators in reference to the application of this money when Southern lines are reached will prevent the adoption by the Senate of the House provision for a fast mail service from Springfield, Mass., to New Orleans. That line is undoubtedly something of a benefit to New England. It is a much greater benefit to the South. It is one of the greatest benefits that have been conferred upon the South by recent legislation.

The advantage of this fast-mail line the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. RANSOM] has well described. Now, we want it continued. It should be continued as a national enterprise, and it should be continued for reasons which do not apply to a line from Cincinnati or Chicago. If the House provision is retained in the bill and the Senator from Illinois and the Senator from Ohio choose to offer other amendments we will deal with them upon their merits when they are offered, but I do appeal to Senators not to vote down this line for a special reason which does not exist in the case of the line from Chicago or Cincinnati, and that is that this fast-mail line carries the foreign mail. It puts the South in direct and speedy communication with the great transatlantic steamers.

The Senator from Kentucky has spoken of the Plant Line from Tampa to Cuba. It may have been one of the objects in the original legislation of this line that these mails should be carried and the shipments of the Plant Line of steamers Havana should be brought into speedy communication with Europe, but that was only an incidental result.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I will say to the Senator from New Hampshire that that was the ground upon which this appropriation was first made, fifteen years ago.

Mr. CHANDLER. Does the Senator say it was the only ground?

Mr. BLACKBURN. No; I say it was the principal ground.

Mr. RANSOM. Will the Senator from New Hampshire allow me?

Mr. CHANDLER. If it does not come out of my time.

Mr. RANSOM. Certainly not. By the Plant Line of communication the mails get sooner to Tampa than by any other route.

Mr. CHANDLER. I will say to the Senator from Kentucky, if he will do me the honor to listen to me, that it was undoubtedly one object of this line to carry rapidly the mails that came upon the ocean steamers from the Continent of Europe from Tampa to Cuba. That was undoubtedly one of the objects of the line. The main purpose of it was, in my belief, not only to carry the domestic mail from Boston and New York City throughout the South, but it was also to give rapid communication with Europe to the business men of the South; and I say that the special advantage of this line alone ought to result in its continuance. If it is necessary to have a fast mail from Chicago let us vote the money for it. If it is necessary to have a fast mail from Cincinnati let us have that. If it is any gratification to the liberal-minded and generous Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT] to have a fast mail from Chicago to the Golden City let us have that. But, Mr. President, do not let us take away from the South, which is poor enough and suffering enough, anyway, although the daylight is beginning to shine in there industrially and politically—do not let us take away from the poor South the little advantage which this speedy communication with New York and New England and Europe gives to her.

Mr. PERKINS. I should like to ask the Senator from Kentucky if the two other railroads that parallel the subsidized line have made an application for a subsidy.

Mr. BLACKBURN. They have. The Seaboard Air Line also is here with an amendment asking for the same amount—dollar for dollar and cent for cent, that is now being paid to the Southern Railway Company.

Mr. RANSOM. That is true.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Yes, sir.

Mr. PERKINS. A year since, when this measure was under discussion, I voted for this appropriation. I have been inclined to so vote upon the amendment now before us. But after listening to the argument of my friend from North Carolina there certainly does not seem to be any necessity for this appropriation of $196,000 as an extraneous subsidy, for, by his own admission, competition, rivalry

(and that is the only thing that tells the story), has given the people increased mail service without paying an additional subsidy therefor. From what I know of transportation companies they usually do not run at a loss. The inference therefore is that they either have been pooling issues and dividing the money among the three companies or they have been operating their railroads at a profit.

I want to vote for this appropriation if I can do so consistently, if the requirements of the Southern States demand it; but there certainly has not yet been presented to us any substantial reason why we should vote for it. I already have every road facility. It is rivalry, the competition between the railroad companies, that gives them that mail service, and, in the language of the Senator from New Hampshire, takes the mail from across the Atlantic or from Springfield and carries it to their homes in North Carolina, or South Carolina, or Georgia. I think that our friends in Colorado and Illinois and all the West need a subsidy much more than this railroad does, because the far West is not settled up by towns every two or three or five miles, as is the case in our sister States of the South. I want to vote for this appropriation; but I do not see how I can consistently do so, based upon the argument of my friend the Senator from North Carolina, its warmest advocate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. SHERMAN. On that I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.
Mr. CULLOM. But the majority should be glad to have the question stated, so that the Senate may know exactly what it is voting upon.

Mr. RANSOM. Can I have the attention of the Senator from Ohio for one second? He has offered his amendment to the committee amendment which proposes to strike out the whole of the appropriation for fast-mail facilities.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have the right always to add to a proposition before the question is taken on striking it out.

Mr. RANSOM. But the amendment of the committee strikes out the whole paragraph.

Mr. BLACKBURN. The amendment to the amendment is to perfect the text.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have a right to move to amend the amendment of the committee.

Mr. HARRIS. It is perfecting the text.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. Add after line 7, page 5:

And for necessary and special facilities on trunk lines from Louisville, Covington, and Newport, Ky., and Cincinnati, Ohio, to Chattanooga, Tenn., for Atlanta, Ga., Knoxville, Tenn., Birmingham, Ala., Meridian, Miss., New Orleans, La., and the Texas points, $10,000. Provided, however, that no part of the appropriation made by this paragraph shall be expended unless the Postmaster-General shall deem such expenditure necessary in order to promote the interests of the postal service.

Mr. HARRIS. I wish to ask the Senator from Ohio why he does not include Nashville after Louisville, that being the most direct route to New Orleans.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have no objection to inserting "Nashville."

Mr. HARRIS. I ask that "Nashville" be inserted.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be modified, without objection. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as modified, proposed to the amendment of the committee.

The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COKE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH]. I should vote "nay" if he were here.

Mr. CULLOM (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY].

Mr. SQUIRE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL]. I therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. WHITE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. SHoup]. Were he present I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BATE. I am paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON]. If he were present I should vote "aye."

Mr. BURROWS. I am paired with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. GIBSON].

Mr. WHITE. I am informed that if the Senator from Idaho [Mr. SHoup] with whom I am paired were present he would vote "nay." I therefore desire to have my vote recorded in the negative.

The result was announced—yeas 22, nays 33, as follows:

YEAS—22.

Aldrich,	Hansbrough,	Lindsay,	Proctor,
Blackburn,	Harris,	Lozier,	Payne,

So the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question recurs on the amendment of the committee.

Mr. RANSOM. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BATE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON] and therefore withhold my vote. If he were here he would vote "nay," and I should vote "yea."

Mr. COKE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH].

Mr. CULLOM (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. WHITE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. SHoup].

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. HUNTON. I desire to state that if my colleague [Mr. DANIEL] were here, he would vote "nay," and I release the Senator from Washington [Mr. SQUIRE] from his pair with my colleague, so that he may vote. I believe they both think alike on this matter.

Mr. SQUIRE. Under the statement of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. HUNTON] that his colleague [Mr. DANIEL], with whom I am paired, if present, would vote "nay," I am enabled to vote, and I vote "nay."

Mr. BLACKBURN. I wish to inquire, does the Senator from Virginia say that his colleague, if present, would vote "nay" on this amendment?

Mr. HUNTON. I state very emphatically my opinion that my colleague would vote "nay" if he were here, because when we had this fight at the last session of Congress, he and I worked together upon a similar amendment, and voted together.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I do not question the Senator's right to speak for his absent colleague, but if he were here and voted "nay," it would be the first time that he ever voted for a subsidy in this body.

Mr. HUNTON and Mr. RANSOM. This is no subsidy.
Mr. HARRIS (after having voted in the affirmative). Is the Senator from Vermont [Mr. MORRILL] recorded as voting?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Vermont is not recorded.

Mr. HARRIS. I am paired with that Senator, but I will transfer that pair to the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VOORHEES] and let my vote stand.

The result was announced—yeas 27, nays 33, as follows:

YEAS—27.

Allen,	Cockrell,	Lindsay,	Smith,

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BUTLER. In line 2, on page 5, after the words "New Orleans," I move to strike out "$196,614.23" and insert "$393,228.44."

and in that connection I desire to have read a letter which I shall send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator from South Carolina that his amendment will be in order when the bill is reported to the Senate. The bill is still in Committee of the Whole, the words proposed to be stricken out by the committee having been retained.

Mr. BUTLER. Have I not the right now to move to amend the text of the bill? The amendment of the committee is not agreed to, so the text of the bill remains as it was.

Mr. CHANDLER. The unanimous-consent agreement was that all the committee amendments should be considered first, as the Senator will remember.

Mr. BUTLER. The Senator from Kentucky did not object to it. Mr. CHANDLER. I ask if the understanding was not that all the committee amendments should be first considered?

Mr. BLACKBURN. Yes; that was the order of the Senate. Mr. BUTLER. Then, Mr. President, I shall not offer the amendment now.

Mr. BLACKBURN. But I will say to the Senator from New Hampshire that that point was not raised when the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] offered an amendment to this amendment, and that is what I understand the Senator from South Carolina is now seeking to do.

Mr. CHANDLER. My point is that the committee amendment having been voted down there is no other amendment before the Senate, and no other amendments in order until the committee amendments to the entire bill are disposed of.

Mr. BUTLER. I have just stated that I shall not offer the amendment now.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The reading of the bill will be resumed.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 5, after line 22, to strike out:

For pay of agents and assistants to distribute stamps, and expenses of agency, $1200.

Mr. PLATT and Mr. VILAS addressed the Chair.

Mr. PLATT. Did the Senator rise to make an inquiry about this item?

Mr. VILAS. I rose to make a statement about it and to oppose the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. PLATT. That was my purpose, and I will yield to the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. VILAS. I shall be very brief. I have submitted to the Committee on Appropriations since this amendment was proposed by the committee a considerable number of documents and papers on the subject, which I think have already influenced their judgment in regard to the desirability of making this amendment.

In point of fact, I may say briefly, the Postmaster-General is of the opinion that this postage-stamp agency ought not to be discontinued, and that it is of substantially the same service to the Government in the collection and examination of the manufacture of the stamps that it hitherto has been; that the saving which could be made would necessarily be very little indeed; and I hope that the committee, as represented by the distinguished Senator from Kentucky, will themselves yield to the representations in that interest, and allow the language to stand as it is in the bill.

I want to add also that everything else has gone the same way, and it would be wrong to attempt to prosecute this small saving at the expense of injury.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I do not know but what there is a great deal of force in the concluding suggestion of the Senator from Wisconsin. It has been very clearly demonstrated that the Committee on Appropriations can not beat the railroad companies of the country, but I thought probably they might be able to conquer a little postage-stamp agency, which consists of one chief and seven clerks. I confess that I was rather inclined to press the fighting on this line in order to demonstrate the ability of the Committee on Appropriations to beat somebody. [Laughter.]

So far as this item is concerned, it involves an expenditure of only $12,000. As long as the postage stamps of the Government were made by contract by the American Bank Note Company, in New York and in Hartford, Conn., and as long as it was the case that those stamps were made by private parties in different cities of the Union it was absolutely necessary to have this postage-stamp agency, and they were the custodians of the stamps when made. Now, for the first time, the postage stamps are being made here in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and the committee was of the opinion that the necessity no longer existed for the maintenance of the postage-stamp agency.

I agree that the Senator from Wisconsin has stated the case fairly, that since this bill was reported to the Senate recommending the striking out of the provision for this agency the committee have agreed that in the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bills they would incorporate a provision giving the Third Assistant Postmaster-General six clerks to do this work in his office, instead of eight who now constitute this subbureau. Since that was done and this bill has been reported the Postmaster-General has written me a lengthy letter, in which he insists that it would be safer to let this matter go over until next year, in order that we may have time, which he says we have not had as yet, to determine whether it is best to abolish this agency here in this city or not.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope we shall.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I have no feeling about the matter in any way.

Mr. CULLOM. Let it go.

Mr. DUBOIS. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Kentucky, who has charge of this bill, underestimates the ability of of the Appropriations Committee. The trouble is that the Appropriations Committee have too much to do. They can not attend to all of this business properly, as has been demonstrated by their failure to carry the provisions reported by them to the pending appropriation bill. It seems to me that if the appropriation bills were scattered among the various committees of the Senate, having charge of the special subjects to which they relate, and each of those committees should take charge of the proper appropriation bill, they would be reported to the Senate in such shape that they could be readily passed.

We all have the greatest confidence in the ability of the Appropriations Committee, but not in their ability to carry through the Senate whatever they may think proper to propose.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The reading of the bill will proceed. The Secretary resumed and concluded the reading of the bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. I desire to renew in substance, though not in form, the amendment I offered awhile ago, and I hope the Senate will allow it the advantage at least of a conference upon it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Ohio will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert, after line 7, on page 5, the following:

And for necessary and special facilities on trunk lines from Cincinnati, Ohio, Louisville, Ky., to Nashville and Chattanooga, Tenn.; Atlanta, Ga.; Birmingham, Ala.; New Orleans, La.; and Texas ports on the Gulf of Mexico. Provided, however, That no part of the appropriation made by this paragraph shall be expended unless the Postmaster-General shall deem such expenditure necessary in order to promote the interest of the postal service.

Mr. GORMAN. Mr. President, I am compelled to make the point of order on the amendment that it has not been estimated for and that it is new legislation.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not know on what rule the Senator relies. I should like to have the rule read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The rule referred to by the Senator from Maryland will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

RULE XVI. AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

1. All general appropriation bills shall be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, except bills making appropriations for rivers and harbors, which shall be referred to the Committee on Commerce, and amendments shall be received from any general appropriation bill, the object of which is to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add a new item of appropriation, unless it be made necessary by the provisions of some existing law, or by the signature of a joint or several resolutions previously passed by the Senate during that session; or unless the same be moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate or proposed in pursuance of an estimate of the head of the Department.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask the Senator from Kentucky whether there has been any estimate from the Post-Office Department in regard to this amendment?

Mr. BLACKBURN. No, sir; there never has been by any Postmaster-General.

Mr. SHERMAN. Nor for the amendment which has been adopted?

Mr. BLACKBURN. Never.

Mr. SHERMAN. Then I must say that the point of order is well taken, and that it ought to have been taken with the same force on the amendment the Senate has adopted.

Mr. BATE. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator will please state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. BATE. Mr. President, I present a parliamentary inquiry. As I understand, this amendment, offered again by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN], was not estimated for, and was never before the Appropriation Committee. It has, as an amendment, been voted down on an yeas and nays vote in the Committee of the Whole, and is now, when again presented as an amendment, set aside on a point of order. My inquiry is, does not the fact of its having been voted on in the Committee of the Whole give it a decided status as will entitle it, when in the Senate, to such consideration as would override any point of order opposing its consideration, and entitle it to be voted upon when offered again to the Senate. In other words, Mr. President, does not the fact of its having been voted upon in the Committee of the Whole give such jurisdiction as can not be ousted by a point of order?

Mr. HARRIS. I suggest to my colleague that the amendment of the committee was to strike out a provision which appeared in the bill as it came from the House of Representatives.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair sustains the point of order made by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GOODE].

Mr. BATE. I understand that, but it seems to me the point is very clear. I only ask if the position of the amendment is changed at all. The very amendment presented by the Senator from Ohio has been recognized by the Senate as in Committee of the Whole and voted upon. Now, having been recognized as in Committee of the Whole has he not a right to present it again in the Senate?

Mr. BUTLER. Is the bill in the Senate?

Mr. HARRIS. It is not.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will answer the inquiry of the Senator from Tennessee. The Senator from Maryland made a point of order against the amendment, and the point of order is sustained by the Chair.

Mr. BUTLER. The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BATE] stated, as I understood him, that the bill is now in the Senate. I do not so understand.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill is still in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. BATE. What I wish to know is, what rights the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio will have when the bill is reported to the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair can not decide that question in advance, the bill not yet having been reported to the Senate.

Mr. VILAS. I desire to offer an amendment, which I send to the desk, and I ask a vote upon it. I shall take no time in the discussion of it except simply to say that the amendment proposes to incorporate in the bill the same classification of the railway postal clerks which has already been passed by the Senate in a bill for that purpose at this session, I believe. The bill was reported by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. McMILLAN]. This amendment was then submitted independently as an amendment to the pending appropriation bill, reported favorably by the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-roads, and submitted to the Committee on Appropriations. I understand the Committee on Appropriations were advised that if this classification were carried into full effect it would considerably increase the expenditure for railway postal clerks, and for that reason they did not incorporate it with the bill, notwithstanding the Senate had passed the bill providing for the classification.

Mr. President, the amendment will not increase the appropriation for railway postal clerks if adopted by the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, at this point. It simply will provide for this classification, leaving it to the Postmaster-General, so that he will be obliged to retain the expenditure for this branch of the service within the limits of the appropriation; but it will provide a just and useful arrangement of the clerks of that character in the Railway Mail Service.

I wish to add, what I think every Senator here will recognize at once without amplification, that there is no harder worked, more faithful, or more deserving class of men in any branch of the public service whatever, unless possibly in the Life-Saving Service, than the railway postal clerks of the United States.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I raise the point of order against the amendment submitted by the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. VILAS. May I be permitted to say, in reference to the point of order, that I believe it has always been ruled that when the Senate has converted a bill into an act, so far as this branch of the Legislature is concerned, it is then a law within the meaning of the rule, and it is not new legislation to put that upon an appropriation bill after it has been reported by a committee.

Mr. CHANDLER. Before discussing the point of order on the amendment I think it would be well for the Senate to know what the amendment is. It has not been read from the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be read.

Mr. VILAS. I think it has been read.

Mr. ALDRICH. Not to-day.

The SECRETARY. After line 24, on page 4, insert:

"That persons in the Railway Mail Service known as railway postal clerks shall, on and after the passage of this act, be divided into seven classes, whose salaries shall not exceed the following rates per annum: First class, not exceeding $900; second class, not exceeding $850; third class, not exceeding $800; fourth class, not exceeding $750; fifth class, not exceeding $700; sixth class, not exceeding $650; seventh class, not exceeding $600. Provided, That the Postmaster-General, in fixing the salaries of clerks in the different classes, may fix the salaries of clerks of the same class according to the amount of work done, the number of hours on duty, and the responsibility incurred by each, but shall not in any case allow a higher salary to any clerk of any class than the maximum fixed by this act for the class to which such clerk belongs."

"That such railway postal clerks of class 7 as shall be detailed as chief clerks of divisions and such clerks of class 6 as may be detailed chief clerks of two or more lines shall, while traveling on the business of the Department, be paid from the appropriation for the transportation of mails on railroads their actual and necessary expenses, but not exceeding $3 per diem. That all laws and parts of laws in conflict with the provisions of this act be, and the same are hereby, repealed."

Mr. HOAR. Will the Chair be kind enough to state what is the point of order?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The point of order was made by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN]. Will the Senator state his point of order distinctly?

Mr. BLACKBURN. The point of order is that the amendment involves an increase of appropriation which has not been estimated for by any Department or recommended by any committee, standing or select. It is clearly a change of law, and is amenable to Rule XVI.

Mr. HOAR. Does the Senator from Kentucky make the point that it is general legislation?

Mr. BLACKBURN. If I am to believe that the Senate has determined that question properly in the last four days I certainly do.

Mr. CHANDLER. I should like to ask the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS] whether the amendment as he offers it carries an appropriation?

Mr. VILAS. None whatever, and no increase of appropriation is asked.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from Wisconsin claims that the amendment is made in order because it is to carry out an act or resolution previously passed by the Senate. But that provision applies only to the objection that an amendment increases an appropriation or adds a new item. It does not apply to the case of general legislation. The provision about general legislation was put into the Senate rule for the express purpose of preventing one branch of Congress from exercising a coercion upon the other by making new legislation a condition of the appropriations to carry on the Government. So the answer of the Senator from Wisconsin is not a good one to that objection.

It seems to me that an amendment which carries no appropriation, but which requires the force of a certain class in the Post-Office Department to be divided into seven distinct classes, and which provides that all existing laws inconsistent with that arrangement shall be repealed, is general legislation, if anything be general legislation, without the slightest regard to the matters that have been decided by the Senate at this session.

I understand the general difference between general legislation and special legislation to be this, that general legislation is legislation for the benefit of the whole people and applicable to the whole public. Special legislation is legislation for some private interest, as for the payment of a claim. The creation of a new department or the Government, the secretary of commerce, the creation of postal clerks in the Railway Mail Service, is just as much for the general public interest as any legislation we have, and as is the establishment of a new court or the making of new laws governing the transactions of men with each other.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Would it interrupt the Senator from Massachusetts if I were to ask him a question which I think is in point? My idea, from what has occurred in the last few days, is that that is general legislation which a majority of the Senate do not put into a bill, and nothing is general legislation which a majority do want. As I understand the definition of the Senator from Massachusetts, he says that is general legislation which is to redound to or result in the benefit or advantage of the whole people.

Mr. HOAR. Yes.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I should like to ask the Senator, in the light of the record made a few days ago, whether the Hawaiian cable appropriation was not general legislation, because it was said that it was to result in benefit to the whole people. If not, who were the special individuals favored by that appropriation?

Mr. HOAR. That is a question upon the discussion of which I am not going to enter.

Mr. BLACKBURN. The Senator from Massachusetts voted that that was not general legislation. I have become tangled on the question of special and general legislation.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to say that the cable is not a public work. It stands on a broad and distinct principle, just an appropriation to take out a rock in Boston Harbor or to clear out the Ohio River on the borders of Kentucky never has been treated as general legislation. The mere fact that the cable is an instrument of commerce for the benefit of the whole public does not make it general legislation. Let me illustrate my idea in answer to the Senator from Kentucky: An act to create a new department of Government or prescribing its duties would be general legislation, but an act to build a new post-office would not be. It is an instrument of the postal service just as the Hawaiian cable is an instrument of commerce and just as a harbor or river is an instrument or pathway of commerce out of which we clear obstructions.

Mr. HILL. It is the bill relating to the Suburban Railway Company of this city.

Mr. HALE. The House bill?

Mr. HILL. It is the House bill.

Mr. HALE. Then, of course, it should go to the Committee on the District of Columbia. The Senator, I take it, does not intend to ask any action upon it until the Senate committee which has jurisdiction of those subjects considers the bill.

Mr. HILL. I should regret to make that promise. If the Senator will indulge me a moment I will state that a bill of precisely a similar character to the one which has passed the other House has been before the Senate District of Columbia Committee for eight months. Since December last I have been endeavoring to get a report from the committee and have been unsuccessful. The bill has been considered in committee and it is being considered there now. I am advised that this morning, in the committee, it stood 5 to 5. There is no reason why this bill, which has now passed the House of Representatives and which is precisely like the Senate bill, should go to the committee. A meeting of the committee is to be held on Monday next, I believe, when this subject will be again brought up. I can see no reason why this bill should not now remain in the possession of the Senate.

Mr. HALE. I am sorry that in any instance of the very many where the Senate is being constantly raided in the direction of the desires of street-railway corporations to get possession of the streets and avenues of the District of Columbia the Senator from New York is giving his great force and influence in aid of these projects. He has given what to me seems the best of reasons why the bill should be referred to the committee. The only reason he has given why it should not be referred is because the committee in its deliberations has found itself to be tied, the vote being equal one way and the other; in other words, that the committee declines to report the bill to the Senate. That is a very good reason why the bill should be sent to the committee for its deliberation and action; and if that committee, which is our chosen organ, does not report the bill to the Senate, then we can ask as we choose after the committee had an opportunity to deal with it.

Therefore, Mr. President, I move that the bill be referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I regret that the Senator from Maine has seen fit to suggest any undue anxiety upon my part to obtain control of any of the streets of the District of Columbia for this or any other particular street railroad. I have been engaged, sir, in no such strife. Some friends of mine from New York having some interest in the bill suggested to me that they would like to have a report upon the bill.

Mr. HALE. How can they get a report upon it unless we send it to the committee?

Mr. HILL. In a moment. I am referring to the bill that has been before the committee for eight months, and action upon which has been promised me repeatedly since the 1st day of December last.

Mr. HALE. But if a majority of the committee is not in favor of the bill, how does the Senator expect that he can get favorable action upon it?

Mr. HILL. I will come to that in a moment.

Mr. HALE. He is seeking to down the committee.

Mr. HILL. I am not; but this bill must be treated the same as other bills.

Mr. HALE. That is what I want to have done.

Mr. HILL. Therefore, I am only suggesting that I had repeatedly urged the committee to report the bill in some way or other, that it might have the consideration it deserved in the Senate, and if the Senate does not see fit to pass the bill that ends it. But I did object, and I do object now, to doing by indirection what I can not do directly; and I submit that fair treatment requires that the bill should be reported in some form to the Senate.

Now, Mr. President, a bill—

Mr. HALE. The motion is not debatable.

Mr. HILL. The motion is debatable.

Mr. HALE. Only in a very narrow line.

Mr. FAULKNER. If the Senator from Maine and the Senator from New York will permit me, I think that perhaps I can make a suggestion which will avoid all further discussion in regard to the matter at the present time. There is to be a meeting of the Committee on the District of Columbia at 3 o'clock on Monday. I would suggest, if there be no objection to the course proposed by the Senator from New York at this time, that the bill be on the table, with the understanding that no further action be taken until after the next meeting of the committee.

Mr. HALE. I do not object to that course, provided it is understood that the bill shall not be called up until after the committee has had its meeting. I can not be here at all times, because I am engaged on other committees.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Will the Senator from Maine permit an interruption?

Mr. HALE. Certainly.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I think there should be a word said further than that which was said by the Senator from West Virginia. There has been not a reflection, but a direct statement by the Senator from New York that the Committee on the District of Columbia has been derelict in its duty, and for eight months had custody of a bill and failed to act upon it. There is in the Senate, so far as I know, no such hard-worked, patient, and conscientious committee as the Committee on the District of Columbia. There is in connection with that committee a subcommittee of three having direct charge of the chartering and extensions of charters of District street-railway lines. That subcommittee brings to a work consideration and industry and care greater than that which most men exercise over their own affairs. I speak with greater freedom of it because I am not a member of the subcommittee, and in the District of Columbia Committee I am probably the least industrious of any member. I know that that committee has painstakingly and carefully and conscientiously considered every bill that came before it.

Sometimes months ago or so it is true the bill to which the Senator from New York refers was sent to the committee. At that time the tariff measures were under discussion, and I am told the members of no committee could be got together to consider bills. There were 28 bills relating to street railroads pending before that subcommittee. In December, after Congress met, some members of the committee felt it desirable to go back to their own States in matters pertaining to the election of Senators. Since their return this particular bill has been taken up and considered with the utmost care. The merits of the bill, in the opinion of many people, are of but the slightest character. The reason why the bill has not been reported long ago has been largely a disinclination to offend the Senator from New York and others, because I understand the Senator from New York has had a perfectly proper but an unusual interest in the consideration of the bill, and he addressed the committee, I think, in writing on the subject.

The committee has given the bill all possible consideration of purpose. It has been considered most carefully and most intelligently. The Senator from New York will be gratified with a report upon the bill sooner or later. He says himself that a bill exactly similar is now before the Senate Committee on the District of Columbia for consideration, and he asks that a bill which has passed the other House, exactly like the one which the District of Columbia Senator has been taken up and considered with the utmost care, should be referred to the committee. I can imagine no greater or more unwarranted rebuke to the Committee on the District of Columbia than would be exercised by such a vote if carried.

Mr. HALE. A great many matters are pressing in the morning and I do not wish to occupy any more time. The suggestion of the Senator from West Virginia and in addition the very pertinent remarks made by the Senator from Colorado show the situation. I am willing to consent that the bill for the present shall lie upon the table, with the understanding that it shall not be called up or attempted to be called up until after the Committee on the District of Columbia has had the opportunity of a meeting for a report upon the bill before it. I will reserve the right, if I think it is the proper thing, to move then to refer it, but for the present I will not insist upon my motion.

Mr. WOLCOTT. In object to the request made by the Senator from West Virginia. I have no idea in the world that on Monday next the measure will be specially taken up by the committee. The time of the committee is to be devoted to another matter. I think it perfectly fair and open to say that I do not think the situation of the Senator from New York will be bettered or changed or altered in the slightest degree by the meeting of the committee which is to be held on Monday, and I should object to any unanimous agreement which would necessarily bind the committee to some specific action on Monday next.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President—

Mr. FAULKNER. If the Senator from New York will permit me, I was perfectly justified in making the statement I did on the remark of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR] to the committee in reference to action next Monday and the instructions to the subcommittee under a resolution adopted by the committee this morning. It would be perfectly within the jurisdiction of the committee to consider at its meeting next Monday that or any of the bills that came over from the House.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I hope the Senator from West Virginia will understand that I did not mean it was not within the jurisdiction of the committee. I meant that as a matter of fact the bill will not be considered at that time.

Mr. FAULKNER. I ask that the request of the Senator from New York be considered with and then that the bill be on the table until next Monday. After that I should like the Senator from Maine can move to refer it, and I will allow one more suggestion of the committee to act upon the measure.

Mr. HALE. Then let the bill go to the table with my motion.

to refer pending, with the understanding that nothing will be attempted about it until after Monday.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

STRIKING OF JURIES IN THE DISTRICT.

The bill (H. R. 8724) to provide for the striking of juries in the District of Columbia was read twice by its title.

Mr. HUNTON. I beg to say that there is a Senate bill on the Calendar, No. 952 in the Order of Business, in the exact words of the bill passed by the House of Representatives, and that that bill has been unanimously reported by the Judiciary Committee, through the Senator from New York (Mr. Hill). I ask, instead of the House bill being referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, that it may be now considered, and put upon its passage.

Mr. PLATT. I think that bill ought to be passed. It is a bill which has come from the House of Representatives, and a similar bill has been very carefully considered by the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, and unanimously reported. There is reason for speedy action upon it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. GORMAN. What is the bill?

Mr. PLATT. I will state to the Senator that the bill provides for struck juries in the District of Columbia under certain circumstances.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read for information, subject to objection.

The Secretary read the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. ALLEN. I object to its present consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. There is objection, and the bill will be placed on the Calendar.

SURVEYOR OF DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 444) making the surveyor of the District of Columbia a salaried officer, and to provide for more efficient service in the surveyor's office.

Mr. PROCTOR. I move that the Senate nonconcur in the amendments of the House of Representatives, and request a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Vice-President was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. PROCTOR, Mr. FAULKNER, and Mr. HANSBROUGH were appointed.

WOMEN TRUSTEES IN DISTRICT PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1717) to authorize the appointment of women as public-school trustees in the District of Columbia.

Third. To provide for any deficiencies in the revenue that may arise from the removal of all duties upon sugar or from any other cause by the imposition of a customs duty upon wool and by increasing the customs duties or the internal-revenue taxes upon articles of luxury.

Mr. MANDERSON. I should like to know whether the bill as reported by the Senator from Tennessee on behalf of the committee is reported with an amendment?

Mr. HARRIS. It is not amended. It is reported without amendment.

Mr. MANDERSON. I think the motion and instructions submitted by the Senator from Rhode Island should be printed in connection with the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The motion will be entered, and will be placed on the Calendar with the bill.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask that the instructions offered by the Senator from Rhode Island be printed in the ordinary way.

Ordered, That petition introduced in the first session Fifty-fifth Congress to indemnify John George Ryan be withdrawn from the files of the Senate, and that the same be referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia. That the petition introduced in the third session Fifty-third Congress to indemnify the salary of the two department of the city of Washington be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and that the report be laid on the table.

Mr. BUTLER. The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN] very kindly consents that I shall proceed with my remarks now before the disposition of the Post-Office appropriation bill, and, if agreeable to the Senate, I shall be very glad to do so. I therefore call up the resolution which I offered the other day in regard to the consideration of what is known as the pooling bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state to the Senator from South Carolina that the morning business has not yet been concluded.

Mr. BUTLER. I am trying to get the resolution up, Mr. President, and then, if any Senator desires to present morning business, I shall be very glad to yield to him for that purpose. However, I shall accommodate myself to the wishes of the Senate in that respect.

INDIAN DEPREDAATION CLAIMS.

Mr. DUBOIS. I offer a resolution, which I send to the desk. I ask for its immediate consideration.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Attorney-General of the United States be requested to transmit to the Senate of the United States a list of all judgments which have been rendered by the Court of Claims in Indian depredation cases since the adjournment of the first session of the present Congress against which no motions for new trial have been filed or appeal taken and which have not been appropriated for.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I inquire of the Senator from Idaho whether the cases decided prior to the time fixed in this resolution have been sent in?

Mr. DUBOIS. They have been sent in. I have inquired as to that.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Very well.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

RAILROAD LAND GRANTS.

Mr. PETTIGREW submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Also, the number of acres of said grant not patented to said railroad companies; also, any information he may have in relation to the sale of any of the grant lands before they were patented to said companies, the date of such sale, the number of acres.

Also, the number of acres patented to said companies during the year 1894; also the number of acres encroached in any list now on file by said companies for which patents are asked.

CONDEMNED CANNON TO GRAND ARMY POSTS.

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin. I am directed by the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the joint resolution (H. Res. 308) authorizing the Secretary of War to deliver condemned cannon to Asher Gaylord Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Plymouth, Pa., and to Eckley B. Cox Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Ireland, Pa., to report it with amendments. I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. BUTLER. I shall be compelled to object to that, Mr. President.

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin. I will state to the Senator from South Carolina that the consideration of the joint resolution will only take a moment.

Mr. BUTLER. On that statement I withdraw my objection. By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The first amendment reported from the Committee on Military Affairs was, in line 7, after the words "cannon balls," to insert "to the William H. Tarbee Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of New York," four light pieces of condemned cast-iron cannon and twenty balls."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 9, after the words "cannon balls," to insert, "also, to the R. Carpenter Post, Grand Army of the Republic, Chelsea, Mich., two condemned cast-iron cannon and twenty cannon balls."

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the joint resolution to be read a third time.

The joint resolution was read the third time, and passed.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVAL.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on this day approved and signed the joint resolution (S. R. 138) making an appropriation of $5,000 for clearing the Potomac River of ice.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. T. O. TOWLES, its Clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

A bill (S. 655) to extend the jurisdiction of justices of the peace fact," that it was not because of a human statute or constitutional provision, but that it rested in natural law as firmly as the inalienable right of all men to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Then let him turn to his law books and read once more the foundation for the saying, "Delegatus delegari non potest."

How does Mr. Eckels propose to give us a currency of the very highest character? He asks that we allow the banks to loan up their promissory notes based upon their discounted paper. This is in brief Mr. Eckels's plan. He would have the banks provide a safety fund to redeem their notes by a graduated tax until the sum secured should equal 5 per cent upon their issues. In other words, it is proposed to secure the "highest character" for our note circulation by substituting for a Government bond worth more than the notes issued 5 per cent in cash—after a time—and the assets of the banks.

There are two points in this connection that will require explanation before being accepted by the average citizen who does not hold office. It will be difficult to make sensible people believe that the banks can issue a better currency than the Government. It will be still more difficult to make them believe that a small safety fund is better than the guaranty of the Government. And Mr. Eckels will be asked to explain whether the notes proposed to be issued under his plans and the other notes emanating from Wall street are to be redeemable in coin, either gold or silver. I know it is claimed that these notes will be redeemable in the precious metals, but the claim is made with a sinister smile. They are to be redeemable at the banks of issue; in other words, a bank note issued in Des Moines, Iowa, is to be redeemed only at the bank of issue, and if it happens that such a note has strayed away from the immediate locality of that bank the sole pretense of coin redemption rests upon the assumption that the holder should be able to travel miles enough to reach the bank and make the demand, which will doubtless be refused if made. In other words, they are to suspend specie redemption in the interests of the banks.

But these plans have come so thick and so fast. They have been amended and the amendments amended. They have been changed so rapidly as to suggest a question whether their paternity could be discovered. In all the varying phases of the discussion on the part of the Wall street monometallists one end has been constant to the other view. This has been the claim to maintain what is called "the gold basis." The object of this effort is very plain. It is to secure in the hands of the wealthy bankers and capitalists of the East absolute power of control over the finances of the Government. It is fortunate for the people that men in Congress having convictions and the courage of them have exposed the absurdity of these plans and have thus far defeated them.

I now want to call your attention to one more gross absurdity in the arguments that have filled the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, and the press devoted to the plans of the Administration. Senator SHERMAN has repeatedly affirmed that the law requires that the parity of the gold and silver coins should be maintained by the Government. This statement has been reiterated by Republican and Democratic admirers of the great financier from Ohio. They assert that this is mandatory upon the Administration because of the clause in the Sherman law referring to the parity of the two metals. In the first place, it is to be observed that these gentlemen willfully and knowingly misquote that law. There is no reference in the act of July, 1890, to a policy for maintaining the parity of gold and silver coin. The expression is that it is the policy of the Government to maintain the parity of these two metals. And there is a vast difference between the attempt to maintain the parity of value of coins and the parity of value of metals. Moreover, it is not mandatory upon the Administration. It is simply a declaration that it has been the policy of this Government to maintain the parity.

Now, what does this expression mean? It means that in the Sherman Act there was a declaration of a gross absurdity. There is no such thing as maintaining a parity of value of two metals. It is not possible, any more than it would be possible to logically speak of maintaining the parity of value of any other two commodities. But, assuming it were possible, and assuming that the declaration in that law was mandatory, what is the logic of the conclusion? At the time of the passage of that act silver was worth nearly twice as much in the market, measured by gold, as it is today. The policy of the Government, then, has not been such as to maintain this parity. It does not necessarily follow that because there has been a decline in the market value of silver as a commodity it resulted from the action of the Government. But it can be very plainly seen that this action of the Government has been a potent factor leading up to that result.

It is in use. Our experience has shown the truth of the statement that when a commodity or a money is denied certain uses the value is proportionately decreased. This was thoroughly appreciated during the war, when a successful attempt was made to depreciate the value of our Government paper money. It was thoroughly understood by those who put the "except" upon the greenback and provided a use for gold coin that paper money could not discharge. The policy of this Government, therefore, in the payment of gold coin in the redemption of its obligations and its refusal under a strict mandate of Congress to pay silver for such purposes has necessarily resulted in the depreciation of silver through the diminishing of its uses. It will naturally follow, therefore, taking the ground of the monometallist, that it was now the bounden duty of the Government to attempt, so far as possible, a restoration of the parity which existed at the time of the passage of the Sherman Act by placing silver upon that equality with gold coin that exists under the statute.

The Secretary of the Treasury is instructed to redeem silver notes in silver coin struck for that purpose from the metal purchased by the Treasury notes. This he has not done. He is instructed also to redeem the notes of the Government in gold or silver at his discretion. For this policy he has substituted one under which he has redeemed those notes in gold at the option of the holder of the notes, and to the great detriment of the Treasury and to the country. Every rule of logic would lead the Secretary of the Treasury and the Administration to a change of this policy.

There is but one other point to which I wish to call your attention. In the most recent proposition of the Government for the issuance of coined bonds for the purchase of gold it is provided in the contract, made secretly by the Administration with the representatives of the money power in New York, that if Congress will give authority for the issuance of a bond payable in gold the interest now contemplated at 3 per cent shall be reduced to 3 per cent. Failing to receive this authority, it is proposed to issue the bonds payable in coin at the higher rate of interest. There will never be an opportunity in the future for any statesman, even with the hardihood of those who sustain the policy of the Administration, to claim that there is any question as to whether the bonds about to be issued are payable strictly according to the contract in silver. The purchasers of those bonds will have received notification by their accepting them at the higher rate of interest, and by the refusal of Congress to grant their demand for a gold bond, that this Government holds the option to pay them either in gold or silver.

There is no possible escape from this logic. It is as clear as the noonday sun. They understand perfectly, and it has been made clear in the debates, that the people's representatives have refused their assent to a bond specifically payable in gold. That action has settled the question for all time that this Government has the right to pay in silver coins of the present standard any obligation that is now outstanding, or that may be issued, until a different action is had by Congress. It is well that this point should be made clear before the close of this session of Congress. There should be a record made that this matter was discussed, and that those who took the bonds took them with the full knowledge that the Government should retain its option to pay bonds either in gold or silver, and pay, therefore, the higher rate of interest.

P. FAULKNER.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The Currency.

OF
HON. WILLIAM D. BYNUM, OF INDIANA.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Thursday, February 14, 1895.

The House having under consideration the joint resolution H. R. 275 authorizing the issue of $5,110,275 of gold 3 per cent bonds.

Mr. BYNUM said:

Mr. SPEAKER: Do not know that anything I can say will throw further light on this question or give any additional information to the members of the House. To my mind this contract is a very simple one, and although it has been severely criticised by some gentlemen on both sides of the Chamber, for my own part I see nothing wrong in any of its provisions. The objection raised by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. McMillan] and the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. Bryan] (that it will retire $65,000,000 of greenbacks [is without] foundation. Under its operation not a single dollar of the greenback currency was benefited. It simply prevents the Secretary of the Treasury from paying out, upon the current expenses of the Government the coin that may be obtained by the sale of bonds, or the currency that may be redeemed with such proceeds. It does not authorize or repeal the law which requires the Secretary of the Treasury to redeem the greenback currency.

That currency must still be used for the redemption of the national-bank notes, and may under certain circumstances be exchanged for gold coin, and in this manner would still be kept in circulation. There is not the least excuse for the assertion that the enactment of this resolution will result in the contraction of the currency.

Again, Mr. Speaker, the President and the Secretary have been criticised, whether from sincere motives or not I do not pretend to say, because it is alleged that the purchasers have been given an option on any future issue of bonds that may be made. The clause criticised is not a new option; it is simply a requirement that if additional bonds are issued before the 1st day of October that these parties shall be given the first offer; and, in my judgment, this provision is as much a protection to the Government as to these individuals. The only reason I apprehend why the purchasers of these bonds insisted upon, or at least desired, the insertion of such a right was that they might have an opportunity to prevent the sale of a future issue at a price lower than they had paid, thereby depreciating the value of the securities held by them.

The Government is not required to accept from these parties any offer they may make, but they are simply accorded the first right of making a bid.

It is said that the Secretary committed an error in negotiating a sale without first advertising for bids, as if it was an easy matter to secure $65,000,000 of gold by going into the open markets. The critical condition of the Treasury was such that, in my judgment, no other course was open. To hawk about financial centers and advertise in the columns of the press the dire necessities of the Government and the intentions and plans of the Administration for restoring the revenue and maintaining the public credit would have proven disastrous and probably have defeated all negotiations. This was not a sale of bonds; it was a purchase of gold, and there was nothing left for the Secretary to do but contract with the parties able to furnish the required amount upon the best terms he could secure.

Gentlemen will know that the last issue of bonds put upon the market was almost wholly paid for with gold drawn out of the Treasury by those who desired to secure them. Had the Secretary advertised openly for bids and accepted an offer without any guaranty that the Treasury gold should not be raided, the $41,000,000 now there would have been drawn out before the contract had been concluded. The stipulations which he secured for the defense of the Treasury are wise and wholesome. Half of the gold is to come from abroad, and the part furnished at home is to be secured without drafts upon the amount held in Treasury, and, in addition, the purchasers agree to use their influence and efforts in protecting the Treasury from future drains and the country from exportations. How they may do this is not a matter of detail or investigation, but certainly no one will gainsay that they can in times of stress render valuable aid.

Mr. Speaker, am not surprised—I say it frankly—that Government bonds can not be sold at the price they brought a few months ago. If the present banking system of the Treasury be not reformed and the gold reserve continues to be raided in the future as it has been in the recent past, it will be difficult to negotiate future sales upon as favorable terms as have been secured in this last agreement.

Gentlemen say that the passage of this resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to sell a bond payable in gold coin will require every private contract thereafter made to be paid in the same medium. Mr. Speaker, it is for the purpose of protecting the credit of the Government, the credit of our States, the credit of our municipalities, and of individuals that I desire to see this stipulation inserted in our bonds. It is because of the fear that this Government is not going to adhere to the policy of making its payments in the best money that these stipulations are being required for our domestic borrowers.

If it goes out to-morrow morning that the House of Representatives of the United States, the Representatives of the people, have declared their intention and purpose to adhere at all hazards to the policy which we have maintained ever since the close of the war there will be no desire on the part of anyone to require that all obligations shall stipulate for payments in gold coin. Creditors will say that the policy of the Government of the United States is unalterable; and so long as the Government maintains that policy every dollar of paper and every dollar of silver will be worth as much as a gold dollar, and payments in either will be the equivalent of the other." This is why I believe this measure to be for the benefit of the people; this is why I believe it to be for the benefit of every borrower in the markets of this or foreign countries.

Mr. Speaker, if there has been any one principle cardinal with the Democratic party, it has been the maintenance of the credit of the Government and the payment of its obligations in the best character of money on the face of the earth. Why, sir, the charges, the insinuations, the denunciations that are now hurled at the President have been hurled at former Democratic Administrations for maintaining Democratic principles in the midst of adversity.

When Jackson issued the specie circular, and when his successor, Mr. Van Buren, adhered to it in spite of the numerous assaults that were made upon him by the representatives of the banks and the politicians, he stood as firm as the rock-bound coast against which the waves may dash but rebound to be broken again upon the ocean's bosom, and reestablished the finances of the Government upon a sound basis, and restored confidence among the people. In my judgment the present Administration will not be deterred by the brutal assaults that have been made upon its policy from adhering to this cardinal principle of the Democratic faith and preserving the credit of the nation free from suspicion. For this patriotic effort it will receive the commendation of all patriotic citizens and the support of the great body of the American people.

The message also communicated to the Senate the resolutions of the House on the death of Hon. Marcus C. Lisle, late a representative from the State of Kentucky.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Mr. President, I ask that the resolutions just received from the House of Representatives may lie on the table. I give notice that at an early day I shall call up the resolutions and ask their consideration by the Senate, that proper tribute of respect may be paid to the memory of my deceased colleague in the other House from the State of Kentucky.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

OFFICERS ON RECEIVING AND TRAINING SHIPS.
Mr. CHANDLER. I offer a resolution for immediate consideration.

Mr. BUTLER. I shall have to object to it. I have yielded now a half dozen times. The Senator can offer the resolution after I have concluded my remarks. I am sorry, but I must object.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. President, has morning business been declared closed?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It has not been declared closed.

Mr. CHANDLER. Then I ask to have the resolution received.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Navy be directed to inform the Senate whether or not during the last four years officers of the Navy attached to the United States Coast Guard, stationed at Newport, R. I., and drawing sea pay and commutation for rations at sea, have been furnished and assigned, and have occupied quarters for themselves, or their families, or for both, on shore in public houses or elsewhere at the expense of the Government, and if so, to state the nature and extent to which this practice has prevailed, and whether or not it is in accordance with any authority of law.

Mr. CHANDLER. I ask for the present consideration of the resolution.

Mr. BUTLER. Let the resolution go over.

AMENDMENT OF INTERSTATE-COMMERCE ACT.

Resolved, That when the two pending appropriation bills, the diplomatic and consular and post-office bills, have been disposed of, the Senate will take up all bills being an act to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, and consider the same until disposed of.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, before proceeding to explain in detail the provisions of House bill 7273 I desire to correct, if I can—

Mr. WHITE. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from California will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. WHITE. Is the Senator from South Carolina in order in discussing a resolution which he has introduced and which has not yet come before the Senate? It is now 1 o'clock, and my impression is it is not in order, but that the appropriation bill which it has been announced will be considered is in order.

Mr. BUTLER. The Senator from California is laboring under a misapprehension. I have simply offered a resolution, and I now propose to speak to it. I think I am entirely in order. If I am not—

Mr. ALLEN. Will the Senator from South Carolina allow us to make an inquiry before he proceeds? There will be no attempt to obtain a vote upon the resolution to-day.

Mr. BUTLER. I am not prepared to say when the Senate will vote upon it.

Mr. ALLEN. There will be no effort on the part of the Senator to bring it before the Senate for a vote?

Mr. BUTLER. I do not know that I shall have an opportunity to ask for a vote to-day.

Mr. PLATT. The resolution offered by the Senator from South Carolina some days ago is now before the Senate.

Mr. CULLOM. It has been called up.

Mr. PLATT. It has been called up, and is now before the Senate.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I submit that the resolution offered by the Senator from South Carolina is before the Senate only by unanimous consent for the purpose of enabling the Senator from South Carolina to submit some remarks which he wants to make.

That was the request made by the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. BUTLER. That is the exact status.

Mr. PLATT. It is now before the Senate.

Mr. BLACKBURN. For that purpose only.

Mr. BUTLER. For the purpose of enabling me to address the Senate.

Mr. PLATT. That is in accordance with the custom of the Senate.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Certainly.

Mr. HARRIS. I have never known an instance where such a request was refused.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Do I understand that in addition the Senator from South Carolina, after the conclusion of his remarks, is to follow with a request for a vote upon the resolution?

Mr. BLACKBURN. On the contrary, as soon as the Senator from South Carolina shall have finished his remarks, it is my purpose to move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the Post-Office appropriation bill.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Is it the intention of the Senator from South Carolina that we shall proceed to consider the resolution after he is through?

Mr. BUTLER. Let me state to the Senator from Colorado the agreement which the Senator from Kentucky and I had. I requested him to allow the appropriation bill to be laid aside informally, in order that I might call up the resolution for the purpose of submitting some remarks on the subject. That I believe has been done.

Mr. PLATT. Always.

Mr. BUTLER. From time immemorial in this body.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I have never known it to be refused.

Mr. BUTLER. Of course, when I shall have concluded my remarks the Senator from Kentucky will call up the appropriation bill; and I presume the Senate will consider that bill until it is disposed of to the exclusion of all other business.

Mr. BLACKBURN. That is it.

Mr. BUTLER. Then what action the Senate may take in regard to the resolution—

Mr. CHANDLER. I desire to say that the Senator from South Carolina proposes to proceed strictly in accordance with the customs of the Senate. I will also state that if there is an attempt to pass the resolution there will be further debate upon it, so that there is no danger that the resolution will be adopted to-day.

Mr. BLACKBURN. There will be no further debate on the subject to-day.

Mr. BATE. Furthermore, I understand the bankruptcy bill is the unfinished business at 2 o'clock.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bankruptcy bill is the unfinished business.

Mr. BATE. The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. GEORGE], who has it in charge, is not now present.

Mr. BUTLER. The Senator from Mississippi and I had an understanding. I have not the slightest intention to displace the bankruptcy bill.

Mr. BATE. All right.

[Mr. BUTLER addressed the Senate. His speech will be published hereafter.]

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8272) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896.

Unanimous assent was given; and the Senate resumed the consideration of the bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. What has become of the resolution of the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. BUTLER. I desire to state that I have not yet received the Senate from South Carolina's reply to my motion. I have not yet voted to proceed to the consideration of the bill making appropriations for the fiscal year for the coming fiscal year, on which the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. GEORGE] has been on the floor.

Mr. CHANDLER. I desire to state that I have not yet received the Senate from Kentucky, to state that I have not yet received the Senate taken up on some future day with a view of submitting some remarks thereon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is on the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN], which will be read.

The SECRETARY. Strike out, in line 2, page 5, "$196,614.22" and insert "$176,952.80;" so as to read:

For necessary and special facilities on trunk lines from Boston, Mass., by way of New York and Washington, to Atlanta and New Orleans, $176,952.80.

Mr. ALDRICH. There should be a full attendance of the Senate after the amendment is voted on. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll; and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aldrich,	Coke,	Huntton,	Perkins,
Allen,	Cullom,	Kyle,	Pritchard,
Allison,	Davis,	Lindsay,	Pugh,
Bate,	Dixon,	Lodge,	Ransom,

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum of the Senate is present. The question recurs on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky. The Secretary informs the Chair that the yeas and nays have been ordered on the amendment.

Mr. RANSOM. No; the yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I am speaking from memory, but my recollection is that the yeas and nays were asked by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON], but were not ordered.

Mr. ALDRICH. They were not ordered.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I suggest that the vote be taken by a division.

Mr. RANSOM. I am content.

The question being put, there were on a division—yeas 18, nays 16; no quorum voting.

Mr. SHERMAN. I call for the yeas and nays on the amendment. There is a quorum here.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Let the roll be called.

Mr. CHANDLER. Nothing in order but a call of the roll to ascertain the presence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aldrich,	Coke,	Hoar,	Platt,
Allen,	Cullom,	Huntton,	Pritchard,
Bate,	Davis,	Kyle,	Pugh,
Berry,	Dixon,	Lindsay,	Ransom,

Chandler,	Hawley,	Pasco,	White,
Cockrell,	Higgins,	Peffer,	White,
	Hill,	Perkins,	Wolcott.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-six Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The question recurs on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN], on which a division has been demanded.

Mr. SHERMAN. We may as well have the yeas and nays, Mr. President. There will be no quorum otherwise.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. TELLER. I should like to have the question stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will again state the amendment.

Mr. BLACKBURN. It is a reduction of 10 per cent upon the $196,614.22.

The SECRETARY. In line 2, page 5, after the name "New Orleans," it is proposed to strike out "$196,614.22" and insert "$176,952.80."

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BLACKBURN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON], who is necessarily temporarily absent, and therefore I withhold my vote. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. COKE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. DOLPH].

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. TURPIE].

Mr. HAWLEY (when his name was called). On this question I am paired with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. DANIEL]. If he were present he would vote "nay" and I should vote "yea."

Mr. HUNTON (when his name was called). My colleague [Mr. DANIEL] is paired with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY]. I vote "nay."

Mr. BERRY (when the name of Mr. JONES of Arkansas was called). My colleague [Mr. JONES of Arkansas] is at home sick. He is paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GORDON]. If my colleague were present he would vote "yea."

Mr. McPHERSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HIGGINS]. If he were present I should vote "nay."

Mr. MITCHELL of Wisconsin (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CAREY].

Mr. WHITE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. SHOUP].

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CULLOM. I have a general pair with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. Not being advised how he would vote on this question, I withhold my vote.

Mr. McPHERSON. I am informed that an arrangement has been made to pair the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HIGGINS] with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LINDSAY], and therefore I vote, I vote "nay."

Mr. LINDSAY (after having voted in the affirmative). Under that arrangement, being paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HIGGINS], I withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 18, nays 31; as follows:

YEAS—18.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I ask whether the Chair has laid before the Senate the unfinished business coming over from yesterday?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, the title of which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 4609) to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I ask that without prejudice the unfinished business may be temporarily laid aside, and that the Senate proceed with the consideration of the Post-Office appropriation bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BLACKBURN. In line 15, on page 4, I move to strike out the words "three million two hundred and five thousand dollars" and insert in lieu thereof "two million eight hundred and eighty-four thousand five hundred dollars," which is a reduction of 10 per cent upon the existing rates paid for the rental of postal cars.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Will the Senator allow me to inquire if that is the estimate of the Department?

Mr. BLACKBURN. Exactly the amount the bill now carries is the estimate of the Department, which is $3,205,000. As the bill came to the Senate from the House it was $3,105,000. The Committee on Appropriations reported to amend by adding $100,000 to this item in the bill as it came from the House, which brought the amount up to exactly the estimates of the Department. The amendment I submit is a reduction of 10 per cent.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. On the estimates?

Mr. BLACKBURN. Not on the House bill, but on the estimates of the Department.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. If the amendment of the Senator prevails, there will be a reduction of 10 per cent from the amount estimated by the Department.

Mr. BLACKBURN. There will be a reduction in the rates of 10 per cent upon the estimates of the Department.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. A reduction of the total amount appropriated?

Mr. BLACKBURN. Precisely.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Kentucky will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 4, line 15, after the word "service," it is proposed to strike out "$3,205,000" and insert $2,884,500; so as to read:

For railway post-office car service, $2,884,500.

Mr. ALDRICH. Mr. President, in the course of the discussion upon the amendment submitted by the Senator from Kentucky a day or two ago, I asked that Senator, he being in charge of the bill, why the Committee on Appropriations had recommended an increase over the amount appropriated by the House of Representatives, and he then said it was necessary in order to extend the postal-car service. I have no doubt that the statement he then made was the correct one, and I am surprised that the Senator having the bill in charge, the Senate having voted down by a vote which I might say was almost an overwhelming one for a similar amendment in Committee of the Whole, should come here now and ask to have this appropriation cut down.

Mr. BLACKBURN. The Senator from Rhode Island, as usual, Mr. President, is technically correct. I did not say that this increase was necessary. I said that the Postmaster-General said to the subcommittee that, if the existing rates were to be maintained, the service being a constantly expanding service, it would be crippled to that extent by the reduction of $100,000 which the House of Representatives had made below the estimates.

The Senate now having refused by a rejection of the committee amendment yesterday to perpetually order a reduction of 10 per cent, the amendment which I now submit simply proposes to make a reduction of 10 per cent on this $3,205,000 appropriation. There is nothing involved in the pending amendment except the naked question as to whether there shall be made in the discretion of the Postmaster-General a reduction of 10 per cent upon the payments he is now making to the railroad companies.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I should like to inquire of the Senator in charge of the bill what he had before him or what the committee which he represents had before it, which would seem to justify the reduction in the interest of the public service or the interest of economy?

Mr. BLACKBURN. If necessary I will go back over the debate which has been indulged in by various Senators for the last four days. The Senator from Wisconsin (Mr. VILAS) submitted a related statement as to the present cost, showing that in less than every sixteen months the Government is paying for this postal car service a rental per annum equal to the cost of the construction, maintenance, repair, and operation of these postal cars. That being undisputed and indisputable, I thought it was fair to assume that no injustice would be done to the railroad companies if a reduction of 10 per cent be made. For that reason I have submitted this amendment; and that is the only question involved.

Mr. HUNTON. I desire to ask the Senator from Kentucky a question. I understood him to say while on the floor a moment ago that this reduction was in the discretion of the Postmaster-General.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I did not. I said the rates of pay were in his discretion.

Mr. HUNTON. But the rates of pay can not be in the discretion of the Postmaster-General if he has not the money to pay them. As I understand, if this amendment prevails, it will be an absolute reduction below the estimate of the Postmaster-General as to the amount necessary to run the postal cars.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Below the estimate of the Postmaster-General, predicated upon the idea that the present existing rates were to be continued.

Mr. HUNTON. No, sir; it was predicated upon the idea that the Postmaster-General still had to run the postal-car service on the old plan.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I know the word of the Senator from Virginia is good, provided it is given upon any proposition that is within the realm of his personal information; but I should like him to furnish anything in the shape of substantial evidence in support of the statement he has just made.

Mr. HUNTON. I said upon the estimate of the Postmaster-General.

Mr. BLACKBURN. The Postmaster-General makes an estimate, which the House of Representatives lacks $100,000 of giving him, predicated upon the continuance of existing rates. This amendment is predicated upon the idea of a reduction of existing rates.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I should like to ask the Senator one other question, if it does not disturb him.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Not at all.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Is the Senate to understand that this proposition is the proposition of the committee, or of the Senator himself?

Mr. BLACKBURN. It is my own proposition. The committee has not authorized it, and the amendment is offered upon my own responsibility.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. Then the situation is just this: A bill comes from the other House appropriating a certain amount of money for a certain public service; the Committee on Appropriations, of which the distinguished Senator from Kentucky is the able organ, propose to increase the amount $100,000 for reasons which, as I have assumed, were entirely satisfactory to the committee. The bill comes before the Senate, and now the member of the committee in charge of the bill, without authority from the committee, proposes a reduction of 10 per cent on the estimate of the Department. I confess I get muddled over two contradictory propositions of that kind, and scarcely know what I ought to do.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I am very much obliged to the Senator for having furnished me the opportunity of showing how unfair his statement is.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I do not want to be unfair.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I know the Senator does not, and that is the reason I am glad to correct him. The House of Representatives sent this bill here for the support of the postal service for the coming fiscal year with a reduction in this item of $100,000 below the estimates of the Department. The Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, as stated by the Senator from Oregon, increased it by $100,000 of shortage and went to the estimate of the Department. So far the Senator from Oregon is correct. Now he says that the committee having done that, I, as the representative on this bill of that committee, propose to reduce the whole amount by 10 per cent. That is not fair. The Senator has told part of the truth, but he did not take the oath usually administered in courts of justice, of which he is such an ornament professionally, and he did not tell all the truth.

The Committee on Appropriations did add $100,000, but with it coupled an amendment, which is printed and before the Senator's eyes in italics, which was yesterday stricken out by the Senate; so that I am not running counter to the action of my committee, but, upon the contrary, the committee did not report an addition of $100,000 and stop there, but it reported an addition of $100,000 and coupled with it a condition printed here in the bill in italics, which did at least as much as this in the direction of reduction, but that proposed amendment of the committee was yesterday beaten by a vote of the Senate. So the committee does not stand before the Senate now recommending the $100,000 increase over the bill as it came from the House. It only recommended that increase, provided the Senate agreed to that italicized amendment which the Senate has rejected, and consequently the Committee on Appropriations is not committed to the increase of $100,000.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. How does the Senator claim that that italicized amendment is a reduction? It may or it may not be, Mr. BLACKBURN. No, sir. It says:

Said sum shall be expended under the direction and in the discretion of the Postmaster-General, and any provision of existing law in conflict herewith is hereby repealed.

And every Senator who opposed that committee amendment took the ground that it was a repeal of the sliding schedule in the act of March 3, 1873, which would result in a reduction of compensation.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. But the Senator himself admits that that sliding schedule, of which he speaks, is the old act of 1873, I believe?

Mr. BLACKBURN. Yes.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. That act was subsequently amended.

Mr. BLACKBURN. It never has been amended.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. It simply fixes the maximum rate beyond which the Postmaster-General can not go under the law as it stood then, as it stands now, and as it will forever stand until it is amended by this or by some other proposition. There was no fixing of rates by that except to fix the maximum. The Postmaster-General had the discretion and has the discretion now under the law to reduce the amount to whatever he thinks is a proper figure in order to do justice by the public service and at the same time exercise a proper economy on the subject.

So I do not understand, Mr. President, so far as I am concerned as a member of the Senate, that the proposed amendment of the committee in italics, of which the Senator speaks, is a reduction at all. It does not have that effect. Consequently, it at least seems to me, with all due deference to the Senator in charge of the bill, that the proposition he now submits on his own motion is in direct contradiction, as I understand it, to the proposition of the committee.

Mr. BLACKBURN. None so blind, Mr. President, as those who will not see. I submit this amendment on my own responsibility.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. President, there does not seem to be any necessity for confusion with regard to this matter. The Senate yesterday, as in Committee of the Whole, voted down two propositions by decided majorities, once a proposition to put the whole matter of the expenditure of this $3,205,000 in the hands of the Postmaster-General. That was voted down. The second proposition to reduce the present rates 10 per cent was also voted down. Now the Senator from Kentucky seeks to reach the same end proposed by his former amendment by cutting down the rates by this amendment. That is all there is about it.

Mr. FAULKNER. I should like to ask the Senator from Kentucky one question before I vote on this motion, and that is, whether the Postmaster-General to-day under the law has not the authority to reduce the cost of this transportation if in his judgment he deems it wise and in the interests of the public service so to do?

Mr. BLACKBURN. Oh, yes; and he has had that same discretionary power for twenty-two years; but no Postmaster-General has ever exercised it or reduced the compensation below the maximum rates allowed by law.

Mr. FAULKNER. Is it not to be assumed that the Postmaster-General, knowing better than we do about this, thinks it is not in the interest of the public service that the reduction should be made?

Mr. BLACKBURN. That is a violent assumption, and, in my judgment, and unwarranted conclusion, when the present Postmaster-General comes before the subcommittee and says the rates are too high, and my honorable friend from Wisconsin [Mr. VILAS], who was Postmaster-General for nearly four years, stood here in a very full discussion of this amendment yesterday and concurred in the opinion of the present head of that Department that the rates are too high.

Mr. MITCHELL of Oregon. I may be mistaken, but I understood the Senator from Wisconsin yesterday to say that when he was Postmaster-General he did on more than one occasion reduce the amount below the maximum.

Mr. VILAS. That was as to the weight pay, not as to this compensation.

Mr. BLACKBURN. That was only as to the mail compensation by the hundred weight.

Mr. ALDRICH. I desire to read from the RECORD a statement made by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN] in debate on February 13. In answer to a question asked by me as to why the Committee on Appropriations saw fit to increase this appropriation, the Senator from Kentucky said:

Because that service is extending every day and more money will be needed every year, even though you reduce the rates.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I say so now.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN].

Mr. BRICE. Mr. President, I do not understand that this is an amendment offered by the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. BLACKBURN. No, sir.

Mr. BRICE. But by an individual member of the Committee on Appropriations.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. That is correct.

Mr. BRICE. Mr. President, as a member of that committee I oppose the amendment for the reason given in the extract read by the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH], which appears in the RECORD of the 13th instant, and for the further reason that after this amendment shall be disposed of I purpose offering an amendment to another portion of the bill dividing the appropriation made for the fast mail service between the railroad lines running from the northeastern portion of the country to the Southern States, and a similar line extending from the northwestern portion of the country to the Southern States. I desire the appropriation to be increased for the fast mail service rather than diminished.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN].

Mr. BLACKBURN. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BLACKBURN (when his name was called). I should vote "yea," but I am paired with the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON], who is necessarily absent to-day.

Mr. CULLOM (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. GRAY]. Not knowing how he would vote, I withhold my vote. If I were at liberty to vote I should vote "nay."

Mr. GIBSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from Michigan [Mr. BURROWS], and withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON] to the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. IBBY] and vote "yea."

Mr. BATE. I am paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr.

GORDON]. I transfer my pair to the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. JONES] and vote "yea."

Mr. BURROWS. I am paired with the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. GIBSON].

The result was announced—YEAS 19, NAYS 36; as follows:

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BRICE. I move to insert on page 5, line 2, after the words "New Orleans."

And for necessary and special facilities on trunk lines from Louisville, Covington, and Newport, Ky., and Cincinnati, Ohio, to Chattanooga and Nashville, Tenn.; for Atlanta, Ga.; Knoxville, Tenn.; Birmingham, Ala.; Meridian, Miss.; New Orleans, La., and Texas points.

Mr. HUNTON. I raise the point of order on the amendment.

Mr. BRICE. The effect of the amendment is not to increase the appropriation, but to divide the special appropriation which has heretofore, by the previous wording of the act, been taken away from the supervision of the Postmaster-General and expended entirely out of the Blue Ridge. It is to divide that sum between the line extending from the Northeastern States to the Southwestern States and another line extending from Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Louisville, and that region to the same destination.

Mr. LODGE. It is true the amendment does not raise or lower an appropriation, but it does alter existing law by dividing an existing fund and revising the law in regard to it. That fund is now by law used for the fast carriage of mails between certain points. It is now proposed to compel a division of an already existing fund by a fast-mail route to other points. The amendment also diverts a portion of the appropriation to a purpose for which no estimate has been submitted.

Mr. RANSOM. Not a bit.

Mr. LODGE. And it has not been considered, so far as I know, by any committee of the Senate. I think the point of order is well taken.

Mr. CALL. I have an amendment to that of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICE], if he will accept it, providing for special facilities to Havana, Cuba, via Key West, Fla.

Mr. BRICE. I accept the amendment.

Mr. CALL. I will state to the Senate that this appropriation for many years was confined to the fast-mail service from Springfield, Mass., over the coast line, via Jacksonville, Tampa, Key West, to Havana, Cuba. It was justified by the fact that it was no expense to the Government, as the returns from the foreign mails contributed, if not entirely, very largely to that fund. Last year the appropriation was taken away from that line and given to a route via New Orleans. I make no objection to that, although we opposed it at the time. But I ask that it shall now embrace a line through Florida.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Florida propose an amendment?

Mr. CALL. The Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICE] has accepted the amendment which I propose to his amendment.

Mr. ALDRICH. Let the amendment to the amendment be stated.

The SECRETARY. Add to the amendment the words:

For necessary and special facilities on trunk lines via Jacksonville, Tampa, and Key West, Fla., to Havana, Cuba.

Mr. BRICE. If the Senator from Florida will strike out the last three words, "to Havana, Cuba," I will accept the amendment.

Mr. CALL. I strike out those words.

Mr. LODGE. I do not think the modification offered by the Senator from Florida makes the amendment any less objectionable to the point of order. It seems to me it rather increases it. It would bring in still further legislation that has not been passed

¹ wholesome, and may appoint inspectors who shall be authorized to require heretofore. About the same time I introduced another bill to increase the single minimum price of all public lands to $2.50 per acre. That proposition has not met the approval of the House Committee on Public Lands. The minimum price now for all the public lands, including those involved in this bill, is $1.25 an acre, and now, since my general proposition has not been approved by the House, and since the Senate has amended this bill so as to put these isolated tracts of land upon the same basis as to the minimum price as the other public lands of the United States, I will not oppose it.

Mr. REED. But why did the gentleman from Arkansas in his bill fix the price of these lands at $2.50?

Mr. MCRAE. I did that, because I thought the price ought to be $2.50 for all of our lands.

Mr. REED. Then why do you not stand by it?

Mr. MCRAE. I have stood by it as far as I could without endangering the defeat of this bill. The other general bill has not been even favorably reported by the Committee on Public Lands, and if it is not passed it would of course be unjust to put these the most worthless of our lands at $2.50 and let the other more valuable public lands be rated at $1.25 per acre.

Mr. COOMBS. Does it necessarily follow that these are worthless lands?

Mr. PICKLER. No. Some of these lands are good lands.

Mr. MCRAE. Under this bill these isolated tracts of our lands can not be disposed of unless the area of the tract is less than a homestead is entitled to under the law, and the lands before being sold must have been subject to homestead entry for at least three years.

Mr. PICKLER. This bill, as I understand, allows the sale of tracts of less than 160 acres—tracts, for instance, of 120 or 100 acres. It very often happens that there are fractional tracts which, although the land is just as good as any other, are not taken up as homesteads because the quantity is less than 160 acres. It seems to me that we ought not to sell in this way tracts of more than 80 acres, because tracts exceeding that area might be taken by some homesteader.

Mr. MCRAE. That is not probable, and besides no such change can be made in the bill now.

Mr. PICKLER. I believe this is a good bill. These fractional tracts are scattered here and there; and nobody takes them as homesteads, so that they are not doing anyone any good. But I should not like to see any great quantity of these lands sold at the price named.

Mr. MCRAE. No land can be treated under this bill as isolated or disconnected until it has been subject to homestead entry for three years; that after all the lands adjoining have been disposed of and settlers refuse to enter for three years that the lands can not be of much value.

Mr. PICKLER. And any tract to be sold must be less than 160 acres.

Mr. MCRAE. It must be less than one quarter section, and a full quarter is 160 acres.

Mr. KIEFER. Does the bill specify the number of acres?

Mr. MCRAE. It must be less than a quarter section. If there is as much as a quarter section, either full or fractional, the land can not be treated under the bill as isolated or disconnected; and even if the quantity is less than that the land must have been subject to homestead entry for three years. Besides, the lands will be offered at public sale, with a guaranty of the minimum price and fees.

Mr. COOMBS. I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that the provisions of this bill are not limited to fractional sections in detached positions, but apply to all detached lands.

Mr. MCRAE. Less than a quarter section.

Mr. COOMBS. May there not be some valuable timber lands which somebody is trying to get hold of by means of this bill?

Mr. MCRAE. If the gentleman had had any experience with timber lands he would know that no person would be satisfied with any tract of 120 acres for timber purposes, and to protect against any abuse in that direction the bill now provides that not exceeding 160 acres shall be sold to any one person.

Mr. PICKLER. As I understand, none of these lands are to be sold until homesteaders have had three years to take them if they want to do so.

Mr. MCRAE. That is true, and it is an additional restriction over the old law. So far as concerns the proposed price of $2.50 an acre, I am responsible for that, and still believe it best if it could be made general. But as I have failed in that effort, for the time being I will not oppose this. As the Committee on Public Lands has disagreed with me, and the Senate in amending the bill has signified its opposition, I see no chance at this late day of increasing the single minimum price of all lands to $2.50. I admit that it would be wrong to put this class of lands at double the price of all other public lands. If my general proposition should ever prevail these isolated tracts would be covered by it.

The SPEAKER. The question is on concurring in the amendment of the Senate.

The amendment was concurred in.

On motion of Mr. NEILL, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was concurred in was laid on the table.

WOMEN AS SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 1717) to authorize the appointment of women as public school trustees in the District of Columbia.

The SPEAKER. This bill was amended by the House; the Senate has disagreed to the amendment of the House, and asks a conference. The amendment will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

At the end of line 6 add the following:
And for this purpose the number of trustees of said board shall be increased from 9 to 11, not more than 2 of whom shall be women.

Mr. HEARD. I move that the House insist on its amendment, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

Mr. PICKLER. What change has been made by the Senate to this bill?

The SPEAKER. The Senate has disagreed to an amendment of the House and asked a conference.

Mr. MEREDITH. I should like to know the effect of the action taken by the Senate. Does it provide that women shall be left off this board?

Mr. HEARD. The bill, as passed by the Senate, authorized the appointment of women as school trustees, but put no limitation upon the number.

Mr. MEREDITH. They ought not to be trustees at all.

Mr. HEARD. The amendment of the House, upon which I have moved to insist, limits the number of female members of the board to two.

The motion of Mr. HEARD was agreed to.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. CADMUS, Mr. HEARD, and Mr. ALDRICH as conferees on the part of the House.

SURVEYOR'S OFFICE, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (S. 444), making the surveyor of the District of Columbia a salaried officer, and to provide for more efficient service in the surveyor's office, with House amendment disagreed to by the Senate and a request for a conference on the part of the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House insist on its amendments and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

Mr. DINGLEY. I hope the gentleman from Missouri will understand in conference that this is not merely a formal disagreement.

Mr. HEARD. Mr. Speaker, I think I need not say to the gentleman from Maine that whenever I have had anything to do with a conference on the part of the House I have always sought, as I will hereafter, to try to make it express the exact will of the House. I feel assured that the conference committee will be cognizant of its duty to the House and will not fail to observe the action taken by the House with reference to this or any other matter committed to it.

The motion of Mr. HEARD was agreed to.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of Mr. COBB of Alabama, Mr. HULL, and Mr. COOPER of Indiana as conferees on the part of the House.

REFERENCE OF SENATE BILLS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House bills of the Senate of the following titles: which were referred as indicated, namely:

A bill (S. 2409) granting certain lands in the abandoned military reservation at Fort McKinney, Johnson County, Wyo., to the State of Wyoming for public purposes—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

A bill (S. 2576) for the erection of a public building at Paris, Ky.—to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. TERRY of Virginia, for this day, on account of sickness.

DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported a bill (H. R. 8992) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, for prior years, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

Mr. BRECKINRIDGE. I desire to give notice, Mr. Speaker, that I shall ask the House to consider this bill immediately after the naval appropriation bill has been disposed of.

PRESIDENTIAL OFFICE, BARRANVILLE, IRE.

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 8709) for the relief of the trustees of the Presbyterian Church, of Dardanelle, Yell County, Ark.

THE SPEAKER. The bill will be read, subject to the right of objection.

The bill was read at length.

Mr. TERRY. I will state in connection with this matter—
Mr. DINGLEY. I reserve the right of objection until we can hear an explanation of this matter or have the report read.

Mr. TERRY. I wish to state, with the consent of the House, one fact before the report is read.

When this bill was called up for unanimous consent some time ago, objection was made to it by the gentleman from New York [Mr. RAY]. After a consultation with him, we agreed upon an amendment which he considered satisfactory and withdrew his objection. When I called it up again objection was then made to it by the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, but we got together and finally prepared an amendment to obviate his objection, and the bill when so amended will read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 559) for the relief of the trustees of the Presbyterian Church of Dardanelle, Yell County, Ark.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause to be investigated by the Quartermaster's Department of the United States Army the circumstances, character, and extent of the damages by the United States troops during the late war of the church building and grounds of the Presbyterian Church of Dardanelle, Yell County, Ark., and the actual value of the building and material taken, and report to Congress the result of such investigation.

That is all there is of it. It simply provides for an investigation and all report to Congress of the result of such investigation.

Mr. REED. Is the gentleman prepared to make an investigation by the Quartermaster's Department of all cases of that sort which arose in the South during the war? If it is not his purpose to do so, it would seem better that we should not begin.

Mr. TERRY. If the gentleman from Maine will permit me—by order of the Commanding General of the Armies of the United States, approved by President Lincoln himself, in 1863 it was expressly directed that no interference on the part of the military forces should be had with churches or schools—

Mr. REED. That is right.

Mr. TERRY. But in this case they did tear down the buildings and used them for barracks, as I understand—

Mr. COOMBS. Does not that bring it under the general law?

Mr. TERRY. Well, it has been under such "general" law for all of these years, that I have never been able to get anything on account of the damage done. The claim was filed in 1870, as I understand, and I suppose is now in the War Department; and there is no reason on earth why the Department should not make an investigation and ascertain the facts in connection with the matter. They are not asked to make an appropriation, but simply to report their findings.

Mr. REED. That is to say, all you want to do now is to get the camel's nose into it.

Mr. TERRY. Well, if the gander has a right to get in I do not see why we should keep it out. [Laughter.]

Mr. REED. My reference to natural history was to the camel, not the "gander." [Laughter.]

Mr. TERRY. Well, I understood you to say you "gander."

THE SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

Mr. CANNON of Illinois. I want to make just this suggestion to the gentleman, that the Second Deputy Comptroller is very handy now in auditing accounts presented of this character where property has been used for the erection of barracks, quarters, etc., which goes to the occupation of churches, schoolhouses, and matters of that kind. The matter has been undergoing an investigation before the committee over which the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SAYERS] presides, in connection with the deficiency bill, and the knife has been used quite freely so far as that class of cases is concerned, and the approval of the gentleman from Texas, and used to cut out all of that class of claims. It seems to me that matter had better be fought out before we, by resolution of Congress or otherwise, journey any further along this line.

Mr. TERRY. I hope the gentleman will withhold his objection until I have finished my statement.

If the gentleman wants to establish the principle there is no case where he can better do than on these claims that come with the blessing of an audit by the accounting officers of the Treasury, and in view of the fact that it will enable us to establish the principle, and in view of the fact that until it is established it seems to me it is an unnecessary and improper expense, and that we should not go further along this line, therefore, while I rarely object to anything in the House, yet for the reasons indicated I feel constrained to object to this.

THE SPEAKER. Objection is made.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PLATT, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with amendments a bill and joint resolution of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

Joint resolution (H. Res. 209) authorizing the Secretary of War to deliver condemned cannon to Asher Gaylord Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Plymouth, Pa., and to Eckley B. Cox Post, Grand Army of the Republic, of Freedom, Pa.
The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (S. 2726) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Missouri River at or near the city of Lexington, Mo.," approved July 26, 1894;

A bill (S. 2365) for the relief of Northup & Chick; and

A bill (S. 2377) for the relief of H. F. Menough, late postmaster at Rock Springs, Wyo.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. PEARSON, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles, when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (S. 2355) to establish a life-saving station at or near City Point, Boston Harbor, Massachusetts;

A bill (S. 1813) providing an additional circuit judge in the ninth judicial circuit;

A bill (H. R. 4293) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon in the city of Cumberland, Md.;

A bill (H. R. 109) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at South Omaha, in the State of Nebraska;

A bill (H. R. 2337) for the erection of a public building at Newport, Ky.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEE.

The following reports of committee were handed in at the Clerk's desk, referred to their appropriate Calendar, and otherwise disposed of as indicated below:

PUBLIC BUILDING, NEWPORT NEWS, VA.

Mr. MCKAIG, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back favorably the bill (S. 915) for the erection of a public building for the use of the custom-house and post-office at Newport News, in the district of Virginia, which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BUILDING IN THE CITIES OF WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.

Mr. MCKAIG, also from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back the bill (S. 2003) to provide for the erection of a public building in the cities of Winston-Salem, N. C.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

WARREN C. BEACH.

Mr. CURTIS of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 8715) to place Warren C. Beach on the retired list of the Army.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to place on the retired list of the Army, by the rank of captain, Warren C. Beach, provided, That the said Warren C. Beach shall not, by virtue of such retirement, be any longer entitled to back, present, or future pay or allowances of any kind whatsoever.

THE SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to consider this bill. Is there objection?

Mr. SAYERS. Let us have an explanation of it.

THE SPEAKER. Without objection, the gentleman from New York can make a short explanation.

Mr. CURTIS of New York. Captain Beach graduated from West Point and served twenty-one years in the Army. Then, being in failing health, and having some business to attend to in another part of the country, being out on the plains, he asked to be retired or to have leave of absence. He did not get an order for either. He resigned, expecting, however, that after he got to Washington and attended to his business he could be ordered before a retiring board. That failed. He is now willing to take retirement, without having any pay for the past or future, but simply placing him on the army list as an officer. There is precedent for that.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I object to that bill.

Subsequently Mr. SAYERS withdrew his objection.

THE SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

mittee of the Whole, reported that they had had under consideration the naval appropriation bill and had come to no resolution thereon.

DONATION OF CONDEMNED CANNON.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, a day or two ago was submitted to the House by the Speaker a Senate act donating some condemned cannon from the navy-yard at Portsmouth, N. H., to the Iowa State Museum, at Des Moines, and it was referred by mistake to the Committee on Military Affairs. In reporting the bill back from that committee, I ask unanimous consent that it be now put upon its passage, as I think it can be disposed of in two or three minutes.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to supply the Iowa Historical Museum, Des Moines, Iowa, on the request of the governor, with two condemned cannon and one condemned seacoast mortar from the Portsmouth Navy-Yard, N. H., the title of Iowa to pay all the expenses of transportation, etc.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HULL, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

BILLOXI AND BACK BAY BRIDGE.

Mr. STOCKDALE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 8459) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the Biloxi and Back Bay Bridge Company to construct a bridge over that portion of the Bay of Biloxi, in the State of Mississippi, known as Back Bay."

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act to authorize the Biloxi and Back Bay Bridge Company to construct and maintain a bridge over that portion of the Bay of Biloxi, in the State of Mississippi, known as Back Bay," approved August 27, 1894, be, and the same is hereby, amended as follows: In section 6, line 3, strike out "one year" and insert instead thereof the words "two years."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. STOCKDALE, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

CORRECTION.

Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, on Wednesday last the Committee on the District of Columbia sent up to the desk and asked the House to consider Senate bill No. 2521, to amend the charter of the Metropolitan Railroad Company of the District of Columbia, and the House considered and passed the bill. The bill was read and the bill was acted upon by the House, but the official reporters, in procuring a copy for the RECORD, were misled into using the original print of the bill as it was introduced in the Senate. I ask now that the proper bill be substituted, so that it may stand correct in the permanent RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection the correction will be made.

REAR-ADMIRAL J. H. RUSSELL.

Mr. ROBINSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate bill 864, to authorize the payment to Rear-Admiral John H. Russell, of the United States Navy, of the highest pay of his grade.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in consideration of the eminent and conspicuous services rendered by Rear-Admiral John H. Russell, of the United States Navy, retired, particularly in that on the night of September 13, 1891, while holding the rank of lieutenant, he voluntarily commanded an expedition of about 100 officers and men which destroyed the Confederate war vessel Judith, which was fully armed, manned, and equipped, and moored at the Pensacola Navy Yard in the presence of over 100 soldiers who were stationed at the yard, and in the face of numerous batteries, one-fifth of his command being either killed or wounded, he being among the latter, and in that he served faith fully and commendably during the subsequent years of the war of the rebellion in important commands and has never received any special promotion or advancement in number, said Rear-Admiral John H. Russell shall receive the highest pay of his grade.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. SAYERS. Let us have some explanation of the bill. Let the report be read.

The SPEAKER. The report is quite long. Is there objection to the present consideration of this bill?

Mr. TALBERT of South Carolina. I object.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a bill (H. R. 8272) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, and for other purposes, with amendments of the Senate thereto.

Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House nonconcur in the Senate amendments and ask for a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The motion was agreed to, and the Speaker appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. HENDERSON of North Carolina, Mr. DUNPHY, and Mr. LOUD.

ASSISTANT ENGINEER, ETC., HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. SHELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the desk.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That in addition to the sum of $300 to be paid out of the contingent fund of the House of Representatives for an assistant engineer and three additional laborers, under resolution of January 24, 1895, the Clerk of the House be and is hereby authorized and directed to pay from the contingent fund of the House, for the same purposes and at the same rates of pay, the further sum of $50.28.

Mr. SAYERS. Mr. Speaker, I should like to know why this is presented.

Mr. SHELL. It is simply because of a mistake in the original resolution. We asked for the full amount, but the House passed the resolution for $300.

Mr. SAYERS. And with the expenditure of this sum the services of this man are concluded and paid for, I understand?

Mr. SHELL. Yes, sir.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of this resolution?

Mr. ROBINSON of Pennsylvania. I object.

THE LATE SENATOR COLQUITT.

The SPEAKER (at 2 o'clock p. m.). The Clerk will report the special order.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the third Saturday in February next, beginning at 10 o'clock p. m., be set apart for eulogies on the life of the Hon. Alfred H. Colquitt, late a Senator from the State of Georgia.

Mr. TURNER of Georgia. I offer the resolutions which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the business of the House be now suspended until opportunity may be given for tribute to the memory of Alfred H. Colquitt, late a Senator from the State of Georgia.

Resolved, That as a particular mark of respect to the memory of the deceased and in recognition of his eminent abilities as a public servant, the House of Representatives, at the conclusion of these memorial services, adjourn.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate.

Resolved, That the Clerk be instructed to send a copy of these resolutions to the Secretary of the Senate.

The question being taken, the resolutions were unanimously adopted.

Mr. TURNER of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, Alfred Holt Colquitt was born in Walton County, Ga., April 20, 1824; graduated at Princeton College in the class of 1844; studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1845; served as a staff officer with the rank of major during the war with Mexico; was elected and served as a member of the Thirty-third Congress; was a member of the Georgia legislature in 1850; was a Presidential elector for the State at large on the Breckinridge ticket in 1860; was in order of the secession convention of the State of Georgia; entered the Confederate army as captain; was subsequently chosen colonel of the Sixth Georgia Infantry; served as brigadier-general and was commissioned as a major-general; was elected governor of the State in 1866 and re-elected to that office at the expiration of his term as governor he was elected to the Senate of the United States for the term commencing March 4, 1883, and was re-elected in 1885. Such was his own account of his life. Though modest and humble in appearance of great distinction, becoming early and terminating only at his death. It omits any mention of his education at college, his deeds of gallantry in two wars, and his good example to his political convictions, though some times harshly expressed. His does this sketch contain even an allusion to his ministries in the State and all the enterprises of the Methodist Church, though his religious opinions were performed while he was a member of the Senate. In one of his last speeches in the Senate is closed with the following words:

It is unnecessary to mention

It is interesting to note how closely he followed the footsteps of his distinguished father, Walter T. Colquitt. The latter was also educated at Princeton College, was a lawyer of great reputation, a member of the supreme court of the State, and a member of the general assembly of the State. He was a member of Congress, a member of the Senate of the United States, and a minister of the Methodist Church. The connection of the father and son are so nearly identical that it is hard to believe in the coincidence. The line of the family's life seems to have been a traditionary one of that of the father. Let us know that the son of Alfred H. Colquitt was the worthy of his father, and that he was a member of the same part of the history of the State.

I leave readers more intimately acquainted with the life of quitt the highest office of a friend, an affectionate tribute to his private traits and virtues and a minute detail of the elements of his character and conduct. His manhood began in affluence; he died poor. He had no extravagant habits, and in a money-loving age he was content with a moderate living, and never repined over the great losses entailed by an unsuccessful war. The patriotic devotion of his family during his long affliction was the fittest reward for his own generous solicitude as husband and father. He lived in a historic era, and in all its mighty movements he occupied leading positions. And amid them all, with their great anxieties and temptations, he seems to have professed that highest ideal of life which covets public confidence for the opportunities it affords for usefulness, and yet reverently worships God. We can all deplore the loss of a man in whom the spirit of his life is consistent with the loftiest courage in the hour of battle, the most enduring public favor, and the serene fortitude of a Christian in the article of death!

Mr. BLAIR. Mr. Speaker, it was my good fortune to be associated with Senator Colquitt for about eight years in the other House of Congress, and although not intimately acquainted in a general sense, yet there was a consanguinity of views between us. I can recall certain great lines of thought and action which gave me a feeling of nearness and almost of kinship, which did not require frequent expression in order that both might understand its existence. I therefore drop my sprig of evergreen upon his grave to-day with the feeling that I, too, have lost a brother.

Others more familiar with the details of his record have already explained them and in both of these great halls of legislation have pronounced in fitting terms that glory which belongs to those whose illustrious lives deserve immortality among their fellow-men. My tribute may well be brief and such as one gives spontaneously and aside as he moves silently in the procession to the tomb of the beloved.

Senator Colquitt was a distinctively elevating force in the Senate and throughout the country. Modest and unpretending to the last degree, yet firm and full of assertion when important principles were involved, he was felt even though unheard, and when those whose illustrious lives deserve immortality among their fellow-men. My tribute may well be brief and such as one gives spontaneously and aside as he moves silently in the procession to the tomb of the beloved.

He seldom spoke at his best except upon some theme which aroused the moral and religious side of his nature, and then it was that his wonderful organization revealed the full power of the physical, intellectual, and moral elements of human nature in combined and harmonious action. At such times he was eloquent in the highest sense, and his power over the Senate and over popular assemblies was very great.

The inspiration of the occasion would overcome all reserve, and the great cause would seem to transform him into a superior being. While in the Senate he spoke repeatedly and with great power upon the evils of intemperance and in support of Sabbath observance, as well as upon education and kindred subjects, and I think it will be admitted that the influence he exerted in favor of these fundamental and everlasting human interests will constitute his chief, as they certainly will his undeniable, claim to the gratitude of posterity.

I well remember the unflinching support which the Senators from Georgia, the empire State of the South, always gave to the education bill, and that Mr. Colquitt was very anxious for its success. Few men more than he comprehended the calamity involved in its failure. Senator Brown also, one of the great statesmen of our generation, has placed on record speeches and sentiments of the same value as those which I am coming to think of, when the events of our day can be faithfully written and their relative importance seen in just perspective, will enbalm his memory in the gratitude of the ages.

Senator Brown was the great plebeian whose native force carried him to the summit of attainment and power among his fellow-men in the hard attrition and competition of free institutions.

Senator Colquitt was the son of wealth and social position, the representative of the great patrician element which constituted the most remarkable aristocracy of history.

These men were the most perfectly connected and yet contrasted illustration that I have known in their harmonious and full-orbed action as Senators of their State of the extraordinary manner in which our system of theoretically free Government blends the activities and interests of every grade and class of men into one grand unity of action, of progress, and of elevation to all.

This power of a harmonious blending of classes and conditions of men was the one thing lacking in the institutions of Greece and Rome, and those Republics fell.

But who shall pretend to say whether Franklin, the plebeian, or Jefferson, the patrician, contributed the most to the foundation of American liberty? And it is because the principles which they promulgated and the institutions which embodied their teachings possess this power of drawing all men unto themselves that our Republic shall be everlasting.

I can never forget the last time I saw Senator Colquitt. It was not long before his death. Stricken and disabled, he was making his way on the little vehicle which was used to enable him to move about in the open air and between his residence and the Senate. He was then on his way to the scene of duty. We had not met for a considerable time, and then both were in full health and strength. But little was said, and the interview was not in words.

I encouraged him with all the hopeful suggestions that I could think of, and he smiled and talked bravely of the restoration to come. But neither deceived the other, and those great eyes blazing with a fixed and far-off penetrating vision clearly that the light of the world was passing from him. I saw clearly that the spirit. We knew that we had thought some thoughts and attempted some deeds together, and that an immortal sympathy was born of our association. But for this world we then knew that it was all over. He is the better off. Rest to his ashes! Everlasting bliss to his soul! Let us take up our burden and move on.

Mr. LAWSON. Mr. Speaker, I hope that someone more competent than myself to speak of the life and character of Senator Colquitt will seize this opportunity to do so. I never had the good fortune to enjoy an intimate and confidential acquaintance with him; we lived far apart, and our different lines of employment seldom brought us together. I was more intimately associated with him and had better opportunities to acquaint myself with his personal characteristics during the last months of his life than ever before. During those few months I daily met with him and his amiable and excellent family, who had come here to minister to the ailments of his father.

But I, like every Georgian, could not fail to know of his public career as a soldier and statesman, and as a trusted and honored governor and Senator, strongly intrenched in the love and confidence of the people of Georgia, his native State.

Senator Colquitt was ushered into life upon an elevated plane. Few have been so fortunate in their birth as he. His father was a man of great distinction as an orator, lawyer, Senator of the United States, and last, but not least, as a minister of the gospel. The traditions cherished by the old men of Georgia, the fame of his father as a successful criminal lawyer and as a political debater on the hustings is not exceeded by that of any one of the great men who were his contemporaries. He is thought by many to have been the equal in many respects of Toombs, Stephens, Johnson, and Cobb, who subsequently attained to the zenith of their fame.

Senator Colquitt descended from such a father, and inheriting many of his personal traits, it is said, was also the recipient of a liberal education, having graduated from Princeton, N. J., a college which at that period stood in the front ranks of the institutions of learning and which yet preserves a high reputation. After his graduation he espoused the profession of law, and no one probably ever had spread out before him a future more fruitful of splendid achievements and honorable successes.

Judging from his industry, singleness of purpose, and consecration to duty, as manifested in his subsequent career, we may assume that he would have become an ornament to his profession had he submitted to its severe exactions and worshipped at the shrine of Justice instead of Mars. But the literature of Coke and Blackstone and the search for dull and musty precedents could not enchain his ardent temperament and martial spirit when the music of drum and fife summoned patriots to arms.

Laying aside his books and hurrying to the laurels to be won by his country and his family, he hurried to Mexico, where the honor of his country and the chivalry of its soldiery were to be sustained and illustrated on the field of battle. Bravely and gallantly performing his part on this arena and flushed with the victories that everywhere crowned the American arms, at the close of the war he returned to his native State, and instead of resuming his chosen profession preferred rather the peaceful though no less dignified occupation of a farmer.

Nothing recorded in ancient or modern history is comparable to the ease and luxury enjoyed by a Southern planter at that period. His happy condition elicited the envy of the world, an envy which many mistook for philanthropy. To be the proprietor of broad and fertile acres, cultivated by African slaves who never felt the severities of cold, hunger, and nakedness, as do many of the suffering poor of the present day, who gave themselves to the plow, who never suffered the lack of any substantial good, whose happiness and contentment were only surpassed by the boundless hospitality that nourished them, and whose love and devotion to the master were only equaled by that of his children, was indeed a princely heritage.

Such was the happy fortune of Senator Colquitt in his early manhood and until the suffrages of a free and confiding constituency called him while yet a young man to represent them in the House of Representatives of the United States. And having honorably discharged the duties required in that station he, unlike the am-

In reading over the contract carefully, however, the Secretary of the Treasury with the syndicate of foreign bankers found that it part of the consideration is that they will not use their power to coerce or squeeze the Government until next October if they can have the advantages of the contract and this is the consideration for the large bonus they have secured in the contract. This is the consideration for obtaining bonds for a premium of four and a fraction, when under the market price on the day the contract was made that class of bonds would be worth nineteen and a little over at the same rate of interest. This is paying a premium of 15 per cent for gold. This is the way the President maintains the parity of the two metals.

It seems to me that it ought now to be apparent to everybody that the gold is coiled. If they have the power to prevent the export of gold, to control the gold for nine months and not make another squeeze during that time, it shows that we are entirely in their power, and it puts the United States in the most humiliating position of acknowledging that a gold combination have it by the throat, and that it must comply with their demands, however disastrous. The United States secures only a temporary peace until next October by paying the vast bonus. This demand comes in the language of the highwayman. What do the gold kings demand next October?

If they have that power over the country, the country ought to know it.

In view of that fact it shows how absurd it is for the people of the United States to depend upon this syndicate, this combination, for their circulating medium. If we continue to acknowledge that power as superior to the Government, as this contract does, it shows that this is a Government of a gold oligarchy and not a Government of the people. The idea that this great Government should be bound to pay millions to buy its peace for nine months, to make a humiliating contract, to submit to conditions that are perfectly ruinous!

I hope Senators will read the contract and see at what sacrifice the Government is made to buy its peace from its rulers, the gold kings, until next October. I hope the resolution will be read again at length.

Mr. GRAY. Let the resolution be read.

The Secretary again read the resolution.

Mr. STEWART. As a Senator has suggested, a part of the contract is to protect the United States. To protect the United States! What a humiliating position that we need the protection of a gold ring! Seventy million people in this great country have got to buy the protection of a gold ring!

Mr. GRAY. Mr. President, the resolution offered on Saturday by the Senator from Nevada opens up a very wide range of discussion on which I do not propose to embark in the morning hour. But I do propose to say a word or two in regard to the topics that were discussed at some length in the morning hour on Saturday. I do not take it that anything in the matter then before the Senate or in any topic suggested by the resolution of the Senator from Nevada to-day involves the question that has been debated so long and so earnestly on both sides, especially upon one side, as to whether silver shall be admitted to free coinage in the mints of the United States.

I do not believe that the question whether we should declare a policy that is consistent, as we believe, with honesty and absolutely necessary to the credit of our Government has anything to do with the vital question that separates those who believe in free-silver coinage by the United States alone and those who believe that it is not practicable to have free-silver coinage and maintain bimetalism unless in cooperation with the civilized powers of the world.

So I discard that topic and wish to say a word or two suggested by the remarks of the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. WOLCOTT] and the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] on Saturday. I do not know why a proposition such as that offered by the Senator from New York [Mr. HILL] should have been the occasion for such a violent assault upon the Administration as was made by the Senator from Massachusetts. After the very ample and lucid explanation of the situation given by the Senator from New York and the argument he made, which was a persuasive one, in favor of the adoption of his resolution, I do not believe that there was anything to provoke the attack, which, to use the expression that was used quite frequently on Saturday, seemed to me a "wanton" one on the Administration and on the President of the United States for negotiating a purchase of gold by the issue of the bonds of the United States, as it has been explained to us by his recent message.

It is impossible to do justice to that transaction, to do that ordinary and common justice which as Senators of the United States and as patriotic citizens we are bound to do the humblest public servant who is discharging a public duty, unless we understand something of the situation that was presented to the President of the United States when that negotiation was consummated, the details of which he has sent promptly to the Senate, and which we have now before us.

The President had devolved upon him by an expression of the legislative will more than once repeated that it was the policy of the United States Government in all its branches, executive as well as legislative, to preserve the parity between the two monetary metals of gold and silver. That duty was instant, it was constant; the President could not avoid it or evade it without a dereliction on his part that would have subjected him to the criticism and the animadversion, if not something worse, of the Congress of the United States and of the people of this country. There was no other mode, and I think it will be admitted on all sides that there is no other mode at the present time—whatever theory Senators may have in regard to the relation of gold and silver and the capacity of a readmission of silver to free coinage alone, to bring it up to a parity with gold—I say, it must be admitted that in the situation that then confronted the Administration, in order to perform that duty charged upon it by the Congress of the United States, the only thing it could do was to be ready at any time in the Treasury to maintain the absolute exchangeability of silver for gold, and to see to it that no demand should be made for either metal that was not instantly responded to by the fiscal agent of this great Government. If there is any other mode by which that parity could be preserved I have not heard it suggested.

The President has not sought to take this enormous and onerous responsibility on his own shoulders without the cooperation of the legislative branch of the Government. When we assembled here in December his message brought this matter to the attention of both Houses, and we were then called upon to come to the assistance of the Secretary of the Treasury in performing this grave duty and assisting to restore the disordered finances not only of the Government, but also of the country at large.

A bill was outlined in his message which was promptly brought before the House of Representatives, discussed, debated, and rejected. Again the President of the United States, in the stress that was brought upon him, appealed to Congress in the message, which we all recollect, of January 28, calling our attention, as he was in duty bound to call our attention, to the condition of disorder in the finances and business relations of this great country. He said, among other things:

It is hardly disputed that this predicament confronts us to-day.

That is where, with natural resources unlimited, our progress was checked by false financial policy and the heedless disregard of sound monetary laws.

Therefore, no one in any degree responsible for the making and execution of our laws should fail to take a patriotic duty in honestly and sincerely attempting to relieve the situation.

I do not think that the junior Senator from Massachusetts will find it in his heart to criticize that appeal as otherwise than a patriotic one.

Manifestly this effort will not succeed unless it is made untrammelled by the prejudices of party and without the least determination to resist the efforts to accomplish party advantage.

What view the Senator from Massachusetts to whom I have alluded takes of that expression I do not know, except so far as I am at liberty to infer from the tenor and tone of his remarks on Saturday. Whether he resisted that temptation the country will judge.

The real trouble which confronts us consists in a lack of confidence, widespread and constantly increasing, in the continuing ability or disposition of the Government to pay its obligations in gold. This lack of confidence grows to some extent out of the palpable and apparent embarrassment attending the efforts of the Government under existing laws to procure gold, and to a greater extent out of the impossibility of either keeping it in the Treasury or canceling obligations by its expenditure.

Mr. President, did I not there touch the very point of this difficulty? Did he not there allude to the very situation which we have made in his solemn duty to meet, to consider, and to redress?

Mr. STEWART. Will the Senator from Delaware allow me a question?

Mr. GRAY. Certainly.

Mr. STEWART. Does the Senator think that confidence in the ability of the United States to maintain financial independence will be augmented by hiring the protection of a foreign syndicate for a limited term at an enormous sacrifice?

Mr. GRAY. I am coming to that in a moment if the Senator will just wait. I heard the Senator say that on Saturday.

Mr. STEWART. It is going to be said again several times. It can not be said too often.

Mr. GRAY. The situation the President was called upon to deal with was just what he has stated, and I do not think any Senator will take issue with him as to the matter of fact, that—apparent embarrassment attending the efforts of the Government under existing laws to procure gold, and to a greater extent out of the impossibility of either keeping it in the Treasury or canceling obligations by its expenditure.

The only way left open to the Government for procuring gold is by the issue and sale of its bonds.

I think we will agree there.

The only bonds that can be so issued were authorized nearly twenty-five years ago, and are not well calculated to meet our present needs.

Secretary is greater than the discretion of Congress. That is no foundation for a motion on this subject. I am indifferent about the words of the bill, but why should not California have, by direction of Congress, an equal advantage in this appropriation with any other State? Will the Senator from Maryland and the Senator from Rhode Island tell me that? Why is it any different from an appropriation in the river and harbor bill that, for instance, the harbor of Baltimore shall be improved? If so, what is the difference?

Mr. GORMAN. The Senator asks me a question. I think he misapprehends my motive in this matter. I want to put all the States on an equality, and give to the Secretary of Agriculture $10,000 to make these experiments, without locating the place where it shall be expended.

Mr. CALL. The Senator from Maryland now says that he wants to leave to the discretion of the Secretary of War whether he will improve Baltimore Harbor or not, and he will not have Congress say that the Secretary shall apply the money there. That is the Senator's proposition now. There is no foundation for it.

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH] undertakes to ask about who owns this land. It is not material who owns it. The provision says the land shall be used by the Government. It is of no character no matter who owns it. What more do you want?

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. President, appreciate the kind words said by my friend from Florida in favor of this appropriation, and yet I am disposed to accept the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maryland and leave it to the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture. The only reason why I hesitate to do so is because of the amendment proposed by the Senator from Louisiana. He is the only one who made such a—

Mr. BLANCHARD. I beg the Senator's pardon. The Senator from Louisiana offered no amendment.

Mr. PERKINS. Then, I will refer to the speech of the Senator from Louisiana, made in favor of striking out the provision. This Government, if my memory serves me correctly, has appropriated more than a half million dollars for experiments in raising sugar in Louisiana. If I had had a vote at that time I should have voted for it, but the moment I brought forth incidentally the inference that California could be a rival of Louisiana in raising sugar as she is to-day in sugar, he could see no merit in the proposition to appropriate a few thousand dollars for experiments in the great valleys of the State of California. Yet, he forgets how much this Government has done, and wisely done in my opinion, in making experiments in Louisiana.

I have confidence, however, in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture, and I am willing, in the absence of my colleague [Mr. WAITE], to take the responsibility of accepting the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maryland and striking out of the clause that part relating specifically to experiments in San Joaquin or Sacramento Valley. That will satisfy my friend from Rhode Island [Mr. ALDRICH], and my friend from New Hampshire [Mr. CHANDLER], being of an amiable disposition, always acquiesces when we appeal to him as I now do. Therefore I hope it will be made unanimous, that the appropriation will stand, and I will take the chances of the Golden State getting her pro rata of the appropriation.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I rise for the purpose of asking the Senator from California when and where the Government has expended $500,000 in Louisiana for experiments in the manufacture of sugar under the item now under discussion?

Mr. PERKINS. Perhaps that was a lapsus linguae. I meant the whole country; but Louisiana means the whole country practically as to sugar raising, and now she wants a bounty from all of us.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I do not know of any money that has been expended in Louisiana—

Mr. PERKINS. If the Senator will read the report he will find it.

Mr. BLANCHARD. One moment. I do not know of any money which has been expended in Louisiana in the manufacture of sugar under the particular item of appropriation in the bill that is under discussion. If the Senator will turn to the next page, under the head of "Agricultural Experiment Stations," which is an entirely different matter, where experimental stations are established by the Government in the line of the act of Congress approved March 2, 1887, to establish agricultural experiment stations in connection with the colleges established in the several States, then I will say that in the agricultural experiment stations provided for by that clause money has been expended in Louisiana as it has been expended in the State of California. But I know of not a single dollar that has been expended in Louisiana for experiments in the manufacture of sugar under the particular item of appropriation in the bill that is now under discussion.

Mr. ALDRICH. I do not know that I correctly understood the Senator from Florida in the statement he has just made. I understood him to say that I had no right to offer the amendment; that it was not in order, and that I had no right to discuss it.

Mr. CALL. I never said anything about order.

Mr. ALDRICH. I so understood the Senator from Florida.

Mr. CALL. That is the province of the Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. ALDRICH. I do not know upon what ground the Senator based his suggestion.

Mr. CALL. I should not invade the province of the Senator from Rhode Island.
